No, Markie....

Telling people you are something that you are clearly NOT is a LIE!

You've not led me on one single goose chase, Markie!

You were never an officer in the Armed Forces. Period. You were never drafted. You are not being held hostage by a CO who refuses to let you resign despite your avowed perversions.

You've called the following people "lier" at one time or another:
Jim N2EY, Dave, Kim, Dee, Hans, Ed Hare, "Buzz Corey", Dick Carrol, Larry Roll, Jim Kehler, Mike Deighan, and of course, me. I count that as twelve, and that was just off the top of my head...I am sure that number would rise dramatically if I had your kind of lay-about time to do some research.

The intimate come-on nothwithstanding, the very content of the paragraph is obviously FALSE since Toiddie-mouth hasn't been able to overcome the simple task of filing an application correctly.

If the FCC resumed CB radio licensing, I seriously doubt that Toodles could fill that one out...I am still wondering how he got an 610 form by the FCC in crayon and who took the test for him...

His USENET rantings about his trials-and-tribulations with the FCC date back into the mid-90's...You'd think all that "experience" would have led to the desired licensure by now...

Another come-on followed up by yet another lie.

But obviously you DON'T use any of that college education you brag about getting.

A "duel" is a contest between two combatants. "Dual" refers to a combination of things.

> (UNSNIP)...(no computer burners but industy recording

A lie, no doubt.

Toiddie's been challenged to describe his "station" in detail, but has yet to do so. The post being responded to could have very easily included makes, manufacturers, etc, but only stated "commercial quality equipment". Even just a picture if the words are too difficult to use....

I say the snotty little punk has a bunch of hamfest leftovers stacked in a corner of the basement without a single clue as to how to get any of it running!

I have no doubt that Snotty will be the one to push the case law...then Amatuers will, in true knee-jerk FCC reaction, wind up losing yet another privilege...Just to sate the ego of one Junior DJ Wanna-Be.

How does one "diagnose" a drug to a person, Brain?

Perehaps you meant "prescribe"...?!?! (Of course you did...but you were more anxious to try and get the "dig" in rather than be accurate, so once again I got ya!)

But even then you'd STILL be wrong. But of course little things like facts don't get in your way. You ought to read up on what constitutes "prescribing" and "prescribing authority" as defined by the Drug Enfocement Agency.

(Better yet...ignore that...sure would hate to ruin the fun you've been having all-the-while making a fool out of yourself......)

Obviously I did...

Otherwise I might have difficulty making a fool out of you like I just did...

You laugh at the time of day, Markie.

HEY MIKE!

Thanks for stopping by! You've been missed, Brother!

As you can see, however, it's pretty much "business as usual"...Lennie still hates Amateur Radio. In the latest NPRM rounds he's managed no fewer than FIVE "I Am Smarter Than They Are" "reply comments", although he's paced back his rhetoric here.

Brian "The Brain" Burke, N0IMD is still Lennie's yes man and Lead Sock Puppet. Not much I can say about Brain...He's still as brainless as ever.

Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ, is back and is as much the illiterate clown as he ever was. Now his "schtick" is to try and intimidate me with the suggestion that he's going to get the Tennessee State Board of Nursing to pull my LPN card because he doesn't like the way I talk to him here!

New into the fray is Todd "I AM NOT GAY" Dougherty, N9OGL. Todd alleges to be a college student in Illinois...Ironically less than an hour from where Markie USED to live...He also is the new "I Wanna Be K1MAN" idiot on the Amatuer airways. Todd promotes a "show" on 20 meter phone and brags about his "commercial grade" audio gear...but can't seem to name any of it. BTW...Todd is almost 40 years old and living in mommy and daddy's basement.

And crossing over from rec.radio.cb on semi-frequent occassion is "Frank Gilliland". Like Lennie, Frankie's not an Amatuer, but, like me, he used to be an Active Duty US Marine...

UNLIKE me he managed to get court martialed not once, but TWICE in ONE four year hitch! However he knows "the lingo", so tries to help out the rest of the gang which I have since christened The Feeble Five. He insists that his open and willful acknowledgement of his trials makes it "OK" to ahve lied to his country. He calls me "Gunny Dudly" and has tried to insinuate that since I was able to get an EMT card in my off duty time in the Corps, that I obviously wasn't a "real" (read that "Active Duty") Marine. I am still trying to shake that laugh off.

Hope all is well your way. It's a beautiful fall day here...

<SNIP>
And like most Mr Toad, you should learn that in Australia "Ashley" is a guy's name ONLY, Ashleigh for gals down under, mate, so all the 'honey' , 'babe' and 'toots' references must mean you, as a guy, see me, a guy, as a babe. Aarrgghh! I'm gonna spew....bucket pls

It's also disappointing to see that as you assumed I was female, rather than referring to me by name, callsign, or anything (even an insult)it's 'babe' 'toots' etc. How about some respect for the fairer sex, last time I went out with a girl she happened to have a name and it wasn't Babe or Toots. That kind of language to female operators is usually confined to the 27MHz Chook Band down under. No wonder there ain't many 'toots' or 'babes' on the ham bands, I'm sure they'd rather be called by their name or callsign than "QSL that babe". Amateur Radio is supposed to sound professional, not like a high school yard at lunchtime or CB bands. Or at least, use ma'am, madam, mrs, miss or Ms. There are salutations for a reason, please learn to use them!

Mr Toad, sure, whilst recently licensed as an amateur (1/5/05), my family heritage is all radio. My Pop was Darwin's WW2 Signal Corp Sarge for Aust and US Military, my uncle was a Viet Vet from our Signal Corps (I still have his radio from Viet Nam on the air to this day),I used to work at D24 (Victoria's police radio centre, now known as VPC or Tally Ho), and also did the radio since I was fifteen for the local fire brigade after school, and yes I used CB for years, still do, but I wouldn't even know how to tune up on 10m FM would I? Oh, and I first got interested in radio at 10yo during JOTA, and have been ever since, but you know that you know more/less than me-or anyone else-how? We are all qualified hams, meaning we all should have the same/similar quals and same knowledge to an extent.

Or is it a case of "Anything you can do I can do better..I can do anything better than you.." Yes I can...No You Can't..Yes I Can...Yes I Can"

In the real world, there's plenty (read most) of hams who know much more than me...I can learn from these people and hopefully pass it on yet again when I am more knowledgeable and much older. I'm also sure there'd be one or two things I know well that I could teach others. We can all learn from each other every day. I look to all our Old Timers for help and advice on many areas, (learning CW for instance) sometimes I've helped a few OT's connect with overseas stations via IRLP as they sometimes have difficulty working it out. I have three choices: Ignore them, help them or bag them. I'm sure that most would agree that help them would be the best option. It's not about me being better or knowing more or less than them, it's about helping a fellow ham end of story, regardless of all else. In ham radio we should all look to each other as equals who all have an equal amount of knowledge to contribute to our hobby.

To assume you can't learn from someone else, anyone else is a big mistake, and your loss. Whilst I hate to say it, I'm sure that there is one or two things that I've learn from you Mr Todd, and more I could learn, you need to accept that the same applies , both ways-to every other living human being on this planet, except you it seems.

Still, the FCC doesn't control the content, but it does control how it travels, so it could still find you guilty of using 'x' medium to send 'x' message, but it couldn't prosecute you for the content, it could prosecute you for the transmission. Reality tells me, that if you made a threat, said something illegal, it doesn't matter how it traveled, snail mail, pots, mobile, sms, fax whatever you still made the statement, the medium being irrelevant. If I ring you and threaten to kill you, I'd bet I could be charged, therefore to some extent the content of that telephone call is regulated isn't it? Oh sorry, if I rang up and made that threat, the police would say 'Sorry can't help ya we can't do much about the content of that telephone call." Is that right Mr Todd?

Seeing they ain't regulate web content Toady, why don't ya start a terror-cell website and see how long you and the content last...not long I bet. So if that's the case, then to some extent the content is regulated isn't it?

...hopping off now on my 'roo to work, I'm going "Kangaroo Mobile" to call CQ DX on 14.321.00 MHz. Who wants to be the first US station to work a VK "Kangaroo Mobile?"

And in 'our language' for you Mr Todd, "I am not a bloody shiela, mate!"

How do you know that all people here are morons? Haven't you learn how to command the English language enough to debate and 'have a dig' at others without resorting to insults?

Oh shit, so your another US wannabe lawyer driving a taxi or delivering pizza's right now huh? Are you sure your name is Todd, not Lionel Hutz, "Cases won or ya pizza's free!" (Apologies to Matt Groening)

And you would know my age, my quals, how long I've been qualified and how long I've been interested in radcomms from? how?

> Whatever toots, go back to playing with your kangaroos

You can play with kangaroos if you are that damn stupid. Don't you know (obviously not) that roo's are great kickboxers, and if they see you as a threat they will either (a) hop off or (b) kick-box the shit out of you (yes, ppl have been 'murdered' by 'roos.) It's why our 'sporting flag' has the Boxing Kangaroo. Only a pissed idiot after a night at the pub would attempt to play with a kangaroo, remembering that Kangaroo's have flattened semi's and killed their driver's at high speed. An animal that can crush a Jeep in one hop...and you think we ride and play with them. Idiot. They are great to watch, from a distance in the open plains of Oz, but I certainly wouldn't have one as a pet. You'd be surprised to learn of the injuries sustained, time and time again, by the cast and crew of the "Skippy" TV series and how much 'roos contribute to our road toll.

I think you need a good long swim in the water of Darwin, NT. You could pat the crocs while ya swim too!

Remember Todd, "it's OK, I'm Australian." and that both our legal system and yours, whilst different in content are both based solely on the British Westminster System, meaning many principles are the same, just different interpretations of it. As we say here, "I'll bare my arse in Bourke St if the FCC can't prosecute you, for say, using the "F" word on air." If they can, then they do regulate the content, don't they?

....Keeping the N/G Entertained....while I head off for a giant beer...

Cheers & Beers America from Down Under..hope to work ya'll on air one day soon....

You're right, Mark. You're more like a current cartoon-style character
"rediced" to playing a buffoon on r.r.a.p.

You believe that Space Patrol was a cartoon show?

How can I "lie" to Michigan, Markie?

You claim you intend to file a "report" with the Tennessee State

Do you not think YOUR words are as equally damaging to you and your "status" in the eyes of state social workers at various agencies?

If so, that IS blatant delusional behaviour on YOUR part!

WELL THE SOUTH SIDE OF GLEN DALE IS THE FAGGOT SIDE OF TOWN AND IF YOU GO DOWN THERE YOU BEST BEWARE OF A PUNK NAMED WOGER WISEMAN

NOW WOGER IS A FAGGOT STAND ABOUT 5 FOOT FOUR
ALL THE DOWNTOWN JOHNS CALL HIM LOOSE SPHINCTER LOVER
HIS MOTHER CALL HIM 'HOE

CHORUS AND IT'S BAD BAD WOGER WISEMAN
THE BADDEST PUNK IN THE WHOLE CELL BLOCK
BADDER THAN RICHARD SIMMONS AND FATTER THAN NAT KING COLE

NOW WOGER HE'S A PUSSY
AND HE LIKES HIS PURPLE CLOTHES
HE LIKES TO WEAR HIS FISHNET HOSE, UNDER EVERYONE'S NOSE
HE GOT CUSTOM PINK PANTIES
HE GOT A FRENCH TICKLE TOO
HE GOT A 32 INCH DILDO IN HIS POCKET FOR FUN
A VIBRATOR IN HIS SHOE

(REPEAT CHORUS)

NOW FRIDAY 'BOUT A WEEK AGO
WOGER SUCKIN' DICK
AND AT THE END OF THE YARD
SAT A BROTHER NAMED BINKIE AND OO THAT GUY LOOKED NICE WELL HE CAST HIS EYES UPON HIM AND THE TROUBLE SOON BEGAN CAUSE WOGER LEARNED A LESSON
BOUT MESSIN' WITH A PUNK OF A JEALOUS BITCH

WELL THE PUNKS TOOK TO BITCH SLAPPIN' AND WHEN THEY PULLED THEM FROM THE BED
ROGER'S LARD ASS LOOKED LIKE A BLOODY PUZZLE WITH AN EXTRA HOLE!

(REPEAT CHORUS)

It was twenty years ago today,
Roger Wiseman forced the boys to be gay
He's been going in and outa their rears
And he's made them into ravin' queers.
So watch out or I'll force on you
The act we've hated all these years,
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.

We're Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band, Disciples of the Bucktoothed Choad,
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band,
Sit back and watch us shoot a load.
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound, Roger Wiseman's Greyhound, Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.
It's wonderful to be here,
But Wiseman's full of crap,
The dirty goddamn pederast:
That fucker gave us syphilis,
That fucker gave us clap.

I don't really want to stop the show,
But I thought you had all better know,
That Wiseman's going to play a song,
On a stickpin that he stuck through his schlong.
So let me introduce to you
The one and only Bucktoothed Choad
And Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.

He goes under the stained sheets and he turns off all the lights
So beat it, Lloydie, just beat it.

He's got his shemale tapes, he's got a few gay porn DVDs
He's got the Daleks, he never needs real pussy!
The time is right, I'd better use the pics on the PC
So beat it, choke your dick like it owes you money!

Lloydie will Just beat it, beat it

But Len discards/discounts comments from non-US citizens and here you are suggesting that ET living on Alpha Centauri has a stake in this NRPM???? Len will tell the FCC to ignore comments from ET.

But ET probably can't talk to us on HF anyhow because of the heliopause, so he doesn't care about the code test. If you want to talk to him I recommend you QSY to a frequency up near the waterhole, perhaps just tune around between the hydrozal and hydrogen lines. That's nocode territory, so you're good to go.

That sure brought back some memories, I remember laying on a warm rock over by Hollister Pond near Keney Cove, falling-out-drunk on a bottle and a half of TJ Swann's "Mellow Days" wine and digging the mellow grooves of the R.W.G.M.R.B. In a weird coincidence, I now keep all my worldly possessions in a locker at the Glendale Greyhound Station,
and I thought for sure I still had a copy of the R.W. Band's landmark '67 album. I dug it out, and after close examination of the famous photo-
montage cover, I spotted pre-stardom head-shots of Jeff "The Felching Gourmet" Smith , "Toesicle" Eddie Murphy, Dickbleed and Boy, and L. Ron Blubbard. My copy is in VG+ condition, on rare spewtum-colored vinyl; what do you think it's worth?

gee I ahve written scuh letters none of my neight sem to think so a couple would like to burn me at statke for one in which I said the world was coming to a sudden firery end if Gay were allowed to marry and I got pretty good reveiws on one where I said the 10 comenedants had their place just not in public school

but the question which you choose to misunderstand was why should I write a letter to editor localy about Dave iiiight.

you too

by my religious standard you and everyone else in the NG is a prevert by being either Homo or Heterosexual, by defining the ability to love soley based on what is between one legs you defile the very principles of nature and of the devine

by the first amendant I am allowed to believe it unlike you and dave I dont go around demanding that anyone else confrom to my religious standards

you would be fired, however your being fired is not my goal, it would be side effect one indeed that I would regret since it would give you more time to hang here

what I want is justice.

in your case true justice would be your being behind bars withe rumour put outthere that you are pedophile and child killer but they could trump up some minor charge due to lack of evidence, then the prisons would show the dangers created with false claims of child abuse and pedophilia. That IMO would be justice for you. forunately there is zero chance of your getting that treatment.

Faling that there IS Justice IMO in the happnestance of the man who claims he will not tolerate lying being punished in any way for lying

I don't believe you to be rational, Mark, but I'm not afraid of you.

Right. Lots of people get their medical information from some guy

My mistake. Perhaps your claim about turning down "240k" has a built-in fudge factor. You didn't say what the "k" was. Perhaps it was 240k dimes.

"Yoou two carries"? Phew! I've never asked for any special

I didn't write "for life", Mark. I wrote "in life". Remember, you're supposed to be the fellow the 248 IQ. The two terms are quite different.

Why are you babbling about calling 911 and someone holding a gun to someone's head? Is the object of your posting here to communicate your thoughts to others? If it is, you aren't doing a very good job of it. One would think that you'd do all in your power to make your posts as well written and concise as possible. You don't do so.

Okay, I'm telling you that Steve didn't provide you the name, address and telephone number of his employer or of the employer's supervising organization. I refuse to be held to a different standard. Go to work.

The result may be that you ending up with your ass in a crack. We shall see. Enough of that. Your current problem is to find out who and where my employer is. Then you'll need to find out who to contact in order to point out that I've belittled and made fun of you. Be sure to tell them that I see you as a liar and a pervert. Let them know that I refuse to be politically correct in dealing with you. Good luck with your jihad.

I don't find it ironic. Carl was apparently found qualified for one and unqualified for the other. The PROFESSIONAL organization and the AMATEUR organization aren't the same. He could GET ON the ballot for one and couldn't GET ON the ballot for the other.

Since the comment phase is now officially closed I was only asking if anyone knew of any new arguments filed in support of code testing. Jim N2EY gave us one...but, now that I think about it, he never actually said that he or anyone else actually submitted that argument as actual comments to the NPRM.

My opinion, we ain't gonna see anything new beyond Jim's rather weak addition...which may not even by an actual submission. I'll give the folks a week or so per your suggestion "old friend".

He goes under the stained sheets and he turns off all the lights
So beat it, Lloydie, just beat it.

He's got his shemale tapes, he's got a few gay porn DVDs
He's got the Daleks, he never needs real pussy!
The time is right, I'd better use the pics on the PC
So beat it, choke your dick like it owes you money!

Lloydie will Just beat it, beat it

Notice that Jimmie worded his sentence about "congratulations" to NOT SPECIFICALLY SAY that J. P. Miccolis congratulated him.
Gives the impression, the implication that he did without committing his name to some "fact."

Jimmie has lots of troubles. Like telling EXACTLY what he does for a living as a "professional."

Heh hehe. Last time I mentioned "Jim Fixx," Jimmie did NOT seem to know who that person was.

Fixx was an author of at least one best-selling book on RUNNING.

Claimed it "prevented heart problems." Fixx died while running, of a heart attack. Ironic.

If the hierarchy of ARRL doesn't want someone anywhere close to their entrenched POWER, that's it.

In 2003 Dave Sumner pulled down an annual salary of $137,558 plus $9,239 in Benefits plus $7,829 in "expenses." [source: ARRL federal income tax returns for 2003 filed in 2004] Not bad for being an executive vice president and "secretary."
That's higher than most managers in the electronics industry.
It's understandable that such would be very protective of their income.

In 2003 ARRL had 23 paid positions making over $50,000 a year.
Only 10 of those were listed on the IRS returns for 2003.
Not bad for a supposedly altruistic membership organization of only 145 thousand members supposedly "representing" all 700+ thousand United States radio amateurs. Like they make "no profit" from their many books and other publications...

If ARRL loses membership, loses sales, well, there goes the income. "It's all about the money with them" might fit as Jimmie likes to put it...

>> >btw, it is interesting to note the name of Carl's firm.
>> Why? Because he has one and you do not?

Jimmie probably thinks amateur radio terms are somehow "copyrighted" and MUST NOT EVER be used in business.

Sort of like "QST," "CQ," "73," and "W5YI Group."

Jimmie now preparing to argue that I am "mistaken."
ARRL "invented" the Q-code QST...73 went out of business, W5YI Group "doesn't like morse code" (they teach it anyway). Don't know what Jimmie will call "CQ" since they are a magazine competitor to QST...but he will no doubt say they are "lower class" or something like that...

>> You know damn well that Carl got tossed off the nomination sheet >> due to his being Executive Director of No Code International.
>> ARRL doesn't want no-coders. ARRL wants only those "acceptible" >> to the BoD hierarchy.

ARRL has a VIRTUAL monopoly on United States amateur radio publications. Has had that for years. Beautiful vehicle for conditioning the thinking of United States radio amateurs.
George Orwell coined the term "big brother." That fits the ARRL too.

Brian, he might have been on a cruise to Hawaii since...:-)

Watch out, Brian, that may bring back the "university lecturer" to LECTURE everyone on "giving respect to law-abiding Extras."

Worse yet, he might repeat that story about "hearing a sinking

Your reading comprehension is a bad as ever, Len.

Then let me say it another way:

I and many others sent him our congratulations.

Is that clear enough for ya?

"CQ" magazine. "73" magazine. "ham radio" magazine. Bash books.
Gordon West publications. "Worldradio" publications. Ameco publications.
W5YI.

Etc.

I might be in for a suprise but I can see how Stevie or BoN can claim that who I may have sex with allows Stevie to say I have AIDS not always the US is better about it than most nation but I believe that the US is still imperfect, and liekly always will be to some extent.

I also know that one of the areas in which the US most often shows its imperfections is in the treatement of those of its people that are
"defferent" in some way

Why? I am as credible as Stevie or you.

you lie you have lied within the past 24 hrs about my claims as to income

Stevie has lied he has said I have aids, that I engage in unpropected sex, that I have admited to child mosting

we are on the same footing

that is one of the 2 issues for the BoN to decide

I would say Yes, as soon as he claims he is making a PROFESSION opinion
he is acting in medical capcity

as soon as HE gives medical advice to people that KNOW he is an LPN is is as soon as he claims to have used the materail here to act professionaly he is the BoN will make its ruling and act accordingly

If I am right Stevie will suffer some kind of scantion, he may lose his license

if Stevie is right nothing will happen to him and no harm done that is the problem you and Stevie take a statement, apply a host of

First I'll try to deal with Stevie

he has a license to revoke you don't further becuase of his licnese he more dangerous to me in my judegment, futher still dealing with Stevie liecense which he uses to obtain criedbilty will alos lessen yours to say much the same thing

Addtionaly I have a plan that I hope will deal Stevie a suitable other yes, not realy you or Stevie though, or Dee Flint

My target is the lurker population out there you and the rest are idea and text to play and use to help me make my point to my target

yes I have said so many times

no but you asked the worng question

I find it desirable that those that choose to read it find laborious to read

Indeed my motive amusingly goes right to haert of a ProCode arguement
"if you don't work it for you don't value it" therefore since being rough to read is easier path for me anyway by going with that flow I feel i reach a segement that is receptive the No Coder PoV and isn't geting it from the easier to read spokes people that my foes also find it hard to read I find yet an added Bonus exactly glad you agree or more precisely nothing is ALWAYS good or bad, even murder myhem, have their proper uses the problem with murder is not that it is never a good thing, it is that it is used in far too many cases where it is a bad thing

wrong again

I want the regs changed to reflect what I see as the best interests of the ARS

Judging by the fact NoCode is about to prevail It is about a lot more

One day, while a woodcutter was cutting a branch of a tree above a river, his axe fell into the river. When he cried out, the Lord appeared and asked, "Why are you crying?"

The woodcutter replied that his axe has fallen into water, and he needed the axe to make his living.

The Lord went down into the water and reappeared with a golden axe.

"Is this your axe?" the Lord asked.

The woodcutter replied, "No."

The Lord again went down and came up with a silver axe.

"Is this your axe?" the Lord asked.

Again, the woodcutter replied, "No."

The Lord went down again and came up with an iron axe.

"Is this your axe?" the Lord asked.

The woodcutter replied, "Yes."

The Lord was pleased with the man's honesty and gave him all three axes to keep, and the woodcutter went home happy.

Some time later the woodcutter was walking with his wife along the riverbank, and his wife fell into the river.

When he cried out, the Lord again appeared and asked him, "Why are you crying?"

"Oh Lord, my wife has fallen into the water!"

The Lord went down into the water and came up with Jennifer Lopez.

"Is this your wife?" the Lord asked.

"Yes," cried the woodcutter.

The Lord was furious. "You lied! That is an untruth!"

The woodcutter replied, "Oh, forgive me, my Lord. It is a misunderstanding. You see, if I had said 'no' to Jennifer Lopez, You would have come up with Catherine Zeta Jones. Then if I said 'no' to her, you would have come up with my wife. Had I then said 'yes,' you would have given me all three. Lord, I am a poor man, and am not able to take care of all three wives, so THAT'S why I said yes to Jennifer

The moral of this story is: Whenever a man lies, it is for a good and honorable reason, and for the benefit of others.

That's their story, and they're sticking to it! - "IT OK FOR MARK AND STEVE TO LIE --- THEY ARE HONORABLE MEN !!!!!!"..

965. Getting Down To The Wire

Getting down to the wire on WT Docket 05-235!

As of 5 PM EST on 10 November, there have been a total of 3,760 filings since 15 July 2005.

Of those, 3,703 were filed up to and including 31 August 2005, the official end of Comments. However, since the Federal Register notice of NPRM 05-143 wasn't made until 31 August, the official Comment period is from 31 August to 31 October. There were 1,721 filings made within the official Comment period.

The official Replies to Comments period is from 31 August to 14 November. In the period 1 November to 10 November, there have been 57 filings, only 9 of which are official (clearly indicated as Replies to Comments). All 9 Replies are FOR the NPRM. The official end of Replies to Comments is on Monday, 14 November 2005.

So far, there is no clear-cut consensus of any group for or against code-testing, nor for the in-betweeners wanting code testing for extras but allowing "lower" classes to be code test free. The percentage of filings just "of the amateur community" is only 0.82 to 0.29 percent of the total number of licensees, depending on who sets the judging criteria.*

Before the official start of Comments (31 Aug 05), filings FOR the NPRM were running about 2:1 in favor versus those against dropping all code testing. At the end of the official Comment period the ratio of dropping ALL code testing versus keeping some code testing was about 1:1. Of all 57 filings made after 31 August, all 9 official Replies to Comments were FOR the NPRM and ending all code testing; 4 were against the ARRL Comment of 31 Oct 05.

There are only four days left to make REPLIES to Comments on WT Docket 05-235. Ordinary Comments will be unofficial since the Comment period has expired.

* As of 10 Nov 05, www.handata.com shows 723,888 total individual licensees in U.S. amateur radio (less 9,757 club calls). Compared to about 3,471 total filings that are not duplicates of the same individual saying the same thing, the percentage of 3471 / 723888 = 0.82 percent. If only 5/6 of all 723,888 licensees are "valid" (within their 10-year term and not in the 2-year grace period), then total number of "valid, operable" individual licensees would be 603,240.

Given that there were only 1,730 filings made WITHIN the OFFICIAL period then the percentage of filings to total "amateur community" is 1730 / 603240 = 0.29 percent. One can go nuts in establishing "correct criteria" without determining anything of specific value. A slice of only about a single percent as to the opinion of "the amateur community" isn't a good statistical sampling of the opinion of ALL.

 The 5/6 value assumes that 1/6 of all licensees are IN their grace period. It would be erroneous to accept that since most living/able licensees renew BEFORE their 10-year license terms are up. The total number of licensees with valid (able to operate legally) licenses would be larger.
Compounding that is the fact of last year's license numbers (at hamdata) showing 17,003 expirations versus 16,933 new licenses granted in the preceding year. The amateur radio total license numbers have remained very static for the last 2 years and several months.

 FCC does not consider just those filings from licensed radio amateurs to reach a decision on an NPRM. If it did accept just those in the "clubhouse," then those individuals not licensed would not be mentioned in Reports and Orders.
They are. All those who submitted filings on WT Docket 05-235 did so voluntarily and there are NO sampling rules available to set any accuracy of results of a small sampling of any opinion.

WRONG. It is excellent.

Jimmie, YOUR MISTAKE was using vague adjectives as descriptors.

"Many of us" does NOT specifically include YOU.

You know that very well. Or did, once the Nuns spanked your knuckles.

Try as you might, you aren't going to win message points by manufacturing falsehoods or even brags about your writing ability, the ones where you CLAIM to have said something when you OBVIOUSLY did NOT do so.

Did you get a "group hug" together or what? :-)

Not really. All you've done is just more MISDIRECTION, trying to avoid having obvious errors pointed out to you by saying someone else "did wrong."

Now HOW DID YOU KNOW Carl was elected to anything? :-)

Don't give us some fogware bullshit about "you knew." The results of the IEEE election were sent by private e-mail to IEEE members on the same day as I posted the results.

You are NOT an IEEE member. I am a Life Member of the IEEE.

I will not expect any cogent answer from you. I will expect

Some plain and simple facts:

1) As of November 9, 2005, the number of individuals holding current, unexpired FCC amateur radio licenses is 663,382.

2) Of those individuals who are interested enough in the issues to comment, a clear majority want the Morse Code test for General to be removed.

3) Of those individuals who are interested enough in the issues to comment, a clear majority want the Morse Code test for Extra to be retained.

4) FCC is not required to follow the majority of comments or other opinions, regardless of how large the majority is. FCC is only required to consider the commentary, not act on it.

You don't give "cogent answers", Len.

By the way, when WK3C was trying to get on the ballot for ARRL Director from the Atlantic Division, there were a number of people who tried to get the ARRL BoD and Executive Committee to allow him to run.

Guess who some of those people were.

why do you hams bother with a license?
the Tenth Ammendment clearly allows anyone to operate any radio without a license on any frequency at anytime or place.

Message-ID: <rkUcf.14442$Hj2.6884@news-server.bigpond.net.au>
Source record: 123544

1. Except, N9OGL, that all my emails come from an ISP address, (vk3hag at nerg dot asn dot au) not Yahoo-ever. I have a vk3hag@yahoo.com account, but haven't even logged onto it for more than a year or sent email from it since 1/5/05. In fact I am logging onto it right now for the first time since January this year. I have another, undisclosed Yahoo acct that I've used since January, without exception and it's why this message appeared when I logged in to the acct "vk3hag@yahoo.com" just now for the first time in 11 months which read:

---
Why is my account inactive?

Yahoo! Mail deactivated your mail account because:

* You have not logged into your mail account during the past four months; or
* You have requested that Yahoo! Mail deactivate your account.

What does this mean?

* All email messages, folders, attachments and preferences have been deleted and cannot be recovered.
* All messages sent to vk3hag@yahoo.com are being returned to the sender.
* You can still use your Yahoo! ID to access other registered services on Yahoo!.

If someone else on this n/g would like my log-in details for Yahoo, so I can prove that the post didn't come from me would be gr8, thx. I didn't go past the log-in screen.

2. So, either someone has logged into Yahoo as me to send you a post (I doubt it) or you sent a post from 'me' to you yourself , to try and justify your stupidity by making me out as a potty-mouthed idiot. I suspect Mt Todd, you posted that post yourself

3. I don't use foul language and potty mouthed statements to make a point...I prefer to use my good command of the English language to much better effect.

4. Besides seeing thier 'tag' in ng posts I have never heard of or spoken to AB8MQ, Roger Wiseman or anyone else in the States, as I'm sure they'll agree with.

5. The only emails I have sent to you or n/g was my original post, plus yesterday's reply.

6. Todd, In Australia, Ashley is a guy's name ONLY...I ain't a bloody shiela.

7. If I was going to post something potty, I would have called you a bloody poofta, faggot, queer, gay, for calling me a babe and toots when I'm a guy, wouldn't I?

8. If anyone else here would like to log in to my Yahoo Acct I'd be happy to let them (email vk3hag at nerg dot asn dot au)

9. At the time of the post (converting PST to AEDST) it was early morning our time, my pc was off and I was in bed asleep. I've heard of sleepwalking...but never sleepposting...perhaps it's a new thing.

10. Unlike the USA, all content of ALL mediums is regulated in Australia and that post could see me charged with "Making threats of violence" which carries a five-year gaol term. Which means that I can either ignore it at my own peril or immediatly make a report to the authorities, informing them of what is going on before they come asking, I chose the latter. (And yes, they will and do come knocking here!)

11. As I am 200% certain I didn't make that post, if the authorites did try to charge me, whomever made that post would find themselves being either tried in the US for it or sent to Australia to face the charges. You have been warned. Remember, Australia & US have recipricol agreements in many areas..including law. Ever heard of INTERPOL Todd?

12. If you did post that email to yourself Mr Todd, you have just been caught hacking my account....should I report this to USA authorities too ? Or just let the Aussie ones deal with it. How funny that would be Todd charged in the US by Australia! It seems now, Mr Todd, that authorities in countries other than your own want you to 'help them with their inquiries' oh dear!!

13. I thought N9OGL might have been clever enough to debate normally, but no instead he has to hack into my old, unused Yahoo Acct and make a stupid post appear as if I sent it.

N9OGL did achieve something. He has allowed me to see who the genuine people here are and who are the wankers. To be honest, I thought some of the other guys (woger, k4yz etc) here may have been wrong and that they were the rude ones and you Todd were just defending yourself. However, sicne you had to hack into my email account and be a dickhead it just proved beyond any reasonable doubt that what others here say about you would be at least 95% accurate, the only liar, cheat here being you, Mr Todd.

You just had a chance Mr Todd to prove your not the idiot, and ya blew it. I thought, maybe this Todd guy is all right, perhaps just misunderstood. I was totally wrong, you have just proven yourself to be one of the biggest wankers I have ever seen in my entire life.

14. The conclusion of that is, whatever I said I must have hit the nail right on the head as you had to quickly find a way, any way, to try and discredit me, but you couldn't discredit what I had said in my posts through reasoned debate so you resort to childish behaviour and computer hacking.

15. If it wasn't you N9OGL, I sincerly apologise, but who the hell else would need or want to hack into my account to discredit me on this group, no one I suspect as I've never debated with anyone here but yourself and K1MAN as it is, and I'm sure the other guy's on here wouldn't hack into my account to send ya a message, they'd just send it from thier normal email addy.

16. So I sent an email from vk3hag@yahoo.com, which is an INACTIVE account..meaning it doesn't send or rx mail and hasn't for months.

17. If I can prove it was you Mr Todd who illegally used (read hacked into) an Australian-based email address you can expect a visit from the FCC on behalf of the Australian FCC (ACMA) with whom a formal complaint has already been lodged for hacking of my email account. So you might have gotten away with it doing it to usa-based n/g users, but to do the same actvities to Australians, from Australian-based Yahoo Accounts (yes, our ACMA confirmed that it's an Australian Yahoo address and therefore comes under our jurisdiction and our laws apply.) could see you charged. Check the web, plenty of Aussie citizens, corporations etc have already being charged for similar offences, even whilst doing so off-shore. Might have dug yaself a bit of hole there, mate.

18. The only down side is you'd probably be extradited to Australia for trial and I ain't want ya any bloody where near this country when you can be kept over a hemisphere away.... (Sorry to the 'normal' other guys on here)

19. Ever since an incident in Australia with some idiot who hacked into NASA years ago our ACMA and your FCC have worked together. That hacker was arrested, in Australia, by Aussie Police and 2 FCC Officials. Our ACMA, with US permission*, could arrest you in America. You have been warned.

*Given how much Mr Bush loves Mr Howard, I'd reckon the US would give the ACMA permission, do you?

Looking forward to calling CQ DX on 14.321 this Saturday. Now Mr Toad, wherever you go I may appear to...oops....

Ya good at making enemies real quick aren't ya.......What this world needs is not a war on terror but a war on wankers like Todd.

I am a radio professional. I was granted a First Class Radiotelephone (Commercial) radio operator license in 1956 and kept it renewed.

I've been a professional in radio since 1953, beginning with HF communictions.

I've been a hobbyist in electronics as well, beginning in 1947. Still am.

BTW, "electronics" INCLUDES radio. Radio is a subset within all of electronics.

Have you been an editor of an amateur radio specialty publication? I was an Associate Editor at Ham Radio magazine.
[look on the mastheads]

Jimmie say I have "smallest johnson ever made." Not nice.

My johnson all natural ingredients, not manufactured.

nope the supremacy clause applies first

It goes that treaties are the supreme law of the land now prior to the ITU treaty ( or what ever what is now called the ITU treaty was caled then) I would agree the 10th likwely applies only the elsatic clause could apply to Ham radio certainly not the comerece clause (Comerce law was use to regulate the ARS at first but I beleiev that was legaly incorrect

but importantly the FCC holds the power of the gun so to speak wether the FCC is in or out of its constitutional power for the present IT hold the power to enforce liecnsure of the ARS

This is SCARY SHIT folks !!

Quoting from the above link:

"Among a fringe community of paranoids, aluminum helmets (tinfoil hats) serve as the protective measure of choice against invasive radio signals. We investigate
the efficacy of three aluminum helmet designs on a sample group of four individuals. Using a $250,000 network analyser, we find that although on average all helmets attenuate invasive radio frequencies in either directions (either emanating from an outside source, or emanating from the cranium of the subject), certain frequencies are in fact greatly amplified.
These amplified frequencies coincide with radio bands reserved for government use according to the Federal Communication Commission (FCC).
Statistical evidence suggests the use of helmets may in fact enhance the government's invasive abilities. We theorize that the government may in fact have started the helmet craze for this reason..."

First off you piece of shit, and let me tell me tell right now I have more repect for a piece of feces then I do for you. To start, I'm sorry for the name thing, but you've got to understand that over here Ashley is strictly a FEMALE NAME. The male counterpart is ASH, If you don't believe me I'll be more then happy then to send you a fucking baby name book and you can see for your fucking self. I went to school with four ashley's and they were all fucking FEMALE. I'll would of explained it too you nicely but no you had to be a fucking prick, so now I'm going to be a fucking prick. Secondly no one hacked your account at yahoo, if you could read the header it came from blogger.com, which is owned by google. For at the lease past year K4YZ and I have been recieving this "hate mail" from blogger.com. it was so bad that k4yz had me removed from the internet because of these "fake" emails. So go ahead and call INTERPOL, I'll be more then happy to talk to them and directed them to those fucking assholes at google's then perhaps all this shit will stop. Google's has it to where they put sites up or buys sites and don't do anything with them in regards to control. (for example on blogger.com google's could but up something on their out going mail that gives the senders real ip address, something they don't have) google can stop it but don't, just like this newsgroup, i'm using google's and they don't control any of the content as a matter of fact unless you spam a newsgroup really bad they won't do squat. Then i'll send google's for having me kicked of the interent with those fake emails.
That's all I have to say to you spat.

You can't address the issue? Did anyone ever tell you that you had the highest tested IQ on the planet? Perhaps you need a little more time to polish the follow up lie.

Here's some data for you ( from http://www.audiblox.com/iq_scores.htm )

IQ Description % of Population
130+ Very Superior 2.2
120-129 Superior 6.7
110-119 High Average 16.1
90-109 Average 50
80-89 Low Average 16.1
70-79 Borderline 6.7

from: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Marilyn_vos_Savant

"Marilyn vos Savant (born August 11, 1946) is an American magazine columnist, author, lecturer, and playwright who rose to fame through her listing in the Guinness Book of World Records under "Highest IQ". Since 1986 she has written Ask Marilyn, a Sunday column in Parade magazine in which she answers questions from readers on a variety of subjects..."

"...Her Stanford-Binet score is discussed in a 1989 New York magazine article by Julie Baumgold (Baumgold 1989). Marilyn took the Stanford-Binet when she was ten years old; this was the Second Edition of the test, published in 1937. The Stanford-Binet at that time yielded ratio IQs: scores obtained by dividing mental age (as assessed by the test) by chronological age, and multiplying by 100. Marilyn says she first took the test in September 1956, at the age of 10 years and 0 months, and achieved the ceiling mental age of 22 years and 10 months, yielding an IQ of 228. This was the score listed by Guinness, this is the score she gives in interviews, and this is the score shown in the "About the Author" section of her books. Rounding it up produces the value of 230 which sometimes appears."

"The figure of 167+ comes from a school record cited by Baumgold indicating that Marilyn took the Stanford-Binet in March 1957, at the age of 10 years and 8 months, and achieved a mental age of "17-10+" (meaning at least 17 years and 10 months). It is unclear how the recorded chronological age was derived; dates in March are 6 or 7 months from her August birthday, not 8. It is also unclear how this record relates to the account given in the previous paragraph. The Stanford-Binet at that time had two forms (Form L and Form M), so one possibility is that Marilyn took the test twice."

"The figure of 218 was derived by psychometrician Ronald K. Hoeflin, using a chronological age of 10 years and 6 months, and a mental age of 22 years and 11 months. This figure seems to have no obvious rationale. The ceiling of the Second Edition of the Stanford-Binet was 22 years and 10 months, not 11 months (Terman 1937), and a chronological age of 10 years and 6 months corresponds neither to the age in Marilyn's account nor to the age in the school record cited by Baumgold (although it could fit a March test date)."

"The second intelligence test mentioned by Guinness is the Mega Test, designed by Hoeflin and taken by Marilyn as an adult in the mid-1980s. The Mega Test yields deviation IQs: scores obtained by multiplying the testee's z-score (the rarity of their raw score on the test) by a constant standard deviation (in this case 16) and then adding 100. Marilyn's raw score was 46 out of 48, corresponding in the latest norming of the test to a z-score of 5.4 and therefore an IQ of 186, a percentile of 99.999997, and a rarity of 1 in 30,000,000 (Hoeflin 1989)."

Now, is there anything you'd care to clarify about your claimed IQ?

The USA signed the ITU treaty thus we have internationally agreed to it's requirements, one of which is to prove that anybody operating an Amateur Radio Station meets the minimum proficiency requirements as outlined in that treaty. The US congress ratified the the agreement, making it official and legally binding, and they have delegated the authority to enforce the treaty requirements to a federal agency, a.k.a FCC, by an act of congress.

By requiring the operator to have a license shows they meet the treaty minimum requirements by passing tests before they are issued the license. The FCC can impose higher standards but the minimum is set by the ITU treaty agreement. As any body who should have taken government class in grade school the first thing you learn is the rights granted in the Constitution are not absolute, i.e. they have bounds.

One day a drunk stumbled upon a preacher baptizing a group of people down by the river. He stumbled out to the preacher to see what was going on. "Would you like to see Jesus?", the preacher asked the drunk. "Sure", said the drunk. So the preacher held him down under the water, then bringing him up asked, "did you see Jesus?". "No" said the drunk. This time the preacher held him under a bit longer. Up came the drunk gasping for air. "Did you see Jesus that time?". "NO!". So this time the preacher held him down for a goodly amount of time. Up comes the drunk spitting water and gasping for breath. "NOW did you see Jesus?" "NO", exclaimed the drunk, "are you sure this is where he fell in?"

But there is no such thing as true UK cuisine, it is all bangers and wellingtons and steak and kidney pie washed down with lots and lots and lots of Guiness.

But enough about Brits, who are otherwise creators of fine cars, time traveler shows, absurdist sitcoms, and who invented the art of sarcasm.

What an absolutely assinine, deluded and idiotic rationalization for being dishonest and deceitful.

Markie, you claim that you NEED to lie to be safe, but ARE YOU...?!?!?

Would all of your lying stop you from being an unfortunate victim of a drive-by shooting? Or prevent you from being carjacked? Do you think that by trying to hide who you are would stop a meteor from landing on you or turn back a tsunami?

Markie, there's not a single word of deceit or mistruth that you could utter that would prevent a determined person from locating you and harming you if they so chose.

Look at the number of celebrities who take exacting and detailed precautions, yet are STILL victimized by REAL stalkers.

There's no "mistatement".

You used the phrase "fogware bullshit" first, Len.

Good news travels fast. While I may not agree with WK3C on a few things, it was good news to hear of his election to that IEEE post.
So I offered him my congratulations. I was pleased that he won but not surprised.

Too bad the ARRL BoD and Executive Committee could not be made to change their minds about allowing him to run for Director of the Atlantic Division, despite the efforts of some of us in the Division to get him on the ballot.

You mean like:

"Tsk...how did you "find out?""

"Let me repeat, HOW did you FIND OUT?"

"HOW did you FIND OUT?"

Is your behavior here "professional", Len?

I am sure several members of your family will be relieved to hear

No, you did not.

You were IMPRECISE in your use of the words.

Your TYPING errors come from laziness and haste, NOT dyslexia.

There is NO SUCH THING as "dyslexiod aphasia". "WebMD", Tabor's and the Stedman's Guide all concur.

More than likely your MD told you one thing and you were too embarrassed to admit you didn't understand so just made up something that sounds like what he told you.

And you continue to function as though you understand the BoN rules. You quite clearly do not, but good luck anyway. I continue to add your "pearls" to the CD. It will make interesting reading in Nashville if I am tasked to respond to a "complaint".

But MARKIE, YOU are the one that said it's "OK" to just use ANY "definition" of ANY word as you see fit without ensuring that all parties of the discussion agree on WHICH definition is being used.

That's part of the CD too.

Remember all your arguments on the use of the term
"drafted"...?!?! You INSISTED that YOUR definition was not the one used by the DoD, yet it IS a military application we were addressing...

It's part of the record, Markie. Good luck squeezing out from under that one.

> we are on the same footing

Noooooooooooooooooo...we're not.

Dave and I are professionals, recognized by our peers in our seperate disciplines as such.

Any "defense" I have to mount will include testimony of people who are also known and recognized within my profession. None of them are allegedly dyslexic gay pagan Colonels in the "Chemical Corps" who can't manage to use a spellchecker in their correspondences and "admit" that they consider lying to be a "right" or moral responsibility to teach their children.

> > There are archived thing...You seem to think it ony applies to others...And therein lies part of your downfall.

Why can Lennie not address people the way they address him, even when the way they address him is the way he says he wants it...?!?!

Maybe that's why Lennie can't get the respect and credibility he THINKS he deserves?

And again.

Not one rational or responsible word addressing Jim's comments.
Just grade school jibberish.

Interesting that after having had his nose rubbed in his own numbers, Lennie changes style and format of his "scorecard" series of posts and threads...Trying to hide the facts, as usual...The FACTS that those comments Jim was refering to DON'T support Lennie's opinion as being in the majority.

None-the-less, it will be interesting to see, after whatever action the FCC takes in regards to dropping the Code Test, if Lennie will then get the "Extra Lite" (or any other HF-authorized license) or continue to spam the NG with his anti-Amateur Radio bile...

It is common knowledge that governments have burried underground transmission stations.
These beam up in the microwave range, and the hats focus (like a dish)
the radiation in the brain.

The recommended solution is to glue the hat on, and walk on your hands, upside down.

I posed this question to U.S. Senator Hillary Clinton's office and was told that a "blanket license" covered channels 1-40.
All channels above 40 are unassigned and no license is required to operate there. The same thing applies to all channels below channel one. However, hams operating below channel one are limited to 500 watts, while hams operating above channel 40 can run unlimited power.

1010. FAQ, just what is Ham Radio?

What is Ham Radio?

Ham Radio is a technical pursuit for those who are interested in the science of radio wave propagation and who are also interested in the way that their radios function. It has a long-standing tradition of providing a source of engineers who are born naturals.

Ham Radio awakens in its aficionados a whole-life fascination with all things technical and gives an all-abiding curiosity to improve one's scientific knowledge. It's a great swimming pool, please dive in!

This excitement causes a wish to share the experience
with ones fellow man, and shows itself in the gentlemanly traditions of Ham Radio.

Radio Hams are in a unique privileged position in that they can construct and operate their own equipment! No-one else has this privilege. Users, such as broadcasters,
the po lice and armed farces, CBers and mobile phone users have to purchase ready-made gear. Manufacturers are not licensed to operate their gear. Radio Hams are qualified to design, build and then operate their own pieces of equipment. They do this with gusto, and also repair and modify their own equipment. This is a privilege well worth the effort to gain, and one to be jealously guarded.

The excitement that drives a Radio Ham starts with relatively simple technologies at first, perhaps making his own Wimshurst machine and primary cells. Small pieces of test equipment follow, possibly multimeters and signal generators. Then comes receivers and transmitters. It is with the latter that communication with like-minded technically motivated people takes off. The scope for technical development grows with the years
and now encompasses DSP and DDS. There is also a great deal of excitement in the areas of computer programming to be learnt and applied.

The technical excitement motivates Radio Hams to compete with each other to determine who has designed and manufactured
the best-quality station. This competitiveness is found in DXing, competitions and fox-hunts.

-----OOOOO----

However, beware! A Ham Radio licence is such a desirable thing to have that there are large numbers of people who wish to be thought of
as Radio Hams when, in fact, they are nothing of the kind! Usually such people are a variation of the CB Radio hobbyist; they buy their radios off the shelf and send them back to be repaired; they are not interested in technical discussion
and sneer at those who are; they have no idea how their radios work inside and have no wish to find out;
they are free with rather silly personal insults;
they have not satisfied any technical qualification
and their licences prevent the use of self-designed-and-built equipment.

These CB types engage in the competitive activities
with their Cheque-Book-purchased off-the-shelf radios
in a forlorn effort to prove that they are Radio Hams.

No _REAL_ Radio Hams are deceived by such people!

-----ooooo-----

One infallible way to disambiguate the CB Radio Hobbyist
from the _REAL_ Radio Ham is to solicit their view of the difference between CB Radio and Ham Radio. A Radio Ham will perceive Ham Radio to be a technical pursuit and will perceive CB Radio to be a social communications facility
no different in essence to a land-line telephone or a GSM mobile in the hands of a 6-year-old. Thus a Radio Ham could also hold a CB licence safe in the knowledge that such a licence says no more about him than having a land-line telephone, whilst continuing to regard Ham Radio as a separate technical pursuit.

A CB Radio hobbyist, on the other hand, sees no difference between a Ham Radio licence and a CB Radio licence. To him, they are sisters-under-the-skin. Wrongly, the CB Radio Hobbyist then tries to classify himself as the equal of the Radio Ham when, in fact, he is nothing of the kind. A sure sign of a CB Radio hobbyist is if he holds, or has ever held, a licence issued under the gangrenous degeneration that is the M3/CB Fools' Licence scheme.

-----ooooo-----

One group of people who claim to be of the standard of Radio Hams but who are in reality nothing more than an apology for the failure of a CBer are those class B

licensees who falsely proclaimed that they were against
the use of a Morse Test to control access to the HF bands, until, that is, a test was introduced at their intellectual level, the intellectual level of 6-year-olds.

6 year-olds simply lack the mathematical tool kit to enable them to handle even the simplest algebraic manipulation
for Ohm's Law and thus, the disgraceful Class Ber's in the aforementioned category are not Radio Hams by any stretch of the imagination!

Remember - A sure sign of a CB Radio hobbyist is if he holds,
or has ever held, a licence issued under the gangrenous
degeneration that is the M3/CB Fools' Licence scheme!

Just to clarify, it's actually a seat on the IEEE-SA Board of Governors - a role that Dennis Bodson, ARRL Roanoake Division Director held for some time in parallel with his ARRL position.

Jim is referring to the fact that my company is named "WK3C Wireless LLC" ... The simple fact of the matter is that, since "WK3C" is unique to me, it was a simple way of assuring that there were no name conflicts when I filed the papers to form the company with the PA authorities.

Please, now that Mike, Jim and Hans have proven that there is no God, how can you come up with such nonsense?

Steve, somehow I don't think my Somalia logbooks will be much of a concern to your board, or whether or not I read a 1958 copy of "This is the Air Force," or if you were really an "A" NCOIC of Okinawa MARS.

I'm going to guess that it's your behavior that they'll be looking at. You may be able to prove that Mark misspells words and doesn't finish his thoughts when writing to the group. You may be able to prove that Mark's faith isn't mainstream, or that he is gay or bi or whatever. You might even be able to prove that he thinks that you're an asshole like I do. But if you stepped out of bounds and used your Nurse credentials to use another states health or child services professionals, or police or Sheriff personnel to harass Mark, then that's what they'll probably be considering. So at the end of the day, if you did "dial" Illinois, you'll have some real explaining to do.

Somehow I don't think my Somalia logbooks will be much of a concern to your board, but you might think differently. Good luck.

"Ham Radio" magazine has been pronounced "defunct" by you. Now you claim differently? And Bash, what is the copyright on the latest Bash book?

I do like World Radio and think "thier" SAR columns are excellent. I need to subscribe to them now that the ARRL has lost my membership or 19 years. They should have let Carl run and take his chances with the rest of the contenders. Last Straw. Too bad for the ARRL.

Congratulations, Carl, and thanks for the press releases you sent.

For those who don't get all your news from rrap or IEEE bulletins, open your copy of this months copy of Scientific American magazine. In it they recognize Carl by naming him one of the "SA50" for his work in WiFi radio.

One of the things I learned at DeVry was to avoid repeating the same adjective in the same sentence, or even the same paragraph. Don't get me wrong; I'm not dissing* you, but I think that you can polish up your swearing so that it is much more effective.

Example: You could have said "fuck you steve, crawl back into that shit-filled toilet you call home, you slimy turd."

This would have evoked a disgusting image in the reader's mind and added effectiveness to your rant. I suggest that you sign up for a DeVry Correspondence School language course as I did. DeVry dramatically improved my swearing, thereby making me much more popular with the shemales at the Shipwreck Lounge in Glendale.

The rest is history.

Hey Steve

I stop in about once every 3 to 6 months to take a quick look at the cast of characters and the topics. Over the years since my posting hiatus from this newsgroup I have to say that nothing here has changed. Same people whining and complaining about the same topic day in and day out. That's one of the reasons why I stopped posting. I mean, if some of these people spent as much time operating a rig as they do complaining in this newsgroup, the airwaves would be full of people and my logbook would be crammed with entries.

I have to admit I do get a chuckle out of some of characters. It is amusing to see the Lt. General Vice Admiral Morgan's posts (did he get that dyslexic code-waiver yet?) and I see Lennie still hates hams and ham radios as much as ever. So much negativity and vitriol from that man, indeed, like I once said years ago, he's much like my long-departed paternal grandmother -- is miserable in life and has to make everyone else miserable around him. Such negativity must just suck the essence of life from your soul.

Me, I'm too busy enjoying life to get involved with the nonsense that goes on in here anymore. I split my time between RI and HI. Spending time with my 3 young ones, riding my motorcycle, SCUBA diving, hiking, hunting, fishing, and oh yeah, getting on the rig a couple times a week and making a few contacts. Just two weeks ago I was teaching my SO how HF propagation works, and ended up spending 90 minutes chatting on 20 meters with a dude in Florida who just retired after 20+ years with NASA.

Let's see... In my left hand... Doing what I'm doing and making interesting contacts on HF... in my right hand... arguing day-in and day-out on the same topic over and over again with the same nitwits in a newsgroup beating a dead horse to death even more. Hmmmm... which one would I rather do?

Drop me an email sometime. I doubt I'll post here again before I croak.

I believe Dee is female yes. who other than a female should I call an elitist bitch?

it would be very unlikely that DEE would call me an elitist bitch, elist bastard perhaps

Dee BTW has publicly stated she does not object to me addressing her in that manner

I have not lied in calling her an elitist bitch, she donmantrated to my satifction that she is an elitist bitch, she ractices elitism thought insults people based on license class she is feamel etc all in all meeting the qualifactions for the title ah Dee can't defend herself from something she feels she need no defending from. bad as Dan

but you show your violent nature again Stevie you are constantly suggesting violence, not the act of a civlised man

you think? never senn much evidence of that after what does the fact she live in Michigan have to do anything or the existance or non existance of Mr Flint

I don't apologize for calling you a piece of shit or to her for calling her an elitist bitch

It is several weeks to perhaps 2 months old indeed that I can call her an elist without her objection is one the reason I still hold some respect for her, she could have more and become the most repsected by me of the Procoder's by stating something "you are tintitled to your opinion on the subject" but calling her an elitist bitch is mild compared to the disgusting posts that have come from your keyboard

Messed about with?? normally they come in chunks of pure cut steak but the kidney... uuurgh.. hate it in any shape or form. If your speaking from experience you must have visited some really dodgy restaurants while you were over here. As far as salads go.. they arent cooked they are simply washed and put on the plate. Fancy boiling a salad.. lol...

well, you could always wear the hat on your ass, and it would block out the radiation from these "underground" sources.... but of course, this would open you to other radiation from other directions, unless you also wear one on your head. the best solution to looking "normal" here would be to line your grundies with tinfoil....

Well of course her office doesn't know squat about FCC rules, but her FCC specialist staff member did and does know about FCC rules, especially since she is in contact with one of the commissioners. You really need to take a look at your aggressive attitude. I think Roger can help you.

So, what are you saying? Are you implying you have access to K1MAN's medical records? Please explain how you gained access to Mr Baxter's medical records or how you are qualified to make a psychiatric diagnosis? Where did you do your

I know you jest with the praise Dave but why quote Bean's diatribe again in full? Many of us have kill filed Bean in the hope we never see any of his stuff again so it comes as a shock to the system to see his verbal;garbage once more... it hasn't changed in years.

I won' t see Beanie's reply to this post as he's in my kill file but I guess it will contain the words " You behave like a child... grow up OM!" He has macro keys on his computer to generate most of this stuff..

Ii like the looks of the Deluxe Shielding Dress Shirt. I wonder how that would go at airport security? Then there's a shorts. You'd be stripped to nothing but socks and still setting off alarms!

And the hat, wow. "Many people can actually sense the differences in the levels of "mind noise" from RF radiation. Provide your brain a quiet place without interference to your mental processes from RF radiation." I'd love to do a double blind test with placebo hats and see the results!

Her staff member obviously doesn't know squat either. The frequencies below and above cb channels 1-40 are allocated to other services and to operate on those frequencies without the proper permit or license is illegal. Hams can only operate on frequencies allocated to the amateur radio service and are not limited to 500 watts. Sounds like her staff member is as stupid as you are.

From the ARRL WEB FCC Amateur Radio Enforcement Log - Jan 2, 2001:

"The FCC on December 18, 2000, wrote Amateur Extra licensee Michael P. Deignan, KH6HZ, regarding 'at least eight club call signs in your name as trustee.' Six show Rhode Island addresses; four indicate Hawaii addresses. FCC Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Engorcement Riley Hollingsworth noted that all of the call signs were granted in the same month. All are WH6-prefix call signs. Hollingsworth said the person whose address was listed for the club call signs in Hawaii has notified the FCC that he does not want to be associated with the club call signs and does not want his address to be used. Hollingsworth requested that Deignan justify the need for each of the call signs and provide details of members, meeting times, and meeting minutes for each club.
Hollingsworth also asked Deignan to list any other call signs issued to him that were not included in the FCC letter.
Hollingsworth said the FCC intends to cancel all of the listed call signs unless it receives a satisfactory response within 30 days."

==========

Must be that the FCC and Riley Hollingsworth "hate ham radio" if they go against the wishes of Michael P. Deignan!

Older information shows that "KH6HZ" was a Vanity issue prior to that license being modified on 25 June 2002 (expiration date is 14 October 2007). Deignan had KD1HZ prior to the KH6HZ vanity call.

Tsk, tsk. Note that Jimmie refused to capitalize the Ham Radio magazine name. Ham Radio magazine ceased publication in 1990. That was 15 years before now. Ham Radio had been in continuous INDEPENDENT monthly publication for 22 years.

Irony is that the Ham Radio Bookstore got sold to CQ along with HR and is still in business. HR continued with a quarterly that became Communications Quarterly under the CQ aegis, then merged with ARRL's QEX. CQ Communications made a 3-disk CD on all 22 years worth of HR articles and sells it over their Book Store for $150. ARRL resells the same item. :-)

One has only to drop into any HRO and check out their books-magazines rack/display. ARRL publications far out-pace ALL others. Just a glance at the ARRL web page will show books of all sorts on amateur radio for sale, including fiction novels. The nearest competitor is CQ Communications products through its Book Store via mail order.

Guiness is NOT a UK drink... those Irish folk invented that, begorrah!

The UK national drink is tea , made with milk, hot water (and tea of

Steak and kidney pie is actually better washed down with one of the

That would be because "Ham Radio" magazine did not exist. The magazine cover called it "ham radio", not "Ham Radio". See an actual cover at http://webhome.idirect.com/~griffith/hrindex.htm .

But here we have Len manufacturing a "slight" and displaying his patented umbrage in order to perpetuate his "victim of Morse users" status again. So unfortunate that his facts were in disarray and he stands as a victim of his own petulance.

Stevie has no access to anything on me it is in part his ampling he does have such access that is likely to get him inot to trouble that K1MAN is alleged to suffer from Bipolar dis order is in one the officail letter that has been posted in the case

No letter from the FCC or law enforcement about me exists

Two things come to mind. One, you have resorted to name calling, which means you have lost the argument. Two, Democrats always resort to name calling when they are losing an argument, so it would appear you are a Democrat. Lastly, your whole premise is moot, since the Tenth Ammendment trumps all regulation of radio frequencies, thereby making the FCC an outlaw agency, with no basis in our Constitution.
BTW, Roger is a Democrat, and a very liberal one too. He's on SSI, so that is not surprising.

I don't care anything about his personal affiars, no interest at all.
My interest in K1MAN is limited to the interest I think we all should have in the FCC trying to use and exploit someone less able to mount an effective defense of himself to establish precedent that might be used against the rest of us as to his pesonal affiars, I don't care he ma be bipolar (except as above) or for that matter if he fucks chickens (as long as he own said

This reminds me of a funny story:

Once upon a time there was a retired amateur going on a DX-pedition to the South Seas in the spring of '78 who set up his equipment and started operating... unfortunately a terrorist group decided he was an worthwhile target and overran his station. Last thing we heard on SSB was W4<garble> calling Mayday, Mayday, Mayday! <hiss> <static>. A few weeks later a forensics team found nothing but charred wood and bones. The leader of the team reported back to the coroner: "Looks like an old southern ham got roasted at Easter".

And that's why we have a Supreme Court to decide such issues. Making sure that we have competent judges to make the interpretations of the Constitution is a real concern and one reason why the current nominee is being looked at so closely.

I don't hate K1MAN. I don't know him personaly

Indeed I support his principled stand against the FCC. I do wish the fight was between a man less limited in his abilty to defend himself/make his case. I hope he prevails in this matter

You sir appear to one of those Fellows we see so often in here. If you are 178 percent something then you Hate it. I am more 74 percent supportor of K1MAN but I also yes the man has his faults. Who doesn't? I am concerned his faults may affect the outcome in ways that the FCC should be allowing wether the Nurse that first comented on his Bipolar was attacking him or not we;; the nurse will have to answer

I am disgusted with the FCC targeting him for this sort of attack, and not moderating ait actions to accomodate his condiction

no it does not

However I will grant you in makes it hardert to sustain each level beyond the first test. the first test is justified legaly by the term of the ITY treaty.

each test after that one becomes harder and harder to justify on a legal basis

but the waivers were allowed already in principle so that horse has that the US has had a series of license tied to freq prevlegges granting more prevledge to more learned ops

OTOH I agree with you to point the arguement is weak

But I support an Ideal of ONE class of license for all and in practice would support (as opposed to merely accepting what is likely to result in the R&O) 2 class at most ( a "Novice" and full prevledges)

Seems like you need to learn a few thing about how to fake documents. After all of the doctored up pics posted to this news group, yawn, nobody cares about another one.

I remember back in high school how somebody took a real death certificate and doctored it up using the assistant principal's name and address. By the end of the day fully half the students and a lot of the teaching staff thought the guy was dead from multiple gunshot wounds to the chest. Some students even went to the office asking were to send flowers too! The document even had the real city of Detroit's Coroners signature, the presiding doctor at the time of death etc. along with the raised seal. And that was before computers were used. Now people print duplicates of dollar bills on their inkjet photo printers from high quality scans. I've even heard of a few that even fooled some bill changing machines, which by the way is a crime called counterfeiting for those dumb enough to try it.

Dudly the Imposter has no "facts" to accuse anyone of anything.

I started the "score card" postings on 2 August 2005 after accumulating enough opinion data on WT Docket 05-235 filings to see four categories. The first non-FCC filings began on 20 July 2005.

The official Comment beginning did not occur until the Federal Register notice of NPRM 05-143 on 31 August 2005. At that date I elected to show a double tally of opinions, the original one and one that began on 31 August. The first posting of that new tally format began 1 September 2005.

Due to a great number of posts under the above 2nd subject thread that went beyond the scope of the "score card," I changed the "score card" posts to another thread beginning 17 October 2005. The same format of the 2nd thread ("double tally") was kept in this third thread.

The tally postings were almost daily except for one 2 1/2 week period in September-October when my wife and I were on a trip and I was away from easy Internet access and tallies. All of the categorizations were done as honestly and fairly as possible, reading each of the Comments and Replies to Comments. Opinions of greater than 90% of all filings were rather obviously in three categories of For the NPRM, Against the NPRM, or Code-Test-for-Extra-but-OK-to-drop-code-test-for-other-classes.

All of my "score card" postings are still in Google and may be accessed by anyone with Google access. NOTHING was "hidden." By viewing the continuously-posted tally postings, it is quite evident that a better than 2:1 ratio in favor of the NPRM was held at the starting weeks of the Comment period. That ratio began to change from the date of notice in the Federal Register that the NPRM Comment period had begun on 31 August 2005. The tallies can be verified by anyone reading all 3,760 filings in WT Docket 05-235 as of the close of ECFS updates on 10 November 2005.

It should be noted that the official Comment period on NPRM 05-143 ENDED on 31 October. The Reply to Comments period is still officially OPEN until Monday, 14 November 2005, as stated in the Federal Register of 31 August 2005. Among the 9 official Replies to Comments (the other 48 are unofficial Comments), all of them are FOR the NPRM. Those who bother to look at the many tally postings I made will see the trend of opinion changing weekly. Nothing was hidden.

Posting of the "score card" was terminated after the official end of the Comment period on 31 October 2005. The number of other posts of continual argument and bickering were so great that it was no longer worthwhile to continue the tally posting in public.

There are no "rules" on posting tallies of public opinion except those of the person(s) doing the tally. That another has posted an alleged "analysis" of WT Docket 05-235 filing contents is not any valid argument against what I have done.

> None-the-less, it will be interesting to see, after whatever >action the FCC takes in regards to dropping the Code Test, if Lennie >will then get the "Extra Lite" (or any other HF-authorized license) or >continue to spam the NG with his anti-Amateur Radio bile...

Irrelevant and incorrect. What I do in the future is of no concern to any action of the FCC to make a final Report and Order as a result of the end of the Comments and Replies to Comments. The Commission will make a decision at some future time but that time will not be soon. The number of filings in WT Docket 05-235 exceed those made on WT Docket 98-143 ("Restructuring") by about 1,500; WT Docket 98-143 had only about 2,200 filings in the official Comment and Replies to Comments period of about 11 months time.

As to the past, Dudly the Imposter has NOT yet provided any proof whatsoever that he was ever IN any of the alleged "seven hostile actions" he claimed he was in. He has NOT yet been able to name a single item of radio communications equipment used by him for military radio communications. Dudly has NOT proven that he knows anything about electronics engineering or radio design other than claiming less than a half year's employment as a purchasing agent at a smallish electronics company. Dudly the Imposter has been challenged with providing proof of his alleged USMC Gunnery Sergeant rating by another, a USMC veteran who HAS provided enough visible evidence that what this other USMC veteran has written. Dudly has NOT yet explained how he got a

"changed-to-honorable-from-medical" discharge from the military AND received a pension that is available only after 20 years' military service. Us readers have NOTHING from Dudly other than a number of written postings full of personal insults such as -

> Putz.

Dudly the Imposter is a fraud, a travesty of a wannabe military hero who cannot prove a thing he has claimed. Given that this date is Veterans' Day, Dudly the Imposter casts great dishonor on himself, the United States Marine Corps, and all United States Amateur Radio Extra class grantees.

Why do you CBers continue to cross post shit to rec.radio.amateur groups?
None of us give a shit about anything that has anything to do with 11 meters.

Not a refusal. A correct reference.

As litoi has pointed out, there was no "Ham Radio" magazine. In imitation/homage to e.e. cummings and/or k.d. laing, it was called "ham radio". I have several of them, including the rare Vol.1 No.1, and the cover title is not capitalized.

Is that a "VIRTUAL monopoly", Len?

Could it be that, in a free market, ARRL publications are simply more popular? Maybe their quality has something to do with it?

An apology of my own then, Dee, but as I am sure it's apparent by the ebb and flow of traffic, I've been busy lately and just plain missed it...However his conduct was wrong then, it's wrong today.

Bravo, Dee...However I doubt that there is a court in the United States that would fault a man for blooding the nose of a creep who defiled his spouse. Similar case occured in Chattanooga a couple years back..."Case Dismissed" for lack of evidence.

Yeah I noticed your appearances have been irregular. And I agree that is conduct is wrong. However, I absolutely refuse to feed his ego and so take very little notice of his remarks.

Here's an irony for you. He considers Extras to be elitists but is planning to become one himself as soon as possible after the code testing is dropped!

A 22-year run as an independent in the hobby periodical trade is pretty good. 22 years is enough time to conceive a child, raise them from birth, and see them to legal adulthood. Not good enough for Dudly the Imposter, though...not Jimmie...and, now, not iitoi. :-)

>I guess "ham radio" magazine is only "defunct" when Jim needs it to be,

According to this anony-mousie "iitoi," HAM RADIO magazine DID NOT EXIST! :-)

Poor 'iitoi' is SO wanting to FIGHT on something that he is now wanting to argue TYPE FONTS in Cover Graphics!

I wasn't "with" HR in all 22 years but I've corresponded enough with founding Editor in Chief Jim Fisk (SK as W1HR, that call a club call now) to have a LOT of letterhead and logo information on what HAM RADIO magazine called itself. As an Associate Editor under Alf Wilson (W6NIF) and then Rich Rosen, there's more. I've got a fair collection in paper (with real ink). But, the subject of TYPE FONT and Cover Design Graphics never came up. In ordinary typewriter type we would refer to the magazine as "Ham Radio" with others and just Ham Radio in inter-staff correspondence. Double-quotes are a convention to ALSO mean italics when a typewriting thingy doesn't have easy-changing type fonts. The compensation checks I got had the title capitalized and the Bank of America didn't fight with me on that. :-)

Iitoi now wants to FIGHT over the subject!

Maybe there's too much peyote lying around there.

Or lack of it?

I'm not going to FIGHT over Cover Graphic Design.

That's like arguing three ways from last Tuesday on the flashy cabinet of a radio without once bothering with what's INSIDE it. But, if their ignorance is so much that they don't know what's between covers, they can feel happy about "getting someone" in a newsgroup.

I have a personal preference for RSGB publications for their graphics and layout. A distinct preference for Pat Hawker's column in Radio Communication (membership magazine of RSGB).
Hawker's column has carried a lot of very leading-edge techniques done in Yurp as well as UK...Peter Martinez' trials with the Gingell polyphase R-C network for SSB mod/demod and Martinez' PSK31.

I'm getting that way with these mighty morsemen motivated fighters. Jimmie be happy as proverbial clam if he can word-fight...and now "iitoi" (whoever it be) wants to do same.

Quite right. But alas, I brought up the issue to make a point on a -different- issue. That issue was you, Dudly:

"Assuming you really -are- who you claim, you sure are setting a -=BAD=- example of the discipline both required and expected of a retired Marine Gunny of 18 years (which is bullshit in and of itself) by wasting so much time engaging in flame wars on Usenet. I can get away with it because I was a shitbird..... but you? Heck, if I was USMC retired and behaving the way you do I'd go outside and kick my -own- ass out of respect for the Corps. And -THAT'S- what Semper Fidelis means, Steve."

You should.

Air Force Aux, LPN, EMT, Amateur radio, and trolling the highways looking for any opportunity to be a hero..... so where do you find the time to post so much crap on Usenet?

I like the people living on that side of the pond. Have they done something

Actually many states are putting up web sites where you can get this info.
Should anyone be interested, the URL for the state of Missouri is http://www.courts.mo.gov/casenet/base/welcome.do
We also have a web site to check on sex offenders which lists there address.
I don't have that saved as I only have 1 neighbor within walking distance of my house.

Nope, not like you at all, Dudly. The scarce tidbits of conflicting info that you have publically disclosed about your military 'career' have collected into a huge pile of dirt that you can no longer ignore by sweeping it under the rug. Without anyone asking, I have posted my DD-214 as well as additional proof of my service. You, -=UNLIKE=- me, don't have any proof of active service to post.

> UNLIKE me he managed to get court martialed not once, but TWICE in Evidently, I know it better than you. In the Marine Corps, a term of enlistment is called a 'cruise', not a 'hitch'. The pile of dirt continues to grow.....

I couldn't care less about your Morse code pissing contest. Obviously you missed the thread where I disagreed with Len about the issue.

I have never said anything of the sort. Nevertheless, you lied to your God when you took your marriage vows -- who are -YOU- to accuse anyone else of lying?

BTW..... "have"

> He calls me "Gunny Dudly"

A name well deserved.

Don't downplay your hero career for the sake of little ol' me, Dudly.
You didn't just get your EMT card while in the Corps -- you claim to have 10+ years experience as an LPN/EMT while on active duty, a feat that is simply incredible if not impossible for -any- MOS.

> I am still trying to shake that laugh off.

"shake" is the right word. You can't shake it off because your claim simply isn't true. But please keep trying.

Andre Craddock, M0SWB, proves that he continues to be an INCURABLE CBER through the medium of his Childish Broadcast (CB).....

Infantile and abusive......is there any difference between an M0 callsign and one of those issued under the gangrenous degeneration that is the M3/CB Fools' Licence scheme? Seemingly not.

Ah yes, the being a CBer defense. That'a as old as the crust in your

I have friends in law enforcement and I also at one time in my life worked security in a maximum security unit.
But you are correct about my feelings about the FCC, as they are a worthless

I'm not pissed about being reminded of rules, but K1MAN is a ham, not a

I don't know what a "real amateur" is and I, for one, have never claimed to be such.

However, after a number of years of contributing to Usenet under my own name and callsign, my family was subjected to malicious and threatening letters sent by Stephen G Bryan G0SGB in 1998, a matter for which the plods were involved.

His criminal activities followed on from an abusive, insulting, infantile and obsessive tirade by him in this NG, seemingly because he was intolerant of those who disagreed with his CBers' activity of WABbing.

Such threatening behaviour drives one underground, and also serves to illustrate, perhaps, the difference between a _REAL_ Radio Ham and a CBer-Masquerading-As-A-Radio-Ham?

Polymath, you have my profound apologies on behalf of the entire worldwide ham community for the harm you have suffered. And as I just said in a seperate thread, it is things like this that make me think that while governments have a right to demand the addresses of licensed hams, it no longer has the right to publish them. That goes double for hams who happen to be minors... Sadly, depravity no longer limited to any single walk of life, and anonymity on the net is an importand safety measure that should now go hand in hand with exercising the right to free speech.

Wow, did I call this one or what!!!! This is classic Len-hoist-by-his-own-peyote! ("Peyote" is a John Wayne-style euro-descent mis-name - here the People call it mezcal.)

Follow along, boys and girls, and take a lesson in the Anderson technique of mistake-correction-squirm/misdirection.

(Opening) N2EY (correctly) referenced an out-of-publication by the name "ham radio" (uncapitalized).

A. (Mistake) Len surmises that somehow that's a "slight" of his association with the magazine. So, in order to gain some messaging points he picks a fight with N2EY about "refused to capitalize the Ham Radio magazine name".

(NB: Len wrote many damned good technical articles for "ham radio" --- "well done" to him on that score.)

B. (Correction) The magazine in question never called itself capitalized "Ham Radio" --- It's cover name and all internal references, masthead, copyright declarations, and other "branding" folderol used the un-capitalized "ham radio" and the the corporate name "hr publishing" adopted the same lower-case convention. I and N2EY both pointed this out to Len, along with web images of the actual magazine cover.

C. (Squirming and Misdirection) Presented with the facts, Len launches a long irrelevant monologue about Jim Fisk, obsolete typewriters, and paychecks, et. al., blows off the capitalization issue as not important (if it wasn't important, why did HE start the fight about it?), and exits declaring himself bored.

In the past month or so since I joined rrap I've been impressed several times with how smoothly Len follows this simple A-B-C script. Watch for it.

any marine MOS Frank from Stevie terms and mistakes it is possible that he served in the armed forces but maybe in the ARMY memeber of the 95 series could have done as Stevie claims to have done, when you mention some of the anomolies I see them, but as ARMY 54E serving a medical unit at one point I missed em suggesting of all thing we might have in fact served in the same units possibliy or at least the same type of unit, and being human when stevei stories seemed to fit that ARMY mode
I did not look further, not sure about ti but it is possible could it be Dudly Dogface is the right label?

Ahh, Joseph Lucas...the prince of darkness. The warm beer bit comes from having Lucas also build refrigerators. I too have been the victim of a string of British motorcars. Triumphs and Austins and the odd Lotus. I even race-prepped them. I also get around to flying aboard BAE-146s every once in a while. Just like British sports cars they are. Fast enough, handles like a housefly, not all that comfortable and as noisy as hell with the gates open.

Good point, he really is sick. I don't have to do much of anything to prove it, he provides the proof every post he makes. Anybody who drags a person's family members, who he has had no contact with or even knows directly or indirectly, into a dispute on a news group, where they have never made a post, with the clear intend to do them some harm or harassment is mentally ill beyond a doubt. You have somebody who wants to harass or harm people who are totally uninvolved in his personal vendetta and apparently considers such people as disposable, or just another convenient tool without any consideration for the harm he's doing, to further his perverted agenda of hate mongering. He has no more consideration for the innocent than the suicide bombers did, that just recently killed all those people in that wedding, we've been hearing about on the news the past few days. His mind set is exactly the same.

News group disputes between active posters is one thing, dragging innocent people into things is another and frankly I find it amazing that people on this group find it so acceptable. Otherwise people have an opportunity to put and end to his activities in this area. All it takes is one person to rat him out and end his behavior. Who knows whom his "next target" will be, maybe even you if he dislikes something you've said.

Actually, had Frankie actually spent more than one HITCH in the Marine Corps, or had NOT spent the one and ONLY hitch he did serve tied up in the legal system, he'd know that yes, Marines actaully refer to enlistments as "hitches". They also call then "tours" and several other colorful euphemisms that don't need repeating here.

A "cruise", in general Marine Corps useage, refers to a deployment away from one's usual base, camp or air station on board a naval warship.

And obviously YOU didn't see where I DIDN'T make any inference between you and the Morse Code Test issue...I simply put you into that group that I refer to as the Feeble Five.

You are a twice court-martialed disgrace to the Marine Corps.
There's nothing you could say one way or the other on ANY radio issue that would even remotely interest or encourage me.

> you did ctach his paranoid rant claiming you were here at my and brains

There's nothing paranoid about it.

Frankie came in ranting and raving at LENNIE, calling him a fraud, etc etc, due to "MOS'es" that didn't jive with USMC numbers. He was right about the MOSes, but attacking the wrong person.

Sorry, Markie...There's a REAL Gunny right here. I have publically posted the dates of the Promotion Board that I was selected on.

I even posted the Selection Board for my promotion to Staff
Sergeant before it.

Again...You and Frankie of Scummiland chose to ignore them since they render your rants baseless.

BTW...Both boards were for the ACTIVE DUTY USMC, not the USMCR...So yet another FrankieRant shot in the foot....

Sorry, Frankie...Just like your mindless attack about MOS'es when you came in here, you've gotten THIS one wrong too....

I NEVER stated that I had "...10+ years experience as an LPN/EMT while on active duty."

I CLEARLY stated that I got my EMT card in 86. I left the Corps in 92.

It's not a "weakness", Markie.

It's stupidity.

Nothing you have ever posted even remotely indicates that you have even the remotest understanding of Christianity...Other than, perhaps, it declares that one man that lays with another as he would with a woman is doomed.

Good reason to switch to paganism, I guess...Just shop around until you DO find "rules" that let you do what you want to do without the guilty conscience, I guess....

As for the "morally sick" claim, Markie, I can site about a dozen different biblical references that slide you right in there, including your newly documented abuse of women.

If you ask me, all of his callsigns are "vanity." Takes a very vain guy to scoop up a dozen callsigns.

Notice how even Riley could not figure up the actual number of callsigns that Mike held at that time. Yet I was a "liar" for not getting it right by 1 callsign. Hi! Gotta love teh MMMM.

The other reason is that you got caught holding a bunch of callsigns.
You had so many that even in Riley's letter to you he could not count them all.

I mean, if some

Then kindly explain why so many Amateurs hold so much interest in rec.radio.cb ? Theres plenty in there..some are even nice people... I personally have no interest in K1MAN in one way or another. I also have no real interest in the backstabbing and bitching that goes on amongst your fellow Hams and Hams/CB'ers, I just read some of the threads and unless I see something that aggrieves me i simply let it go... im not aggrieved now
btw. im simply trying to say you are wrong and a few Hams are interested in things 11 meters.

What is this absurd fascination with Morse Code? Wouldnt you rather just talk to people? I know all about the arguements about it getting through when all else fails but is it really life and death?? If i cant get through on the radio I use a Phone or the Internet. After all its just a hobby.
Besides, doesnt all that dot dot dot.. dash dash dash give you a headache

Dont get me wrong, im not having a go at Amateurs im just asking the question.. why is it so important?

grammatically correct, spelled properly, and has the appropriate punctuation.

Yep, that's part of the classic profile. Here's some more bits:

1) Reference to others by made-up nicknames such as "Jimmie" and
"iitoi",
(lack of capitalization intentional), etc.

2) Bad catchphrases such as "mighty morsemen motivated fighters"

3) incorrect grammar such as "be happy as proverbial clam"

4) Long irrelevant detailed retaling of something Len did decades ago.

And the key point was not the capitalization at all, but that ARRL does not, and has not, had a virtual monopoly on amateur radio publications.

Very predictable. In fact, there's a simple profile that pretty much predicts Len's behavior in any newsgroup situation. It's appeared here in rrap a few times.....

Yet you told us that Sailors and Marines don't use other colorful euphemisms.

Did you lie?

Feeble? Are you making five new medical diagnoses?

I think my use of the phrase, "Stolen Valor" is a frequent search term for those that seek out military fakes. Once it is used, those that defend the real vets get on it real quick.

That's right. Mike, Jim, and Hans proven there is no God, so there won't be any "miraculous" happenings anywhere. Never were, right?

One thing you must take on board Poly is that these threats that anyone receives arent from just Amateurs/CB'ers. They are from people who use a radio just like they use forums.. to upset and bully people and to force their sometimes vile views upon people. These people are in both Amateur and CB circles. Its not a CB fault, its down pure and simply to "nut jobs" which the majority of CB'ers and Amateurs arent. Unfortunately if you take a stand against these people and your personal info is easily available for these nut jobs then im afraid sometimes you will get threats upon yourself. Just because you post your replys with merely a "Handle" or first name doesnt mean your a cowering hiding lowlife, quite often its because people dont wish to have this s_it from nut jobs thrust upon them. You can still make a valid point without using your traceable details. I know you shouldnt have to worry about such things but we live in the real world. As for the nut jobs... sometimes simply ignoring them is the best thing to do. They crave the attention. If you dont give them the attention they move on. Whatever you say to them they will never change.....

You got that right.

I moved to a duplex across town a couple years ago to keep the kids in the school of choice...Problem was that it's a bad option for antennas...I have a limited option antenna back up now, but Amy and I are considering a move back to the mountain now that the other kids are graduated...

Hear hear.

No...Col. Markie is still as illiterate and assinine as ever...Seems he got ran out of Illinois, though. He's almost as far north as he can get and still have the US flag on the left pole.

And Markie and Lennie have recruited Frankie into their domain.
Frankie was twice court martialed in the Marines, but he's on a mission to "prove" that he's a better legend in his own mind these days.

Is there a prohibition against using the word "feeble" unless it is by a licensed medical doctor? Can you show me that rule or law in

Other than Markie's folly and Lennie's frequent attempts to parlay his rear-area radio mechanic duties into an artillery-ducking, Bear avoiding novel, there's no military "frauds" here that I know of.

Prone to WHAT lying?

And are you now stating that the USMC itself was lying when they posted promotion results for the 1983 Staff Sergeant Selection Board and the 1987 Gunnery Sergeant Selection Boards?

I don't dispute the experience length, Brain.

READ WHAT WAS WRITTEN: Sir Frankie Of Scummiland tried to say I alleged the "experience" was all while I was in the Corps.

That's false. I never said that.

I've been an LPN for 11 years now and an EMT before that.

If you have a question you want answered by me, make sure it's grammatically correct, spelled properly, and has the appropriate punctuation.

And Markie...YOU'RE the coward.

Comply with the requirements of (2) and you'll get an answer...but only if yuo say "please".

Dana <dana@panix.com> wrote:

> The mistake the FCC made was dropping the code requirment down to 5 wpm.

the mistake every authority has made is....

when you cheapen a licence , you get lower standards of behaviour being displayed by the licensees.

when those who have licences did very little to get that licence they will treat that licence with very little respect.

when those licensees are governed by rules/regulations then their behaviour may well become the subject of complaints.

complaints must be investigated.
this costs money.

end result....
lowering the 'cost of administration' allows cb'ers onto amateur bands.
cb'ers on amateur bands will cause problems.
problems cause complaints.
complaints cause investigations.
investigations cost money.
money that was hoped to have been saved in the first place !!

and a lot of this behaviour can be put down to ONE THING.
(even the interview with an rsgb president on the arrl website shows this)

the plan to get rid of compulsory morse testing for hf access.

Wrong.

Any picture that can be acquired in a place of public accomodation can be used for almost ANY purpose where the person photographed cannot reasonably expect privacy.

Point in case: A picture of you taken from over a 12 foot privacy fence would be a "bust"...A picture of you getting into a car in a driveway would not.

Do you think, for example, that photographers at public events go and get "permission" from each and every person who MAY appear in a shot?

So...Next time you're out for a stroll, going to buy groceries, or stopping to buy gas, just keep an eye out for the camera, and say "CHEESE!"

"VVERBAL" abuse certainly IS possible on USENET!

Just re-ready ANYthing you ahve posted in RRAP, Markie!

I may have given Kim a hard time about her callsign, but I DARE
YOU to show me ONE POST where I used such derisive language like "bitch"...

> > She disagreed with you.

It's easy to insult you, Markie. Even when it's not intended, you select things to be "insulting" just to keep your "victim" status rolling.

It doesn't matter.

Call her "elitist" if you care to.

But I dare you to show me where she used such language in describing you!

I didn't have to see it to know that a gentleman doesn't call a woman a "bitch" in public.

YOU don't follow "english convention" or you'd know English is capitalized.

I never said I can "lie" about anything.

You have yet to prove that I have.

Oh? Show me in the RRAP preamble where it states that posting here means it's OK to abuse women.

Nope. Again, and for the 45th time this week, you "gloss over" your OWN "claim" that it's "OK" to pick and choose what "definition" is OK to use regardless of the context of the conversation, Markie!

Were you LYING, Colonel?

> you advanced the claim any of my acts allow to say that Todd's fathe

Well...The only thing there that made sense was that Lennie and Brain are mentally ill...That's pretty well documented. But your "my acts" thing is mindless.

It's all absolutely true. You're an unrepentant liar, you're a sexual deviant, and you're a woman abuser.

And all of it archived from YOUR WORDS AND DEEDS.

Lot's of abused women refuse to acknowledge their abused status.
Many women, beaten and bloodied by family members, often turn on the police and EMS workers trying to help them.

That Dee has "excused" you does NOT excuse the fact that you ARE a woman abuser.

> and again if I have how did that give to the right to lie about me, and What lie? What lies?

And I didn't make any "claim".

Paying attention to what? Your abuse. You're right...I missed that one under the tons of filth and deceit deposited in RRAP by you and the others of the Feeble Five...

But that doesn't negate the fact that you're a woman abuser.

the sick and abusive mind of Mark C Morgan, the more disgusting facts we find.

Then can you explain it to me then? Im not being flippant, I actually want to know why its important and why, in your words, it drops the quality of people who chose to become Amateur if they don't do morse... why does it make them any less of a good Amateur?... and why do you think that because morse might be dropped the band will become full of CB people who will wreak havoc? And why do you class all CB'ers as the same?

Len's own "scorecard" shows his opinion (complete elimination of all Morse Code testing for any class of FCC-issued amateur radio license)
to be in the minority

It appears that Len wished to avoide comment and discussion, and wanted a thread containing only his scorecard.

If that were true, Len would have been aware of the fact that there

Which leaves 10% uncertain. Yet Len posted results to four decimal places, as if his tally was that accurate.

So is the commentary on their deficiencies.

> NOTHING was "hidden."

Incorrect.

Len counted multiple filings by the same person as different opinions if they were not identical. Only identical filings by the same person were counted as duplicates. Thus, in his own tally, Len's comments and five reply comments (last time I looked) counted as if they were written by six different people.

Len's postings are also unclear about what was counted. In parts of the posting he uses the word "comments" and in others the word "filings", hiding the fact that he was counting comments and reply comments.

Irrelevant.

Someone else did read them, and came up with a different result than Len.

The final result is what matters.

Incorrect, as shown above.

In other words, Len did not want his results criticized or examined closely. He wanted them accepted as fact, without question.

> There are no "rules" on posting tallies of public opinion

Yet when questions were posed about Len's "rules", he became the source of "continual argument and bickering" rather than answering the questions honestly.

Why not? Is Leonard H. Anderson incapable of error?

all Morse Code testing.

Neither.

Len has repeatedly given opinions about others' motivations, yet will not reveal his own. Except for one outburst in January 2000, he has not expressed the desire or intention to get an amateur radio license.

Veterans of military and government service who disagree with Len have been subject to Len's insults and denigration of their service, regardless of what or when it was. Len's classic "sphinters post" proves that.

for coded extra and a nocode general indeed the coment don't address why we need to have an extra class at

to you

the FCC can glean data from the ebb and flow of the results

the FCC could choose to glean data through the use of Tarrot cards if it chosee

you do not decide what matters. in the end the FCC does, tile then we may speculate and deabte as we choose the R&O when it is realesed is what matters

I did see at least one comment (no idea who's) that mentioned reciprocal licenses. I believe it proposed not the retention of code testing to get a license but some form of code endorsement to satisfy some other country's requirement.

all you have to do is observe the behaviour on this newsgroup.

the outrageous foul language used.

and then listen to 40m

by even attempting to do the morse test shows an attempt and willingness to improve.
something that 2500 showed they didnt have when they ran away.

and worse... they showed it to the authorities.

Here is the definition of hypocrisy:

Getting a ham license today requires memorization of 25 questions. Then, once licensed, the new ham actually believes he is a technical expert, when compared to a cb operator. Worse yet, the new ham reforms overnight and starts turning in truckers to Riley, for operating on the wrong channel.

Steve, since he will not state what happened, I will. In discussing licenses and privileges and so on, I happened to say that the Technician license was a lower class license than General or Extra. He took exception to that and chose to interpret that as meaning the people who hold the license rather than the license itself. Apparently the phrase "lower class" must, in his book, refer strictly to people and is therefore politically incorrect at all times even though it is licenses not people being referred to.

In addition, he has misinterpreted my response to his use of the term "elitist bitch". I had said that he cannot hurt me with such language, which is indeed true. However it is highly objectionable. As I result, I have chosen to shun all his posts (i.e. not respond even if addressed to me or speaking about me). If people are going to stoop to name calling, they have nothing to say that I have any interest in hearing.

Sure, I'll be happy too, just send me your name and address. I can show you how to set up a neat remote base using a VHF radio and a high speed TCP/IP link to do the job that way you can sit back behind the counter selling your grass seed and yakking on the radio back at the ranch. There are Ethernet to serial converters that plug in to a hub and you don't need a computer at the remote end. The serial ports then connect to the radios and other gear. Using rig control software at the home site all radio functions can be controlled over the Internet. Some antenna rotors are also serial port controllable too to round out the operation. The VHF link is used for the audio.

The following sites have a few examples of the converters.

I disagree. There might be one or two idiots but that doesnt fall completely at the ease of getting the licence.

Once again, after showing a willingness to actually bother to get licenced, being it easy or not, they have to purchase the said equipment. Surely your not saying CB'ers who dont give a rats ass about Amateur are spending their hard earnt? money on Amateur kit, and getting registered so you can find out who and where they are... just to mess about and upset a few advanced Amateurs? Seems a very strange way of going about things.

Surely these idiot users are more likely the completely unlicenced users on stolen radios or kids messing about on parents radios while they are out rather than someone who wants to become a "first step" Amateur? Also quite a few people who gain M3 licences or whatever the equivelent in the US surely would go on to intermediate and so on rather than just stop there. A few will yes but many will want to progress.

> when those licensees are governed by rules/regulations then their

Or maybe not....... your now trying to say Amateurs above the entry level never cause interference or mess about sometimes on the air.... b-ll-cks.

Err, whats wrong with CBers becoming radio Amateurs? Its happened for years and years....long before the licence was made easier. And most of them became perfectly respected Amateurs.

NO....idiots on Amateur bands will cause problems. Or do you tar all CB radio users with the same brush?

Saved for what? The fully licenced Annual Amateur Jamboree ?

Oh in that case it must be right then.....

> the plan to get rid of compulsory morse testing for hf access.

For gods sake... morse isnt the "be all and end all of radio", its an old out-dated form of communication which had its use in the past but is now just a form of elitist snobbery. Also trying to say anyone who doesnt want to learn morse is basically a "scumbag" shows Bigotry beyond contempt. Why not welcome the new Amateurs and encorage them to advance rather than look down on them. The licence was made easier because the userbase of Amateur was drastically on the decline. It was done to encorage more people to get involved and keep the "hobby" alive.

Wrong. What you describe is called a "float". But you didn't know that. You also didn't know that that avionics techs are routinely deployed with their units in the FMF. You didn't know these things because you have never been on float. This is supported by the fact that, upon deployment overseas, the Corps (and probably the other services) sends press releases to each Marine's hometown media center, yet there have been no press releases in Ohio, California or Tennessee for any Steve or Steven Robeson, USMC, during the time you claim to have been on active duty (public information, but it was easier for me since I still have connections at the station). The fact is that you were never deployed on float. And you can't do 18 years of active duty and -not- get deployed on float. It's part of the job.

Your pile of dirt grows larger by the day, Dudly.

Not to mention that he just pulled you off your issue. To address your issue, the Marine Corps does not have any medical occupations -- those are all handled by the Navy (the USMC being a branch of the Navy). But that brings up another interesting factoid; if Dudly -did- get his EMT card in '86 and the USMC knew about it, they most likely would have transferred him to the Navy since training for a Corpsman is much more expensive than for an avionics tech, and qualified Corpsmen are hard to find.

who knows if it stolen or imagined it may be stolen Stevie today may have just found the man born stevie j and exchanced id with him to leave behind his record in a life of crime for all we know, or the person posting as Stevie may be one of his kids who just doesn't understand his fathers true record and so loouses it up or it my be a kid repposing as his dad (who was also a liar) all far fecthed I agree but hardly more than some of Stevie gems

a favoritie being that My calling someone an elitist bitch justifies him saying the Todd's dad has aids a good year before I called the gal a bitch

the senario I mentioned are far fecthed but they hang together than stevie's "logic", but even that is like saying someone is more in favor of abolition than a Southern planter in 1860 fear perhaps

after all with an out dated photo his many enemies can't find him as easily

a man as articulate his stebie surely has many folks seeking his company, and no doubt some have unpleasent agnedas

after all he feels the need to show pic of you and me and len to divert them from himself

I have no idea what a "pisecie of chit" could possibly be.

More important is the fact that Len is the first in the discussion to mention "peyote", in an obvious reference to Iitoi's location.
An obvious attempt at misdirection by Len.

We're in agreement on the first part, anyway.

But I doubt it will make any difference. Many of the 18 petitions included various changes to entry-level license privileges, including the very obvious one of giving Novice/Tech Plus HF privileges to all Techs. Yet FCC repeatedly denied all of them.

In the NPRM, FCC makes it clear that their vision of the future looks like this:

Technician: Entry-level license. All VHF/UHF, no HF

General: Mid-level license. All VHF/UHF, most HF/MF

Extra: Top license, all privileges.

Novice, Tech Plus, Advanced: Old license classes that will disappear with attrition.

No free or automatic upgrades. No HF for Technicians who haven't passed a code test.

Yup, Mr Baxter does laugh. As the owner of several hundred acres of prime Maine real estate, a large estate home, an extensive well-stocked ham radio shack, owner of a multi-million dollar trust fund, and having earned an undergraduate and a graduate degree in engineering with honors, Mr Baxter sure does laugh, All The Way To The Bank And he laughs at you, sitting there in your 800 sq ft rented hovel, spewing hate on the internet with your low-end computer and your dial up connection, drinking cheap beer and waiting for your next welfare check to arrive.

Sorry, Frankie.

Perhaps >>IF<< you'd done MORE than one HITCH you'd have had a bit more experience from which to draw on.

They ARE called "cruises". Yes, they are ALSO called "floats".

> Your pile of dirt grows larger by the day, Dudly.

The dirt is yours, Frankie.

Too bad so mcuh of your ONE enlsitment was spent tied up in the Judge Advocate Corps.

And too bad you didn't put as much effort into being the Marine you SHOULD have been then as you perceive yourself now.

Nope.

What's "feeble" are your attempts to salve your twice court-martialed ego.

Ya shudda sucked-it-up and been the Marine you THINK you are now...

"VINSON", other than a United States aircraft carrier was NOT a "system" in ANY avionics system that was in service in ANY USMC aircraft while I was on active duty.

Guess it's a good thing I NEVER "claimed" any valor. And any "stolen" valor in THIS forum is Lennie's tour under the Bear and Markie's tous as a drafted gay pagan colonel in the Army Chemical Corps...Oh, and Frankie's misconception that his "service" was "honorable"

It wasn't then...It isn't now.

You "need" to ignore it since it highlights your foolishness...Not that it takes a lot to do that.

Then we have Frankie of Silliland in yet ANOTHER lie...

Frankie INSISTED that he had ample resources with which to "verify" any claims made, including an infered personal relationship with LtCol Oliver North.

If Frankie can't even research a public resource such as Promotion Board results, then there's massive doubt as to the validity of any other claim he makes.

And it still doesn't wash out the stupidity of YOUR claim, Frankie...

Since when does being an Active Duty Marine mean that a Marine can't ALSO have some other pursuits?

So..there were no Marines who hung out in the autoshop?

No Marines who bowled or played football? No Marines who sang in choirs, volunteered on local VFD's or other social programs?

You've still not even REMOTELY explained how being a Marine prevented me from ALSO being an EMT...Nor have you adequately explained how being an EMT prevented me from being a Marine...

Frankie, You get more and more assinine and, well, SILLY with each subsequent rant!

WHY would the Marine Corps take a Staff Sergeant, later Gunnery Sergeant from a critical MOS and transfer them to the Navy to be a Corpsman just because he has an off-duty interest in EMS?

The Marine Corps ALSO needed snipers, and I took home an "Rifle Expert" on each and every trip to the range. Why not send me to Scout/Sniper school with that logic?

Spin on and on, Frankie.

Everyone's had a more than adequate opportunity to see you dish up your stories only to see you fall flat on your court martialed face.

Coward and Liar...That's Frank Gilliland.

How is it wrong, Mark?

All the FCC proposes to do in the NPRM is to drop Element 1 from the requirements.
Nothing else - in fact, other changes have been specifically denied.

If that is done, the following will be the inevitable result:

> > Technician: Entry-level license. All VHF/UHF, no HF

With no Element 1, the only way for new hams or existing noncodetested
Techs
to get any HF will be to go for General.

> > General: Mid-level license. All VHF/UHF, most HF/MF

As it is today, without Element 1

> > Extra: Top license, all privileges.

Which has been going on for the past 5-1/2 years.

> > No free or automatic upgrades.

Specifically denied by FCC. Nobody loses privileges and nobody gains privileges.

> >No HF for Technicians who haven't passed

That's what Hans is trying to fix.

Unfortunately FCC doesn't seem to see that as a problem.

by not being right

first proble is in asuming the FCC has a vision of the future

second that saying such a vision is clear

the NPRM is anything but clear that is the result they intend. inddeed for the sake the ARS I hope it is what they end up doing.

amusingly so Does Jim Heaney (sp?) of the ARRL meaning that Stevie has lied in claiming he has

I suppose that admiting that he been lying about everything might a be something of defense for the BoN on some of the points of my complaint

but it proves that Stevie is a liar

and there is a defference beween us

When I say something is lying or a liar I am saying they are a part of the human condiction

When Stevie says they are lying he saying they have are beyond all human redemption, and might as well comit suicide

Cmon Hans, get a reality check. Your 'comments' dont matter a twit. The FCC & ARRL partnered in a culture of corruption years ago. Right now, one of their biggest sweats is figuring how to avoid ending up in a federal court with k1man, since they know k1man will prevail.

Hm I don't know K1MAN will pevial I suspect he will as should the FCC.
The FCC does know he will cost them a fair amount of money over something that they as awhole care very little about

BTW has anyone heard anything likr a transfer to Nome Alaska for the guy that made stuff hit the fan in his (K1MAN) case

Correct. There is no prohibition against using "feeble" by non-medical personnel, but you might want to check if there's for medical personnel such as you've claimed to be.

So when I say that you are "nuts," you won't jump up and down and cry like a little baby, claiming I am practicing medicine, have to prove where I went to medical school, who granted my diploma, where was my license issued, blah, blah, blah, like you usually do.

Right?

How is it wrong, Mark?

All the FCC proposes to do in the NPRM is to drop Element 1 from the requirements.
Nothing else - in fact, other changes have been specifically denied.

If that is done, the following will be the inevitable result:

> > Technician: Entry-level license. All VHF/UHF, no HF

With no Element 1, the only way for new hams or existing noncodetested
Techs
to get any HF will be to go for General.

> > General: Mid-level license. All VHF/UHF, most HF/MF

As it is today, without Element 1

> > Extra: Top license, all privileges.

As it is today, without Element 1

> > Novice, Tech Plus, Advanced: Old license classes that will disappear > > with attrition.

Which has been going on for the past 5-1/2 years.

> > No free or automatic upgrades.

Specifically denied by FCC. Nobody loses privileges and nobody gains privileges.

> >No HF for Technicians who haven't passed
> > a code test.

That's what Hans is trying to fix.

Unfortunately FCC doesn't seem to see that as a problem.

---

I don't see it as a problem either. Afterall it will only require that they take the General written test to get on HF. The General test is no harder than the Tech. It just covers some different material as well as repeating some material from the Tech. The new material is no harder just different.

The result of the FCC's approach is that everyone on HF will have taken two or more tests of some kind whether they be written or written and code.
This is not unreasonable.

Brain, you continue to underscore your own double standard.

You want to be able to deceive, intimidate and mislead blindly, but then when asked to pony up substantiation of YOUR claims, everyone's "nuts", etc etc etc.

The BEST it seems you and your Feeble comrades can seem to pull together is the persistent rantings of a semi-literate degenerate and a disgraced, dishonorably discharged ex-Marine who's ONLY valid argument is my incorrect pluralization of "court martial".

They are the epitome of "lame".

There's no "charge".

You make assinine posts about how children should be raised and how lying is an admirable and "moral" trait to teach them.

Why is it that Frank spends a few years in the Marine Corps and knows the lingo, you spend >>>almost<<< a career in the Marine Corps and stumble around for the names of radio gear that you supposedly used, and stumble around using Army phrases instead of Marine phrases, claim

Already been this year. DD-214. You make a copy, sanitize SSN, DOB, scan it and post it instead of that dumpy photo of you on QRZ. Post a message here, then take it down after 24 hours. Then put up a photo of

I understand it was a question.

Can YOU show where I said I was in the Army?

The OTHER question was directed at Markie and HIS suggestion that he served in the Army, using HIS collective "we" to suggest he was a part of it.

Did I say I was?

Where is that?

Frankie pegged nothing, Brain.

Frankie's misrepresentation of the truth about some terminology is, on the face of it, ludicrous. Lame at best, and laughable that in-the-rear-with-the-gear guys such as yourself and Lennie are impressed by his rantings.

First of all, where's this tale about "...names of radio gear you supposedly used" come from? Lennie's tried that rant for years and now Frankie picked up on it.

It never happened. It was part of Frankie's cross-dressing with Lennie.

And as for the "lingo", Frankie needed to be in the Corps longer.
His one tour, half of which was spent digging his butt out of trouble, only left him with HALF the story.

Nice try though.

Both questions not going to be answered...Not because they are fraudulent or "secret", but for the reasons we're already embroiled in THIS spat..."this much" is always the catalyst for more lies and accusations from your side of the fence.

Try to make as much from it as you care to do, Brain, but it's all you've got to play with.

Have fun.

It IS about him. He has no credibility. He lied to his country, he lied to the Corps, and now he's in here salving his "I Cudda Been A Contender" ex-Marine ego by trying to "beat up" on a former SNCO since this is the ONLY way he could do it and not get a third court martial.

Seems to me that that description falls right into your lap, Brain.

And perhaps why you felt compelled to invent your Somalia DXpedition gala...

As for the "liar"...well...All I can say is you've laid quite a bit of track of your own, Brain, and it's not that hard to follow.

Nope.

I've posted numerous publically researchable resources on NUMEROUS "claims", as you call them.

You simply pooh-pooh them off as "unreliable"...As if the USMC or the USAF would lie in order to support any USENET claims or challenges.

And as far as "dumpy" goes, Brain...It will be interesting to see how direct your gig line is, or whether it's a bit, uhhhhh...circumfrential....

What lying?

You keep on about lying, but with the exception of my refusal to discuss some aspects of my service duty, you have yet to validate a single one...

And I told you "have fun" with that one...It's all you get!

No Reserves.

A bit of that yellow creeping back up your spine, Brain?

Can't directly answer the question?

"We" know why!

The TRUTH would set you free!

Nope. I've already provided you with publically researchable resources. You refuse to use them. Oh well.

The closest YOU get to ANYthing deadly is forgetting to turn the

What "assinine behaviour"?

Not tolerating liar and deceivers?

Stop lying. Stop deceiving. See how fast things change for you.

I don't need permission.

Any picture obtained in a public domain does not require the subject's "permission". Your being IN the public domain is "permission".

Ask any papparazzi. That's how they get away with THEIR behaviour.

And the Supreme Court has upheld it.

What "pudgy", Brain...

You keep repeating that easily disproven lie over and over and all it does is substantiate my claim that you ARE a liar.

And Brain...

What is YOUR picture going to reveal...?!?!

Which beliefs would you care for them to comment on?

We've all had rounds on various "beliefs" at one time or another.

The difference between them and your cohorts in the Feeble Five is that at some points we can come to grips with each other.

> It's that whole double-standard thing, right?

Nope. It's that "we can come to an understanding" thing...

I thought you and I had one six or seven months ago, but it seems you weren't happy unless you were spreading more deceit.

Your rules. Ya gotta live by them, Brain.

Like I said, Steve, it's not what Len or Mark or I have said...

It's all about what >>>you<<< have said while claiming the professional capacity to say it.

For your sake, I hope that you really didn't make the phone calls.

I know that you said that you did, but did you really? Did you?

Or were you just lying again?

I figured you were just a lot of bluff and bluster when you said "dialing," and then later you said that you had made the call. Your usual bully role.

Should I check with the various County Health Service and Child Service agencies, the Sheriff? The Boy Scouts? Were you really that stupid to make such calls?

What freq does his group hang out on?
Perhaps they should go to 14.313 as the un-confirmed 'reports' says the recent tornado in evansville has blown the "kooky jooish injun" off the air for the forseeable future. Oh well, one less ham radio nutcase to listen to on 20. Come to think of it
I ain't heard the slack-jawed moron weed-whacker pilot from ga in a few weekends or his babbling cohort from mn either. Are they gone too? Come to think of it even the "great liberty net" was MIA from 75 meters last night also. What gives? Are they all droppin like flies in the fall season? I really missed hearing the Ypsilanti kookenschlong last evening. Ole gnq really is a class-1 fruitcake and a dyed-in-the-wool larouche supporter also who's elevator don't go to the top floors.
If you never heard him pontificate you're missing some great humor folks, nuttier than a nest of cukoo-cukoo birds on april the 1st.

Delighted to hear it. "Ham" radio looks like CB because of the number of CB-ers now infesting it.

Nothing to do with radio, amateur or otherwise.

Gee Does Stevei even reconize St Peter as a good (former or dead these days ) person after all he lied about the Son Of God himself and to Stevie once a liar always a liar cuting the rest

nice post Brain just made the points I wanted

and I will add as further proof of Stevie nutshood
"ere's A "Blast From The Past" Back In Markie's Lap! And He Wonders Why The Whole World Is Laughing At Him!"\

look at the title which is Stevies choice of words
I point out the phrase " The Whole World Is Laughing At Him!"

you know that has to be lie

If I am known to one tenth of one percent of the people of the US let alone the world, I would be deeply shcocked to learn this indeed the assine nature of this assertion by Stevie is one reason I often leave this title alone

all I know is that when I was claed to follow up about some "outragous complaint received by this deparment" complaint like those Stevie claims to have made were made to the State of Michigan, by law I could not be told the name of the author, but after some discussion it was agreed I had a right to know te level of license he was claiming, and that was "LPN"

I agree this is not proof that "Tennessee Nurse: Steven J Robeson, LPN" is the author of that letter but that is most likely explaination my advice says NO, don't call. You will not get much info even if esp if Stevie has called (the exception may be the BSA or the Sheriff) but I think (and going out on a limb) Stevie gaols is get you to make those calls in the hope (on his part) that you will show yourself enough of a paranoid that, to use the layman's express a "Butterflunet gets droped on you"

yes... wallyrally has been hiding in the shadows for over a year.

he/she/it refuses to identify himself when challenged to do so but will publish the name and callsign of other(s) multiple times.

one wonders if he/she/it has some unfortunate status that is best kept out of the way. a srarus that will explain his/her/its attitude towards those who have the courage not to hide when posting on this newsgroup.

he/she/it has criticised the spelling and grammar of other(s) but conveniently ignores the historical catalogue of spelling mistakes that he/she/it has made in the past !!

Don't worry, z??pk has no problem with picking up the baton and defending himself, usually by the wrong end unfortunately...

He loves being called Rumpelstiltskin (• G8OSN), another individual who Mine? Did you lose track of who's who here? Or do you think that anyone who disagrees with you is the same person? It was Lloyd's erudition that was under your attack. (Those who attack their betters merely lower themselves further.)

Anyone who reads his continual bragging knows that he claims to be an LPN.

Could have been any of the anonymous folks that read and post here.
But if it actually had a Tennessee postal mark on it...

I figured as much when he was making his medical diagnoses and claims of "dialing..." lies.

He'd sit back and laugh when I reported back that they hadn't received any such call.

At the very least, this is yet more proof that Steve is a liar.

And another thing. Jim, Dave, and Mike just might have been able to pull Steve back from the brink with a little intervention. But no. They sanctioned his lunacy by "thier" silence.

Wonder how Mike is doing with his BBS? Wonder if it went the way of his high-altitude balloon project?

Mark, you must be hitting pretty close to home. Notice how Steve starts to narrow his claims in such a way that even though he might have made the call or written the letter, he did so without invoking his medical license or making a medical diagnosis. His stupid actions were merely as a "concerned private citizen." Didn't use medical letterhead, didn't use his employers phone, computer or stamp. Didn't do it on duty time.

Hi!

Yet it was signed "Xxxxx Xxxxxxxx, LPN" Ouch!

This is the part where the Titanic Sparkie starts sending "...OSOSOSOSO..." and Jim and Dave and Mike watch their favorite antagonist take a gulp of icy sea water. It all could have been prevented with a little "freindly" intervention. But no.

That comment was meant for the posters who say people on Amateur Bands who do not wish to involve themselves with morse are lowly class CBers who seem to live in trailor parks and live off welfare and care nothing (scumbags in other words) It wasnt aimed directly at you it was put in as an "Also" to those who try to put that image over. Maybe I should have made it a bit clearer.

it is tto late I have amde the call Tb BoN has sent me the form

The problems have been deciding what of stevie's suff to send

It is an interesting tactic I suppose trying to stop me from acting by buries me in eveidence

Stegie at this point has 2 prayers, the BoN does not consider the Cyber world at all real and that the BoN does not mind him carring stuff from the Cyber to offline realms

he can try, the cost to me should be about 750 dollors but I would also pay for most likely suing him for his obvious slanders

My wife tell to risk it after reading just how nuts stevie is I'll bring suit after the hearing is done. That will be when we can add in the BoN's findings of "malicious intent" and that will be all I need to clear Markie's bankroll for some time to come.

wrong again what you will need is a case. Go read the BoN website if they have a hearing at all it will be the TN BoN V Robeson not Mark Morgan v Robeson any damahe you suffer would be at the hands of the BoN which likely is covered by Soverign Inmunity you'd lack a case also hold your breath wiating for the hearing according the BoN it would be months away

I have a float jacket hanging in my closet, not a 'cruise jacket'. I got it while I was on a Med float with the Sixth Fleet. That's 'Med' as in Mediterranian, not Medical. Go to Australia or Japan and you are on a 'West-Pac float', as in West Pacific. Etc. It's never referred to as a "cruise" because a cruise is a term of enlistment, as I said before.

Bad time is tacked onto the end of the enlistment. No enlistment time is "tied up". But after 18 years on active duty you knew that already, didn't you?

If you had been active duty then you would know the difference between "inferred"..... actually, it should be "implied". But I implied nothing. I explicitly stated the nature of my contact with Oliver North (a Major at the time). You still seem to be under the impression that I can just email the Fox News Channel and he'll reply back like I

Yes I did, Dud..... because you were a Reservist, not an active duty Marine. And that's the -ONLY- way that could happen. Haven't you been paying attention?

It didn't prevent you from being a Reservist, and I made no such

You do, and for at least two reasons: 1) You make it your business to correct everyone else's grammar, and 2) You are compelled to press any issue that you think will discredit me and divert attention away from the fact that you are a very disturbed person.

Once again, Major Dud -- a medical discharge is a 'general' discharge, not an 'honorable' discharge. But if you have proof to the contrary (as well as proof that you were active duty for those 18 years) then

by all means prove me a liar.

> (Was that "literate" enough for you, Frankie...?!?!)

Just holding you to your own standards.

>Steve "Weekend Warrior" Robeson, K4YZ

It really bugs you that a shitbird PFC earns an honorable discharge while you skated out on a medical discharge after 18 years, doesn't it? It must -really- irk you that the same shitbird PFC is tearing down the false-front you have built around your mediocre "career" as a Marine reservist. Well, that's your problem, Dud. Deal with it.

Dudly the Imposter has no "facts" to accuse anyone of anything.

I started the "score card" postings on 2 August 2005 after accumulating enough opinion data on WT Docket 05-235 filings to see four categories. The first non-FCC filings began on 20 July 2005.

The official Comment beginning did not occur until the Federal Register notice of NPRM 05-143 on 31 August 2005. At that date I elected to show a double tally of opinions, the original one and one that began on 31 August. The first posting of that new tally format began 1 September 2005.

Due to a great number of posts under the above 2nd subject thread that went beyond the scope of the "score card," I changed the "score card" posts to another thread beginning 17 October 2005. The same format of the 2nd thread ("double tally") was kept in this third thread.

The tally postings were almost daily except for one 2 1/2 week period in September-October when my wife and I were on a trip and I was away from easy Internet access and tallies. All of the categorizations were done as honestly and fairly as possible, reading each of the Comments and Replies to Comments. Opinions of greater than 90% of all filings were rather obviously in three categories of For the NPRM, Against the NPRM, or Code-Test-for-Extra-but-OK-to-drop-code-test-for-other-classes.

All of my "score card" postings are still in Google and may be accessed by anyone with Google access. NOTHING was "hidden." By viewing the continuously-posted tally postings, it is quite evident that a better than 2:1 ratio in favor of the NPRM was held at the starting weeks of the Comment period. That ratio began to change from the date of notice in the Federal Register that the NPRM Comment period had begun on 31 August 2005. The tallies can be verified by anyone reading all 3,760 filings in WT Docket 05-235 as of the close of ECFS updates on 10 November 2005.

It should be noted that the official Comment period on NPRM 05-143 ENDED on 31 October. The Reply to Comments period is still officially OPEN until Monday, 14 November 2005, as stated in the Federal Register of 31 August 2005. Among the 9 official Replies to Comments (the other 48 are unofficial Comments), all of them are FOR the NPRM. Those who bother to look at the many tally postings I made will see the trend of opinion changing weekly. Nothing was hidden.

Posting of the "score card" was terminated after the official end of the Comment period on 31 October 2005. The number of other posts of continual argument and bickering were so great that it was no longer worthwhile to continue the tally posting in public.

There are no "rules" on posting tallies of public opinion except those of the person(s) doing the tally. That another has posted an alleged "analysis" of WT Docket 05-235 filing contents is not any valid argument against what I have done.

> None-the-less, it will be interesting to see, after whatever >action the FCC takes in regards to dropping the Code Test, if Lennie >will then get the "Extra Lite" (or any other HF-authorized license) or >continue to spam the NG with his anti-Amateur Radio bile...

Irrelevant and incorrect. What I do in the future is of no concern to any action of the FCC to make a final Report and Order as a result of the end of the Comments and Replies to Comments. The Commission will make a decision at some future time but that time will not be soon. The number of filings in WT Docket 05-235 exceed those made on WT Docket 98-143 ("Restructuring") by about 1,500; WT Docket 98-143 had only about 2,200 filings in the official Comment and Replies to Comments period of about 11 months time.

As to the past, Dudly the Imposter has NOT yet provided any proof whatsoever that he was ever IN any of the alleged "seven hostile actions" he claimed he was in. He has NOT yet been able to name a single item of radio communications equipment used by him for military radio communications. Dudly has NOT proven that he knows anything about electronics engineering or radio design other than claiming less than a half year's employment as a purchasing agent at a smallish electronics company. Dudly the Imposter has been challenged with providing proof of his alleged USMC Gunnery Sergeant rating by another, a USMC veteran who HAS provided enough visible evidence that what this other USMC veteran has written. Dudly has NOT yet explained how he got a "changed-to-honorable-from-medical" discharge from the military AND received a pension that is available only after 20 years' military service. Us readers have NOTHING from Dudly other than a number of written postings full of personal insults such as -

> Putz.

Dudly the Imposter is a fraud, a travesty of a wannabe military hero who cannot prove a thing he has claimed. Given that we passed Veterans' Day, Dudly the Imposter has cast great dishonor on himself, the United States Marine Corps, and all United States Amateur Radio Extra class grantees.

On the con-man scale of 1 to 10, Dudly the Imposter (aka "United States Air Force Auxilliary" MAJOR) might nudge the meter to a 2...with enough QRM to raise baseline...

Probably because he hasn't found a good dentist yet. We haven't seen one picture of him showing his teeth. Well, he might not have any? USAF ought to have some dentists around to help him out. [they helped out W when he "fought" for this country in the Air Guard]

USAF Auxilliary "MAJOR!" He gots Flight Suit and everything! [but no dress blues]

Dudly ought to have gone down to Texas and joined the Confederate Air Force. Everyone there is a COLONEL!

Wow, some Rank! (not speaking of insignia or title)

It makes "MAJOR" Robeson happy. He is a "Man of Many Talents!"

Lots of imagination at any rate...plus great puffing of steam about his "exploits" and "being homeland security before there was homeland security!"

Dudly went from fake Gunnery Sergeant, USMC, to a "commission" in the Tennessee State Guard ("1st Lt"). TN State Guard is about as military as a fraternal order with surplus uniforms that meets one night once a month and NOT a part of the National Guard.
Apparently his "commission" in the TN State Guard has been tossed so he joined CAP and thinks he is now "USAF" Auxilliary.

"Commission" in those two "military" organizations? A Con-Job snow job on some "auxilliary's" recruiter to sign a piece of paper to that "rank." No OCS, NO four years at the USAF Air Academy or Army's Military Academy at West Point.

I find his feeble snow-jobs fascinating in a weird way. :-)

He's such an outright FRAUD about it all, it's fun to see others taken in by it all!

Of course, most of the others (who "defend" him) are doing it for their own purposes as mighty macho motivated morsemen on the morse code test issue. Dudly doesn't realize he is being USED by them! :-)

Hans Brakob (a REAL USN Master Chief) used to challenge him and finally gave up. Jimmie Noserve tried some limp-wristed ruler-slapping on him a few times and then gave up. Heil (who chastises everyone challenging him on anything) hasn't said much to him in public. Some of the Four Morsemen of the Apocalypse are strangely silent. [Hans is a long-time morse man but is against the morse code test for amateur radio licensing]

>He posted the dates. In his mind that's Prima Facie.

Sigh...Dud can't show REAL evidence...it would reveal his total FRAUD (aka snow job) if the truth came out. Everyone who is released from active duty in the U.S. military gets a DD-214. In that short document (most are only one page of entered data) is contained the REASON for release in addition to rank at time of release. Also the branch of service which is now in sincere doubt. [DD-214s were in use in 1956 as well as now, only the format has changed slightly over the years]

A digitized image of a DD-214 would show enough tell-tales on whether it was a forgery or not. It wouldn't be surprising if Dudly tried some forgery on A DD-214 and tried to use that.

The point is that Dudly hasn't even TRIED to digitize any REAL evidence to back him up on his "service record." Not since 1998 in here. Seven years and NO evidence. Sort of like his infamous "seven hostile actions" claim.

>>> I even posted the Selection Board for my promotion to Staff

>>But you're prone to lying. What are we to believe?
>Doesn't matter since there's nothing he has ever posted that verifies

Dudly's misdirection is to make his challengers "go get the facts!" :-)

A typical misdirection used to be "Call the VA!" Like they would hop on their terminal and bring it up immediately on a phone call? :-) No way. The "VA" would get it from the National Archives in St. Louis just like everyone else but the folks there won't let it pass without some QUALIFIER... like being a veteran, a family relation of a veteran, or a bona fide investigating agency like DCAS or FBI. NARA has the forms on line if anyone wants to try it, but without the Social Security Number of the veteran (or the requestor if a private individual), it is SOL time. Note that is still needed if the veteran has an old-style military branch service number (like mine of RA 16 408 336). GOOD protection from higher-class Con Men using information for even greater fraud than Dudly tries in here.

Another misdirection Dudly tried was to "contact [an old unit] and get verification!" Dud tried that twice, but doesn't understand that military units undergo considerable change in two decades, become deactivated or merge with other units. Neither will those present-day military units just give out the information on a whim or request from some unauthenticated requester.

>>> Again...You and Frankie of Scummiland

>LOL!!!

Heh heh heh heh. Usual Dudly personal insults. When he is not taken at "face value" (his postings in here) then he jumps into the Personal Insult mode.

He also huffs and puffs "LIAR!" to anyone disagreeing with him by presenting facts against his imaginative claims. :-)

He gets into classic insult mode with me by using the Yiddish pejorative "putz" as a tag line in messages to me.
Tsk, tsk, tsk, Dud thinks I am Jewish? I am a Lutheran.
My wife was raised Presbyterian but we've gone to services

Dudly tries to use "Google provides!" as a common reply, but all Google has is Dudly's newsgroup postings. Google does NOT have any digitized images of REAL paperwork verifying anything that Dud said.

Tsk, tsk, tsk...Dud made a slip there on using "left" instead of "retired." [that's why he rates such a low number on the Con Man scale...his incosistency in lying]

Dudly once slipped and said he had a medical discharge from the USMC. He tried vainly to "change" that to an Honorable in another series that managed to denunciate all who remarked on that by using the standard personal insult schtick of his.

At the end of that tirade of how-dare-we-challenge-this-hero he "explained" it was due to an "accident." The details of that "accident" were never explained; Dud must have lost his creative fantasy spark for a while. So, we don't really know how Dud got tossed out. One can surmise, from over ten thousand postings in this newsgroup, that he got tossed for mental problems.

Dudly did it again...misdirection, diversion...avoids having to state any DETAILS of what he claimed he was.

Used to was that USN nurses were commissioned officer rank and USN Pharmacist Mates (or something like that) were enlisted rank. Can't say for sure since the only time I've seen any MDs in uniform for any reason in the last three decades were USAF Air Surgeons. :-)

Brings up an interesting point. Dudly went and got his TN State Guard "commission" as a "1st Lt" and then into the CAP as a "Captain" (now, supposedly, as a "Major"). Since military doctors are of commissioned rank, it's possible that Dudly was trying to pull off some scam about being an "MD" with that "commission." Why, I have no idea (other than to snow folks in ham radio newsgroups). :-)

Tsk, tsk, tsk...Dudly using "ex" marine instead of his former sanctimonious "I'll always be a marine" huffing-puffing. More lapses of continuity in his con game.

>> who places his own ego and self-righteousness over >>truth and dignity.
>Uh....yeah, that's why I called myself a "shitbird PFC", huh?

Poor Dudly is doing the "transferrence" thing in his personal insult throwing...probably without realizing it. Common syndrome explained to basic psychology students in first year.

He takes HIS faults and throws them at others as if the others were "at fault." That has been consistent over seven years in here. Some instructors refer to that as a "mirror syndrome," where the subject is using a sort of "mirror" to themselves and then "seeing" the other person in that "mirror."

Dudly has a desperate NEED to be "better" than those around him. One way to do that is to have some kind of "official rank" that gives him a "title." Since he has this terrible fixation with military service and uniform-wearing, he goes for the "commission" in uniform. An enlisted ranking is now "below" his list of "better-than-you" ideas.

Of course, he is stuck with "commissions" on PAPER such as the Tennessee STATE Guard (no relation with National Guard) and the Civil Air Patrol (tsk, can't call them that, they are "Auxilliary United States AIR FORCE" members). They were "homeland security before there was homeland security!" :-)

Frank, please do NOT give ground on this. You are right and the "real" truth must apply.

We readers have had more than SEVEN YEARS of waiting for ANY written proof of Dudly the Imposter's "service" and it has NOT appeared. All that exists is Dudly's newsgroup messages that he is "telling the truth" (and that everyone challenging him is "lying"). Not one single person reference (in 18 years NO namable friends for reference?), not one single digitized image of REAL documents (such as a DD-214), not one single digitized photo of Dudly doing his "USMC Avionics Tech" thing (in 18 years nothing?). Total ZERO references that could prove his case. He has no case. He is a fraud.

Frank, you know, I know, and all readers know that Dudly has NO valid documentation. He cannot provide what he does NOT have. If you keep your word, YOU will be HERE forever! :-)

>The Man in the Maze
>QRV from Baboquivari Peak, AZ
>
>PS: The correct name is Iitoi, not iitoi.

It is NOT, little brother.

At best it is Papago Pete or as a simple Basket Case...

In Tohono O'odham LEGENDS it goes something like this:

"The 'Man in the Maze' legend is of Iitoi, also known as Elder Brother. Spared from death by his creator because of his true and honest ways, he was chosen to help create the Hohokam people from whom the Tohono O'odham descended, after a flood killed all the other desert people who had turned sinful."

There's much more, including "Iitoi being placed on Baboquivari mountain." [by the creator] Lovely add-on to legend on how butterflies were created, very cute. :-)

Basket making is a long-honored tradition of the Tohono O'odham and many of their baskets include a maze in the weaving design with a crude figure of a person entering/leaving the maze... hence the "Man in the Maze" as the LEGEND is known today.

In order to be capitalized as Iitoi, if you are not of Japanese ancestry and bearing that Anglicized version of the Japanese family name, then you have to be long dead and the stuff of legends to use "Iitoi." You are none of those, hence the uncapitalized "name" of iitoi to denote a LITTLE brother.

Are you the stuff of legend? Or just stuff? Maybe others could use a "title/name" of some religion? How about Jesus Christ himself? Or one of the apostles? How about "Sistah" of Bhudda? Or Muhammad's own mountain? Not much basket weaving about that, I realize, and little hope (or Hopi) for profit (or prophet). Promoting yucca baskets is more "mystical."

I realize that morse code radiotelegraphy is sometimes worshipped as a legend, but I don't think "the People" will accept that. You tell us, LITTLE brother. Do "the People" revere morse code? Do they worship St. Hiram and the legendary "T.O.M.?"

Many Navajo call themselves The People. There can't be TWO "People" can there? Do you ascribe "true and honest ways" to the Navajo?

What do "The People" think of amateur radio periodical cover designs and publishing logos? You seem to be hot to trot to FIGHT over a periodical that stopped publishing 15 years ago. Do "The People" think Ham Radio magazine is now the stuff of legends?

Have you checked with Zenna Henderson on "The People?" She wrote much about "The People." Unfortunately, those were not of this earth.

By the way, I come from Chief Blackhawk country where the Winnebago were "The People." Gee, that makes THREE "The People!" Wow, legend-ary dispute!

I'm like bored with Jimmie Noserve and his never-ceasing battle to save morsemanship in amateur radio. He is not without sin yet he keeps on casting stones. He has the gall to do it. May his gall stones give him pleasure.

Now, if I want to hear about "The People," I can find out from some Hopi I'm acquainted with. But, I would rather read the mysteries of Tony Hillerman and get all "The People" information from Joe Leaphorn and Jim Chee thoughts while working with the Navajo Tribal Police. More exciting reading (plus intellectual puzzle fun) to read those novels than a lot of "legendary" gall stone passers' output in this newsgroup.

Get those basket weavers to improve on the man in the basket design, okay? Right now it looks like a little stick figure. Don't try to "stick us" with some nonsense of "legends."

Hi All,

So Glad to be typing with a belly ful of cum.

My trucker friends took me for a ride to the New Oleans gulf coast. It was so fucking cool that the niggers were all gone. I was so fucking happy I sucked off over 300 truckers on my ride home.

Lee, I want you in my ass. Fuck me! Fuck me like the petro slut you know I am!!

Since when does it require an MCO for a superior officer to give a legal and lawful order to a subordinate? The granting of liberty is at the discretion of the unit's commanding officer. And liberty doesn't mean you are free to do as you please. If you come back from a 96 with a decent sunburn you can end up with NJP -- that very situation has happened more than once.

"What MCO was violated?" That's the wrong question, Dud. The right question is, "What MCO grants a CO the authority to let his Marines take on obligations outside the Corps that could, and very possibly will, conflict with the obligations of the Corps?" The answer is....
There isn't one.

Yeah, I know what you mean. When I visited Disneyland back in '82 I caught a kid who fell down a flight of stairs. It doesn't make me a hero, just the dope who happened to be there at the time. I've had a few things like that happen, as I'm sure a lot of people have. Anyone else would have done the same. In fact, most people who -have- been able to save life and limb by nature of circumstances consider their actions to have been a natural response. But most people don't define their lives and "careers" by such actions. That is, most -normal- and -mentally balanced- people.

Nice try, Dud, but it won't work. I have no doubt that you -were-allowed to work as an EMT simply because you were a reservist. It would be a different story if you were on active duty at the time.

Beats me. But I've never heard of an EMT that was also on active duty. Never would have happened in any of the units I was in. In fact, in 3/8 you couldn't even get a part-time job delivering pizza since no outside employment was allowed by order of the CO, period.

> I'd love to see the MP's dragging off-duty Marines from firetrucks >and ambulances.

That sort of stuff turns you on, huh? Well, it doesn't really matter since the Marines don't have MP's..... they have SP's. That pile of dirt just keeps getting bigger and bigger. Stay tuned because one day real soon I plan to compile all of your military 'wisdom' into one big easy-to-reference list.....LOL!!!

More proof that you were never on active duty: frequently there are times when you don't have access to a telephone, especially when liberty is cancelled because the alert status of the base or unit is raised. In those cases, outside comm is usually prohibited because of security issues. Happened when the US shot down the Libyan jets, when Beirut got bombed, when Reagan invaded Grenada..... Speaking of which, I had a friend in 2/8 that I knew from MCAGCC. They were prohibited from using the telephone several days before deployment, outgoing mail was held on ship during transit, and even the ship's MARS station was shut down.

But you never experienced such things because you were never on active duty..... -or- on float.

Being an EMT does not require an obligation? You make it sound like a hobby. You must not have taken the job very seriously.

'obligation'. Well, now you do so you don't have an excuse. Name one of those Marines that was written up in Leatherneck for being an EMT

Don't try to be clever, Dud -- in your desperation to defend your fake service record you forgot about the other 3 years and 8 months..... or was it 5 years and 8 months..... gee, Dud, make up your mind: were you an EMT on active duty for four or six years?

I have no problem with it at all. In fact, I have the highest respect for most of the staff NCO's I've met over the years. Funny tho, every one of them who retired held a rank higher than Gunny..... why do you suppose that is, Dud? Come to think of it, most of the SNCO's I knew made Gunny within 8-10 years. And it didn't take them 8 years to get promoted to First/Master Sergeant. But then they were active duty.....

I suppose I should dumb down my statement to a level that you can understand: Just because some active duty Marines were allowed to take part-time jobs is not proof that you were ever on active duty. Is that simple enough? Or do I need to draw a Venn diagram (i.e, a picture)?

Absolutely. You accuse me of lying because I broke my oath. You broke -your- oath to your wife and to your God. Therefore, you lied to your wife and to your God. If you don't have enough respect for your God to keep -your- oath, what makes you think that you can hold someone else to the same standard? So it really IS a do-as-I-say-not-as-I-do thing, isn't it?

You will never understand the difference, Dud: I'm not holding you to -my- standard -- I'm holding you to a -higher- standard, just as you would expect. Despite this, you waste your time in the newsgroups throwing around school-yard banter, covering your lies with more lies, and disgracing honorable institutions by leeching their honor and integrity to feed your personal pride and delusions of heroism. Even when I'm not here you pray to me because you don't have the discipline (let alone the common sense) to avoid arguing with someone whom -you- describe as "silly". The fact is that you -can't- set a standard that is higher than mine, a shitbird PFC. Add to that the fact that your tactics are lame and impotent, your 'facts' are generally wrong, and you tuck tail and run from every challenge to the legitimacy of your claims about your military "career", and anyone can see that -your- standards are well below mine, let alone the standards required of a Marine Gunny.

Nope, you were never active duty. You're a Major Dud.

Oh, so of those 10+ years of experience you claimed to have in 1998, six of them were actually only part-time? How "part time" were they?
10hrs/wk on the average? So those six years of experience while on active duty is really equal to only 1-1/2 years or so of full-time experience? Only a fourth of full-time experience? That's a pretty big disparity, Dud, although not uncharacteristic of your propensity to 'stretch' the truth. But claiming to have 400% more experience than you really had..... that's called "stretching the truth a little too far" and I don't buy it. In your posts you omit the fact that much of your experience wasn't spent as a career. In fact, you state quite clearly in several posts that EMT -was- your career for all those years, even while working at the hospital in California. So either you lied about having a career as an EMT while on active duty, or you are lying about -not- having a career as an EMT while on active duty, or you are lying about being on active duty. Take your pick.

BTW, you never did answer the question of where you were stationed when you worked as an EMT in PA. Care to give it another try?

What, are you dense? Haven't you been paying attention all this time? Did I not declare, long ago, that I spent time in the brig? Are you actually -trying- to look like a moron? If you are, it's working.

And I never stated, suggested or implied that you "stood" any pushishment for anything. But that wasn't the issue. Not being granted liberty is not restriction. Restriction in regards to punishment simply means that restrictions are placed on your liberty (when granted). You don't know the difference. You claim to have spent 18 years on active duty, where the duty of every NCO is to pull an occasional 24-hr shift in the OOD's office (sometimes as the OOD), the place where Marines on restriction show up every two hours to sign their restriction forms..... yet you don't know the difference.

You didn't spend 18 years on active duty, Dud.

I degrade only your service as a reservist, Dud. I do it because of the way -you- feel about -yourself-. You hate yourself for what you think are your failings; for being a reservist that never saw action and got drummed out of the Corps on a medical discharge. And because you hate yourself so much, it's easy to push your buttons.

As for me, the only buttons you can push are your fraudulent claims about being retired, your "seven hostile actions", and serving your time on active duty -- fabrications which, ironically, are the product of your self-hatred. It's no suprise that I have become your primary adversary. But you don't even see that you are really arguing with yourself, not with me.

Sometimes I think that you actually -want- me to post undeniable proof of your bogus service claims so you can quit living the lie. I will in due time, but not before I get my kicks by letting you suffer the torment of being stuck in your own web of lies.

No, Dudly. I have clearly stated several times that I think there is nothing at all wrong with being a reservist. It may be different than active duty, but is no less worthy of pride and honor. The problem is that -you- don't feel that way. It is -you- that feels a reservist is "less-than-adequate" and not worthy of the same respect as a Marine who served on active duty. I just push that button and, as expected, you thrash around in a defensive fit of grade-school name calling and emotionally charged avoidance tactics. You really need to learn some discipline, Dud.

Very well, I shall give it as much weight as the rest of your claims: none.

> You were incompetent as a Marine when you were on active duty and >you're incompetent to sit in judgement of anyone who was in the >Marines.

True or not, the fact remains that I earned an honorable discharge and you got kicked out on a medical. The fact remains that I saw action (and wish I hadn't) and you didn't (and wish you did). The fact remains that I served my time on active duty while you were a reservist. Hmmmm..... you claim that your 6 years of EMT work was part-time, and a reservist is really a part-time job too.....

Let's see now..... one weekend a month, that's 48 x 12 = 576 hours/yr. Add to that 2 weeks a year, which is another 336 hours. So that's 912 hours/yr, times 16 years (18 years less boot camp and technical MOS training, a very generous estimate) which is 14,592 hours. Now that converts to 608 days, or 1.665 years. So for all practical purposes, after 2 years of boot camp and MOS training you served the active duty equivalent of slightly more than 1-1/2 years, for a grand total of 3-1/2 years, which is -LESS- than my 4 year cruise.

Kiss my hash mark, Major Dud!!!

I can just imagine the MAJOR getting behind someone and opening fire.
"He invaded my airspace, he invaded my airspace!" Then he shoots his prop off.

And he tries so hard. Kind of sad, isn't it? Should we clue him in that it's "Major?" No need to go ALLCAPS for emphasis.

Hmmmm? No teeth? But that's not on the list of the things that's supposed to happen when you shoot your mouth off.

The Air Force Service Dress Uniform will show off that belly of his. I'm thinking that's why no new "official" photo. He's on a weight profile.

Colonel Dudley Sanders. I can just imagine him frying up a mess of chicken for the Confederate Air Force.

Do we have a photo of him in his Tennessee Militia uniform?

How about a white dress and white shoes?

amusing that he plays this game and still whines that I let him stable my KY Colnel Staus together with my service record so when he "tried" to verify anything folks would laugh at him.

I was deliberately deceptive , proper since he threatened to kill me.

I was going to say... im hetrosexual but find the thought of a woman pissing on me a bit offputting to say the least. Is it a "Gay" thing or is it just a "Sicko" thing? Also the people who go on about men taking it up the butt seem to have no problem with women taking it up the butt. So its not an anal thing as such. Strange old world isnt it.

I suspect I might be able to name one, Steven J Robeson, just not the person posting the more he goes on and on the more I suspect he found the origanal Steve J Roberson dead, perhaps the current one killed him in a car accident (or got him killed by telling a lie) and took on his life, but he doesn't know enough about that life to live it

I can explain it for you though

Dudly thinks no one would do anything they did not think was right, and moral and proper

therefore you must have felt it ok to be courtmartialed or you would commited hari-kari first, before standing trail, therefore the fact you are still alive means you found it to be OK to be courtmartaled

Stevie tried the same stunts with me
I say it is ok to lie when diverting danger or direct attacks sthings like that, therefore stevie claims i have said in the same word it is desireable that the world is as it is and such lying is sometime a good idea

Absolutely. You accuse me of lying because I broke my oath. You broke -your- oath to your wife and to your God. Therefore, you lied to your wife and to your God. If you don't have enough respect for your God to keep -your- oath, what makes you think that you can hold someone else to the same standard? So it really IS a do-as-I-say-not-as-I-do thing, isn't it?

You will never understand the difference, Dud: I'm not holding you to
-my- standard -- I'm holding you to a -higher- standard, just as you would expect. Despite this, you waste your time in the newsgroups throwing around school-yard banter, covering your lies with more lies, and disgracing honorable institutions by leeching their honor and integrity to feed your personal pride and delusions of heroism. Even when I'm not here you pray to me because you don't have the discipline (let alone the common sense) to avoid arguing with someone whom -you-describe as "silly". The fact is that you -can't- set a standard that is higher than mine, a shitbird PFC. Add to that the fact that your tactics are lame and impotent, your 'facts' are generally wrong, and you tuck tail and run from every challenge to the legitimacy of your claims about your military "career", and anyone can see that -your-standards are well below mine, let alone the standards required of a Marine Gunny.

There is more than one Lloyd posting here. Only Wiseman continually thinks some guy named Lloyd in Alabama is the one and only Lloyd posting here. All one has to do is examine the properties of the post, but Wiseman, despite his correspondence Masters Degree from DeVry, is unable to do that. BTW, I am not the offended Lloyd. I have lived in Detroit all my life.

IT IS MY OPINION THAT... theres a difference between a cb'er who choses to join and amateur radio to improve his/her knowledge and capability with radio
and a cb'er who choses to invade amateur bands just to have extra bands to play with and brings his/her 11m habits with him/her

This new information gives me insight into how Steve thinks.

We were given an amateur emergency response scenario by one of the regulars on here. He stated the served agencies requirements and the number of volunteers available. I said that the volunteer group could not meet those stated requirements with available resources. Steve said they could, and wrote a duty schedule with long periods of uncovered and undercovered periods.

Probably goes back to his "service" days where he left his unit hanging and thought nothing of it.

In the end, he said that I said that no volunteer group could ever satisfy an agencies requirements, a lie like his many other lies. I don't know about the USMC, but in the Air Force, we call uncovered periods in a duty schedule "AWOL" and the person presently on duty just eats it.

But I understand that some reserve units are more laid back.

What are the odds of being in a single hostile action if you've never been deployed?

I'm thinking zero. Now multiply that by seven.

Steve served alone. "A Marine Corps of One!"

Almost sounds like a recruiting slogan, doesn't it?

FWIW, the AF reserves have "Air Reserve Technicians" that serve full time as if on active duty. Maybe the USMC/R have the same deal.

No "Stars & Stripes" article?

No "N/MC Times" article?

No installation newspaper articles?

Hero Steve must have laid pretty low those 18 years.

Yikes! Condemned to RRAP for a lifetime?

My single reason for staying on is that I wouldn't let these pricks (roughly the equivalent of "putz") run me off. I'm waiting for Mike Coslo to get his BBS up and running so most of the esteemed riffraff will depart. My plan is to turn off the lights, but it hinges on Coslo making a success of himself. What are the odds?

Why isn't it right?

The NPRM makes it clear the FCC does have a vision of the future.

> second that saying such a vision is clear

Have you read the NPRM? FCC makes it clear they think a three-level license system is best for the ARS. They also think that the Technician - with no HF privileges - is the right entry-level license.

Read the parts where FCC turns down all the proposals for a new entry-level license class. And the parts where FCC turns down expanded privileges for Techs.

It's clear what FCC intends.

Wrong! ARRL has petitioned for more privileges for the entry-level license.

Hi! You refer a person to a prescription drug and say it is your professional medical opinion that they take it, and then you say that you are not practicing medicine.

I use a non-medical term, "crazy" and "nuts" and you claim I am making a medical diagnosis.

How double of you.

It will be interesting to see what traffic turns up on those two (now vacant) BBS's recommended by N9OGL.

For the uninformed, "Lolicon" is a Japanese term for the sexual attraction to underage girls, or ephebophilia, and "Hentai" is the Japanese word meaning perverted.

Whether or not N9OGL is gay suddenly seems unimportant.

I was thinking back to simpler times on RRAP; about a lad who came upon this motley group and immediately became the darling of one faction of the code test/no code test war. This old post kind of distilled those thoughts.

Enjoy. The suprise is at the end.

No, no. But that's what most everything here boils down to. Might as well get it out of the way so they can decide which side to put you on.
Kind of like a young man named Val. He came on here saying all the right things about Morse code. He was their little darling. Said he was going to take the code test.

There are four basic truths here:

You took the code exam and you like code: you're OK.
You took the code exam and you don't like the code: you're an idiot.
You never learned the code but want to: you're OK.
You never learned the code and don't want to: you're an idiot.

Kind of like a young man named Val. He came on here saying all the right things about Morse code. He was their little darling. Said he was going to take the code test.

For the record, I don't support code testing as a separate pass/fail HF exam.

And the suprise? It's no suprise at all. Valentine Germann' license has been unmodified since April 1, 2002. But he sure was the darling while he was here. Hi!

Oh good a japanese language lesson, and yes your correct hentai means what it means and lolicon means what it means, however you forgot one word...The word you forgot is OTAKU which is japanese meaning "obsessive fan" or "die hard fan", The word Otaku is mostly associated with Japanese Animation or Anime. Hentai and lolicon is part of japanese anime scene. The problem with my board is that there are too many hentai/lolicon boards out there that it hard to get people to come to a newly started board. Hentai/ lolicon boards are also associated with the japanese anime scene, that the majority of materials on these board are not real pictures but anime type pictures, which is legal anywhere in the united states.

Mark,
I'll ask very nicely, stop nym shifting to by-pass filters and stop cross posting this dribble. I kill filed you under two other nyms, now you re-appear under this one, that in itself means that you are purposely trying to by-pass filters to harass and cause hate & discontent.
I originally KF'd you because you try to talk like someone with an education, but yet you have seemed to forgotten some of the basic spelling and grammar skills that most 6th graders learned. Either you don't know how to use spell-check on you're computer or you don't know what a dictionary is, no matter what, you are nothing more than some sort of self flattering troll with illusions of grandeur.
Just stick with one nym , if Steveo wants to keep busting your chops by responding, fine, but I myself have no desire to see some of the worst grammar since I was in grade school.

I see.

"Otaku Hentai" means "obsessive fan of perversion".
"Otako Lolicon" means "die hard fan of attraction to underage girls".

Thanks for the clarification. Pokemon for middle-aged perverts.

Whish is firmly where the responsibility is meant to lay. The Licensee is the one responsible for the correct operation of his station at all times.
If he is not physically present, it is his/her responsibilty to ensure that

Yes, I agree with you whole heartedly but many older Hams refer to "both" as simply CB'ers. This "will" upset genuine CB radio operators, and those who did advance to Amateur from CB, as many full licence Hams dont seem able to distinguish between the two, or dont want to distinguish... thats the problem.
Also the point still stands that a few, if not lot of problems on Amateur bands could be down to kids going on their parents equipment while they are out. There are lots of possibilitys but the CB'er gets it in the neck all the time.

Not absolutely correct. Correct in some instances but i know lots of people on 11 meter who go on SSB (illegaly of course) who treat it sensibly and dont mess about. Many 11 meter users, especially the SSB users, have reasonably good control on the airwaves even to the point of writing a log and QSL'ing. These are CB'ers im talking about by the way, not Amateurs although I know a couple of Amateurs who used to join in occasionally (using their pirate call signs of course)

Maybe not to the point of disconnecting his/her equipment but at least bringing up their kids to be respectful of things. I would personally put a lock on the "shack" door so I could secure the room but some people have them in their living room so sometimes I guess its asking for trouble. My CB is in my office and also one in my repair "shack" and when I go out I make sure both are locked. If I can do it for CB why cant they do it with their Amateur kit... which is far more valuable in any case. Mind you, some adults cant even be arsed to secure their guns but thats a different story.......

No, Otako means "obsessive anime fan" hentai and lolicon are part of anime world. One other note, those sites are no longer used I'm consolidating all the groups into one board http://12.156.123.39/azbb/azbb.php that's why those boards are empty.

not exactly or only in theory the Ham is responible for the use of his equipement, but when was the last time the FCC tried to bust a ham for say someone breaking into his car and using the equipment

In addition some modes can be used without the ham being present at all

My car for example will transmit an APRS signal at intervals anytime the engine is running, unless I turn it off each time I turn on the engine. This allows me to kow where the body thing is if my old man calls back to house and tells me he is lost, or if I found the car missing and knew none of had it I could tell the cops where to go find the theives

What a wholesome site --- it has dirty Pokemon picture categoriees for everyone!

There's a softcore Ecchi section.

There's a perversion (Hentai) section.

There's a section (Lolicon) for those with sexual interests in underage girls.

There's a section for pictures of men doing men.

There's a section for pictures of women doing women.

Fortunately all those sections are vacant. Maybe you need to mention them on the 14.321 N9OGL radio show, and solicit some contributions.

Up till now we only had the MMMM here (Mighty Macho Morse Men). Now we also have the PPPP (Pornographic Pokemon Pedophilaist Perverts).

Todd, you are one sick puppy! Child porn is child porn, whether photographed or drawn. Giving it a japanese name does not somehow make it "OK".

Since when has the FCC had jurisdiction over radio amateurs in the UK?
British regulations are different to that in the UK.

The official dates for Comments on WT Docket 05-235 were 31 August 2005 to 31 October 2005.

The official dates for Replies to Comments on WT Docket
05-235 were 31 August 2005 to 14 November 2005.

All time periods refer to Eastern Time Zone. Apparently, and I don't know for certain, the FCC will accept the time of day of the time zone of the sender. ECFS lists only the DATE filed, not the time it was filed. They do enter in copies of letters-on-paper which were sent from within the official dates but arrived at the Commission later, evident from the FCC time-stamp on documents compared to the ECFS filing date.

Regardless, the official time period on WT Docket 05-235 is now OVER. As of 3 PM EST on 15 November 2005 there were a total of 3,783 filings made on WT Docket 05-235 between 15 July 2005 and 14 November 2005.

The ECFS will still accept electronic comments entered long after the end of an official date period. WT Docket 98-143 on the NPRM proposing Restructuring was still getting input from about 400 people up to nearly FOUR YEARS AFTER the end of all Comments, and up to nearly THREE YEARS after Report & Order 99-412 was released (end of December 1999) making the Restructuring legal.

Nah. Dudly is still dancing around his faux pas. Would a real, live MARINE use a Coast Guard motto in a sign-off? Wouldn't be true to the Corps, would it?

True enough! However, since Dudly has NEVER posted any reference

Dudly REALLY served in ANY military branch.

Frank, my take is that Dudly was NEVER in the USMC. It sounds like he READ about it a lot, wanted to be in,
could not get in, then flipped out. He went nuts, unable to reconcile his desires with reality.

Frank, that is consistent with Dudly's actions in here for so long. He has this mania about UNIFORMS, about RANK, wanting to be an officer, a tuff guy hero type. He is terribly frustrated with the reality of his life and NEEDS
the fantasy that he is all those things.

He can kiss mine, too...four years active in Army. He can kiss my "toilet seat" too (Presidential Unit Citation, awarded to my Battalion twice). Poor guy tried to say that was "impossible" that it "couldn't have been so."
Not only were those in my official documentation but in a Signal Corps photograph with the mimeographed data on the back of the photo. Mimeograph went out years ago in the military and is terribly hard to forge now, especially on photographs' backs.

We have two more toilet seats here but I wouldn't want him

Poor Dudly. I stood up against him long ago and he hasn't forgotten the anger he felt at being trumped. I said in public that Dudly was doing the Big Lie technique worth of Goebbels' propaganda efforts of the 1930s in Germany. Dud then tried to "turn it around" and equate me to Goebbels for continuing to challenge him for proof of his "service."
In seven years Dud hasn't come around with ANY referencible proof of all his "warrior" claims. Tsk, tsk.

Dudly uses "Lenniesque" to describe anyone who stands up to him and challenges him to provide PROOF. Since he can't do that, he resorts to the Personal Insult schtick in order to misdirect the subject thread. Very, very old.

Frank, you are on the right track with old Dud HATING HIMSELF. To avoid that he looks at all his challengers seeing himself in his mind's mirror and calls them bad things. Whenever he does this Personal Insult thing he is really insulting himself. But, his mind is so mixed up that he doesn't realize what he does.

Dudly just can't stand it if someone else uses "his" medical terms. :-)

Like Dud has been all through pre-med, done his internship, and written up in JAMA and Lancet. Probably got an old, used copy of "Physicians' Desk Reference" out of a recycle waste can...

>You are a loon. Best of luck on that one.

Dudly has NOT PRODUCED A SINGLE REFERENCIBLE PROOF of his military or medical expertise claims in SEVEN YEARS here. Here's what we HAVE and all found by OTHERS:

1. State of Tennessee website listing of state licenses for medical people. Just a name, address, and title of "LPN," an acronym for Licensed Practical Nurse.

2. A no-longer visible description of one "brigade" of the TN STATE Guard describing that "brigade's" "communications officer," a "First Lieutenant Robeson" with a picture of him in field utility uniform cammies scowling into the camera.

3. A text mention of a TN CAP unit mentioning their "communications officer," "Captain Robeson," but no photo of him.

ALL the rest that's on the Internet was supplied by Dudly himself, written by him, no third or disinterested party. See his self-styled "Man of Many Talents" AOL home page. See his QRZ bio and picture in a flight suit (which could be bought at a surplus or used clothing store).

Dudly has supplied NO OTHER LIVING RADIO AMATEUR'S NAMES/ CALLSIGNS except that of his "wife" that could be contacted for verification on identity/personality/behavior/etc. He apparently knows no one else except the correspondents in newsgroups.

Dudly has used WRONG references to USMC slogans, jargon, and terms that would be familiar to any active-duty USMC veteran. Dudly has NEVER mentioned ANY piece of avionics equipment used on USMC aircraft either by official nomenclature or familiar name during his alleged 18-year "avionics tech career" in the USMC. That's unheard of in a work environment that is state-of-the-art in electronics; his mentions of aircraft could have been cribbed out of some book on aviation or a website for same. The ONLY radio equipment Dudly has mentioned relative to his "military career" is some alleged MARS radios used at an Okinawan MARS station where he claimed an "ANCOIC" position. MARS operations would NOT be a part of the duties of any avionics technician, any branch, and MARS operations do not involve either tactical or strategic radio communications of the U.S. military, any branch.

>Seven hostile actions, my ass!

Dudly's "hostile actions" in the Corps were probably the cause of HIS termination from the USMC after 18 years, not the 20 needed for a military pension. Dudly ORIGINALLY posted that he received a MEDICAL discharge...then tried to say that was "changed" to an Honorable...then later switched to say that he was terminated "due to an accident during his duty." The claim of being in "seven hostile actions" came much later than his claims - and claims switches - of his discharges. A terrible record of INCONSISTENCY which smacks of a typical con man snow job trying to be foisted on everyone.

Medical discharges are done for mental conditions as well as physical conditions.

Looney Toons time. BTW, Warner Brothers main buildings are just about three miles away from my residence. I don't think they would accept Dudly's tales, even for the most outrageous cartoon show they could make. For a Halloween horror film, maybe...

Note the characteristic Dudly "response." Instead of providing REAL PROOF FOR HIMSELF, Dudly attempts to shift focus in the thread by engaging in personal insults of yourself. That's a typical diversionary tactic in these back-and-forths with Major Dud. [great name, Frank! :-)]

Brian, just bid Major Dud a "Semper Paratus" and a "Temper Fry" and forget trying to reason with him. He isn't reasonable. He's nuts.

ZERO hostile actions that Dudly was "in."

I find it singularly AMAZING that Dudly has NEVER produced a single photo or snapshot of himself on "active duty" during those EIGHTEEN YEARS! NO references to anyone who has one.

I've seen dozens and dozens of snaps of my friends and acquaintences who've served in the militaries for much shorter times. All the military branches sent out notices and photographs of service people to their home town newspapers in the past describing their current assignment or "graduation" from boot camp or basic training. Papers MIGHT include those in back pages as "filler" material or might not depending on how much page space they had left.
Nonetheless, the military policy has been to do that for the last half century, all branches.

Shhhh...he might have been "special ops!"

Tom Clancy may be writing him up for a new novel entitled,
"Clear and Present Dander," about an EMT doing HALO drops into denied territory to flush out illegal dandruff drug dealers threatening our hair-oin distribution.

The Coslonaut probably stuck his "BBS" into his balloon

Think a combination of "Dilbert" and "Brewster Rockit, Space

Hosting a web site soliciting the posting pictures of child porn is OK

It should come as no surprise that Len Anderson's eight pages of pontificating, self-important reply to the comments of Robert G. Rightsell read almost exactly like his frequent pontificating, self-important rants in r.r.a.p.

"Craft", "guild", "union", "self-styled elite group of traditionalists", they're all there. Len's obligatory references to his military experience of more than a half-century ago are there, but he carefully reworked his "24/7" statement so that he personally isn't described as having worked 24 hours per day for a week.

Leonard's remarks are carefully loaded with numerous references to copious footnotes. One lets the Commission in on what PROFESSIONAL periodicals he receives. Another tells the Commission of the woeful failure of Fessenden's experiments in the use of amplitude modulated telephony.

In typical Andersonesque fashion, Len calls some of Rightsell's comments "not only egregious but an outright insult, not only to those of us who worked responsibly in radio communications long ago, but to all the planners of radio communications in every other service except radio amateurism since the end of World War 2. [Isn't it supposed to be "World War II"?] Len opines, "To be blunt, Mr. Rightsell engages in self-puffery and nonsense". Additionally, our Leonard provides the Commissioner's a lecture in a rundown of decade by decade progress in the development of radio.

Len can't resist a few jabs at Joe Speroni's talley of comments on 05-235. He makes certain that the Commission is aware that Speroni is "an unabashed proponent of radiotelegraphy in amateur radio, and has been so for years" as if it were an unknown that Mr. Anderson is an unabashed proponent of doing away with morse code exam in amateur radio (and has been such for years).

Leonard H. Anderson, despite his self-declared several decades of interest in amateur radio, nine years or so of posts to r.r.a.p and a claim that he was going for an "Extra right out of the box" is still not a radio amateur. On the positive side for Mr. Anderson, he is still holding on to his tiny, dusty Johnson.

You insist I am wrong and am a liar, Toiddie, however the only way you can respond to me is with a suggestive profanity that, in and of itself, suggests you want to engage in physical intimacy with me.

You prove me right.

Thanks.

It's YOUR "sunject", Mark, not mine or Steves.

The "sunject" at hand (see Subject line) is "stevie continues to to calim imply pedophia". (Your words, not mine or Steves)

Thus the attention to Todd web site soliciting pictures depicting sexual interest in underage girls (ephebophilia, a branch of pedophilia) is directly dead on the topic that YOU raised.

The very same person holds such beliefs. How would you cont those vastly different opinions?

No I doubt that Bill thinks the Procoder feel any reagrd to engage in opne deabte we have hae in the SOP of most of the procoders here

However Bill in addresing the NG does not merely addres the ProCoder

OTOH the If the ProCoders have got something new they need to shouting it off the roof top so the FCC might hear and consider this new point the best New point is so repceprical licenseing issues but that hardly seems enough to turn the course (it is but a hicup issue ar best)

Logical the R&O should be by the end of the week or at worst the month

Merely because you are a PCTA insider/double-standard holder.

Everyone on the Morse Code Test side fawned all over Val Germann. He busted on the scene saying all the right things and dissing the No-Coders. But in the end, he pulled the wool over your eyes because he was a slick-talking salesman with no substance behind him. And it was soooo easy.

Best of Luck

Let me put it into simpler terms for you, Mr. Slime. Val Germann was "OK" because he was #3 in the example below. He duped the Pro-Code Test folks because although he didn't Know Code, he wanted to. And he was so believable to them because he dissed the No-Coders. They absolutely loved him.

No, no. But that's what most everything here boils down to. Might as well get it out of the way so they can decide which side to put you on.

Kind of like a young man named Val. He came on here saying all the right things about Morse code. He was their little darling. Said he was going to take the code test.

There are four basic truths here:

You took the code exam and you like code: you're OK.
You took the code exam and you don't like the code: you're an idiot.
You never learned the code but want to: you're OK.
You never learned the code and don't want to: you're an idiot.

Kind of like a young man named Val. He came on here saying all the right things about Morse code. He was their little darling. Said he was going to take the code test.

For the record, I don't support code testing as a separate pass/fail HF exam.

73, Brian

And the suprise? It's no suprise at all. Valentine Germann' license has been unmodified since April 1, 2002. But he sure was the darling while he was here. Hi!

It should come as no suprise that Dave/K8MN has just posted his longest post ever not providing the details or tips for aspiring DXers, but in rediculing someone who has had an -almost- lifelong interest in radio.

Way to go, Dave. Pillar of the radio community. Good DX!

Hosting a web site soliciting the posting pictures of child porn is OK so long as the participants are drawn, not photos? Did your parents teach you that? Please, Todd, get help.

I would suggest you read ASHCROFT V. FREE SPEECH COALITION (00-795) 535
U.S. 234 (2002) 198 F.3d 1083, affirmed.
it can be found at http://straylight.law.cornell.edu/supct/html/00-795.ZS.html

in it the US Supreme Court ruled that "virtual child porn" (that includes anime pictures) was protected by the constitution unlike real child porn that wasn't, the reason, because real childern are harmed by the production of child porography, while virtual is created via drawing, computer animation and no real childern are harmed in the production of it. That's according to the US Supreme Court.

True story. Now that you mentioned it, I think even a RESERVIST would know the difference between Military Police and Shore Patrol. Dudly has proven that he doesn't. But then again, one weekend each month doing bends-&-thrusts doesn't build much of a knowledge base, nor does it reinforce what little he was taught 30 years ago while standing on the yellow footsteps.

I intentionally used the Gacy analogy for a reason. Examine, if you will, the following list of Dudly's interests and behaviors. A common thread should become glaringly apparent:

1) His 'career' in the USMC;
2) His marital dysfunctions;
3) His 'hobby-turned-career' of nursing;
4) His interest in CAP and YAF;
5) His frequent fits of transference;
6) His history of accusing people of being pedophiles.

How much you wanna bet he used to hang out at the YMCA?

Mental health counseling is little more than professional coddling, and I'm sure he spends quite a bit of time in therapy for just that reason. What he NEEDS is a good ass-kicking.

He was in the USMC alright, and he was a reservist. We all know he has been tight-lipped about his service because he didn't want to expose the truth about his service. And we also know that he lied about his "retirement". But what you may not know is that he wasn't discharged for medical reasons, either. He simply quit. And not voluntarily, I might add. Too bad he quit -before- Clinton's "don't ask, don't tell" policy.....

"Rediculing"? You've spent so much time conversing with Mark that you're starting to write like him. If I'd wanted to post an instructional message on DXing, I'd likely post it to the DX newsgroup.

In my comments to the Commission, I did not find it necessary to target a single individual or group, nor did I use terms like "puffery", "egregious" or "insulting". Your organ grinder pal hasn't yet taken the first baby step toward obtaining an amateur radio license in all these many years. He hasn't gotten into amateur radio. He isn't in amateur radio. He will not be in amateur radio, no matter what he writes here.

How is that "logical"?

FCC has no set deadline to produce the R&O. Given the large number of comments, reply comments and other filings to consider, it will not be a quick process. Remember that FCC doesn't just have to read the comments - they also have to decide which arguments are most compelling, cite them, and justify their decision.

On top of that is the fact that while the majority of commenters support removing the code test for General, the majority of commenters also support keeping the code test for Extra. So if FCC wants to remove the code test for Extra, they have to justify ignoring what the majority wants.

The R&Os from FCC are carefully worded, and that sort of thing takes a bunch of time.

> However the Govt is not known for its logical behavoir

I don't think you understand "logical", Mark.

That's just typical Len behavior, Dave. Check the reply comments about ARRL, and the one about Extra Class licenses, etc.

What Len fails to understand is that such carryings-on are simply delaying
the R&O.

> Your organ grinder pal hasn't yet taken the

Actually that's not quite true, Dave.

Some months back, Len mentioned here that he had once, way back in the 1950s, set about learning Morse Code. Claimed he'd actually gotten up to about 6-8 wpm or so before deciding all the 'hard work' wasn't worth it. That was just about the time 27 MHz cb came along, and he jumped on that.

What I think happened is this: Len discovered that unlike "book learning", he didn't pick up on the Morse Code in a few quick lessons. For him it took some 'hard work' to learn, and that conflicted with his view of himself as a 'professional in radio-electronics'. Not only that, but learning
Morse
Code would not help Len 'PROFESSIONALLY' - there was no money reward waiting. So he gave up.

> He hasn't gotten into amateur radio. He isn't in amateur > radio. He will not be in amateur radio, no matter what he writes here.

Which would lead any logical person to wonder why he's so interested in amateur radio regulations. He won't say why all this matters so much to him.

Nobody is arguing that you are doing something illegal by soliciting pictures of "virtual child porn" (your term).

The argument is that you're a sicko PPPP by running a web site which solicits pictures of "virtual child porn".

Of course it has to do with the "subject at hand", Markie!

ANY opportunity to find an excuse, right Todd?

Yes...REAL children WILL be harmed by this as it permits people like you an opportunity to think that the idea of sex with underaged persons is "OK" at some level.

There will always be this kind of activity...There always has been. However lending it some venier of legitimacy via "anime" is nothing more than another form of child pornography...So yes, Todd...You ARE a pedophile.

Having never served in the Army, I never had that problem.

The two sets of dress blues I owned while in the Marine Corps were issued to me, free of charge. A "perk" of assigned duties.

No white shoes required.

Psychologists say these "otaku" or virtual-porno-geeks are regressive, have poor social ability, and have never fully matured as adults. Therefore, they are not good at communicating with others, cannot date real human beings, and instead adore an imaginary, most often underaged character.

More bullshit from Major Dud [sigh]. Uniforms in the Corps are never issued "free of charge", assigned duties or not. You get a small clothing allowance each month but it's not nearly enough to maintain the minimum required uniforms, let alone pay for dress blues. And from the time I joined the Corps to this very day I think I have seen only two sets of used dress blues for sale -- the uniform means too much to a Marine to buy them second-hand, and for the same reason they are rarely ever sold or given away even after discharge. Heck, I still have mine hanging in the closet next to my float jacket. Yet Dudly

In due time. In the meantime, just sit back and enjoy watching Dudly squirm for a while. Right now he has chosen to ignoring me, but he can't do that for very long without industrial-strength blood pressure medication -- wait and see what happens when his supply runs out!

I Stil Have my Dress Blues (don't have the army greens) have even been ableto wear em recebtly (got an order to report of physical they are getting a bit hard up for active 54E's) wore em to a few rasied eyebrows to a physical that I made sure to to fail by leaving my diabetes uncontroled a about 10 days was an interesting ride

but I guess we army types are not as sentimental I aquired the dress mess and sold em later as well the army whites bit evenn watching Gomer Pile USMC one would know that USMC doesn't issue those things

My blues were rare enough to get me out of standing certain duties (so I could stand in for some one else RHIP in some cerimmony or parade)

Why not. The comment phase and reply comment phase is over.
Truth is, however, that if there was anything that could have been described as new, even if it wasn't compelling, odds are we'd have heard it already via ARRL (QST), Len A., or someone else.

Unless you expect a new set of FCC responses to all the pre-existing morse test arguments, the FCC's job of jusifying their decision is simply a restatement of the R&O code test responses from 98-143 (IMHO).
Even the reciprocal license argument isn't a big deal to resoond to since not one examply appears to even exist AND there's no treaty requirement that calls for any reciprocal licensing in any case.

> On top of that is the fact that while the majority of commenters

That majority is a very thin one.

> So if FCC wants to remove the > code test for Extra, they have to justify ignoring what the majority > wants.

Not so, the FCC is in no way duty bound to view the comments as a "vote" with a majority vs minority outcome. Why Jim, even you have made that point on more than one occasion.
Once again, I ask you to look at past FCC statements that have already addressed the need for ANY code testing.
98-143 R&O retained only a 5 wpm test based solely on the existing ITU treaty requirement. That treaty requirement is toast now and with its removal the last legitamate procode test argument went with it (IMHO).

> The R&Os from FCC are carefully worded, and that sort of thing takes

R&O for 98-143 took several months. This NPRM is far more concise in the changes it proposed and shouldn't (logically) take as long..

and assumes facts not in evidence biggest is the aumsume is that ALL comenetors favoring keeping code testing as it is favor keeping code testing for the extra class if the general class requirement is dropped

I am sure (based on nature of people) that at least one comentor favouring code testing for general's would agree that if you are not going to test for general no point in testing for extra either, therefore the Majority already thin may not truely exist quite incorrect and shows the poster alas does not understand the US constitution

Like Bush or not, he like every president but a couple (Ford, T Rosevent ) was elected by the Electorial college

the people vote for these slates of electors

a Presdient could in theory be elected with as few as one quater of the cast votes if those voters were to correct places in the country

Yup, in Bush W's first elction to the presidency
he actually lost the "popular" vote nationwide by (I think) about 1/2 million votes...BUT, he won the electoral college vote.

Even Bill Clinton in one of his presidential races did not recieve a majority of the popular vote...although he clearly had more votes than either Bush Sr or the 3rd party candidate.

GACW - Casilla de Correos 9 - B1875ZAA Wilde - Pcia. Buenos Aires

IN THE CITY OF BUENOS AIRES, CAPITAL OF THE REPUBLIC OF ARGENTINA, THE UNDERSIGNED COORDINATORS, MEMBERS AND SYMPATHIZERS OF AGRUPACION GRUPO ARGENTINO DE RADIOTELEGRAFISTAS GACW, DESIRE TO EFFECT THE FOLLOWING DECLARATION RELATED TO THE ACTIVITIES, EXAMINATIONS AND QUALITIES OF THE FUTURE LICENSEES IN THE AMATEUR RADIO SERVICE OF THE INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS UNION:

1. Underscore that we decidedly maintain that the rules (should serve) as an incentive to support, not only the progress of the radio science or art, but also to preserve traditional operating modes, maintain sportsmanship in operating competitions, preserve individual abilities in craftsmanship, stimulate the education and advancement of new radio amateurs; these elements are essential in order to keep our heritage and culture alive, honor our predecessors, and respect the initiatives for technical evolution.

2. Affirm that the actions and individual initiatives that suggest the total elimination of the CW examination, or setting aside of the requirement simply because "it takes effort to learn," which constitute without a doubt, at the bottom and the root of the subject, another step toward the loss of identity and weakening of our own roots.

3. That understanding Amateur Radio as another means to elevate the individual and collective human spirit and not just mere entertainment, we consider the moderate effort necessary to obtain the ability to operate radiotelegraphy a desirable goal, no different than that of sportsmen or students that, far from being a hindrance, forms their character, maintains their ability and improves their personal situation without any doubt and that the same should be considered a personal skill to be possessed and exercised, one that contributes to being recognized by ones peers and imparts an ethical responsibility to teach the art to others.

4. Reaffirm that the resolution of WARC 2003, that leaves the criteria to the national administrations with respect to the CW examination, should in no way be considered as mandatory for our country, that said resolution has only been followed by 11% of the member nations and that they only represent 12% of the estimated amateur radio population. (See SPAR)

5. Highlight the actions of countries such as Russia, Canada and Japan that have decided to maintain this requirement to obtain an amateur radio license. They believe that they should maintain a well trained group of operators, with the ability to perform whatever means of communication possible in case it should be necessary.

6. That the radiotelegraph operators of our nation continue contributing at a level of equality with the users of other emission modes in the activity and dissemination of the Amateur radio Service. (See http://www.geocities.com/eetecar). Perhaps they are, possibly, those who do more with more enthusiasm than other groups, because they are the guardians of a tradition of our radio ancestors and they have learned to keep alive through the ages the flame and mystique of communications in its simplest form: Morse code.

7. Recommend that the enclose reports from SPAR, The Society for the Preservation of Amateur Radio, of the US, presented to the FCC in that country and of Andrew Roos, ZS1AN, advisor of The South African Amateur League, SARL, be used as valuable elements to be considered in conjunction with the study of this subject by the institutions and authorities and that they include recent studies and statistics with the object of understanding the evolution of the number of licenses, age, equipment, vehicles and other available resources, etc.

8. Reject the opinions, actions and declarations of the No Code International group, (http:// www.nocode.org/) that was created with the only goal to work toward abolishing Morse code examinations in the entire world, considering the group to be intolerable, discriminatory, and completely contrary to the spirit and letter of the Amateur Radio Service of the ITU.

9. Affirm that the present does not pretend to establish any privilege or special consideration for radiotelegraph operators, but to maintain an action and thought in favor of experimentation and operation in whatever mode, current or future, without consideration of whether the practitioners only represent a majority or minority, or whether they should enjoy greater bandwidth than the rest.

10. Offer an incentive to all amateur radiotelegraph operators to teach Morse code and share their experiences and knowledge in the institutions closest to their residence, or where and if it is possible, using the Manual of CW by Jacobo Aisemberg LU2YA published by the Radio Club Neuquen and recomnended by GACW as a study guide.

11. Recognize the contribution of the Radio Club Pampeano LU1UG, in the city of General Pico, La Pampa, and its members, for keeping the weekly slow speed CW course on the air and the FENIX LU Forum, a group of GACW advisors, for their contribution in completing this document.

12. Emphasize the development work by the creators and moderators of the HAMTEC internet forum for their contribution to technical understanding in all aspects of our activity, that already has transcended our borders, serving as the means toward technical capability in the Spanish speaking world.

13. Recognize the effort made by radio clubs, in maintaining their installation operable, offering courses for those aspiring to be radio amateurs, participating in local Civil Defense activities in schools and other environments.

14. Recognize the guiding role of control and regulation of the Federal government and highlight the necessity to establish a FEDERAL program of teaching and practice designed for the formation of groups of educators, with the object of maintaining themselves capable of educating in the entire nation.

15. Encourage all individual or collective actions that foster the improvement, coordination, and unity of radio amateurs by any means possible, with the object of improving and consolidating the current situation.

16. Recognize and highlight, among other institutions and groups, the Radio Clubs Almirante Guillermo Brown LU3DY and Mor&#65533;n LU1DBQ for their emphasis on experimentation; to the participants in the programs "La Radio un Camino Seguro", to the Radio Club La Rioja LU1SF and Radio Club Catamarca LU5RA, to the Radio Club City Bell L40E; to those who participated in "La Radio y los Ni&#65533;os", to the Radio Club de los Andes LU8YE, also the Argentina APRS Group and the AMSAT Argentina organization for the educational and experimental activities that they support and develop.

17. Support the presentations made by the UARC Union of Argentinean Radio Clubs, other Radio Clubs and radio amateurs of the province of Buenos Aires, in opposition to Resolution N&#65533; 900/05 (Secretar&#65533;a Pol&#65533;tica Ambiental - Prov. Bs.As., regarding installation of electromagnetic field generators in the frequency range above 300 KHz), soliciting the exception from compliance for members of the Amateur Radio Service.

18. To be alert to the installation of internet transmissions over electrical transmission lines (BPL - PLC), that produce interference in the short-wave spectrum and other bands and solicit the corresponding authorities to follow the CCITT guidelines that guarantee the availability of this service without interference to radio amateurs and listeners.

19. Invite all radio amateurs and institutions to embrace this declaration, as a means to express their willingness to stimulate perfection and to preserve the level reached by amateur radio, contributing to the teaching of all modes, without exception, in opposition to criteria based solely on "popularity."

20. Disseminate and distribute this document and its attachments to the UARC, CNC, D.G. de Defensa Civil de la Naci&#65533;n, SPAR and other amateur radio institutions to whom this might be of informational interest.

There's nothing "fuzzy" about it. It's the same as "S&M" or "B&D" pornography. Many of history's serial killers were "fans" of these "lifestyles".

No, I did not "try to get the FCC to violate the Constitution", Markie.

I presented some FACTS that Lennie didn't want aired.

What "rant", Greaseball?

Lennie DID utter a "warning" in his "reply comments".

And I reiterate my QUESTION...WTF is Lennie top "warn" ANYone...?!?!

Uhhhhhhhhhhhh...yeah.

No...showing YOU don't know the meaning of the word "civic".

Lennie (allegedly) did his "civic" duty with his first comment to the Commission.

Each subsequent "Reply Comment" has been one personal attack after another.

Nothing more.

> Civic" duty does not imply any requirement to agree with a narrow

Personal attacks in a federal process is NOT "civic duty".

Nice try, Greaseball.

What's "funny" is your abuse of the King's English in an attempt

Cute, coming from a twice court martialed, dishonorably discharged

FCC doesn't shut down ECFS on a proceeding just because the deadline has passed.

I don't think anyone at ARRL is reading all the comments.

Len isn't a reliable source. Despite his claim that he read and understood
all the comments, he didn't know that someone else was reading all the comments too, and posting the results online for all to see. Even though the URL was on the first page of the comments, he missed it completely.

Of course. But that takes time.

Doesn't matter - FCC will most probably address that issue in the R&O.

Note that FCC doesn't have to say that a reason is a bad reason, or false, etc. All they have to do is say the reason is insufficient.

Sure they do - they just aren't required to follow the majority opinion.

If so, why didn't FCC just dump Element 1 in August 2003? I am still surprised they didn't.

Or, why did they reject NCI's "sunset clause" idea?

Dave could NEVER insult you half as well as you insult yourself...

Do you know of one? It certainly doesn't seem so from what we've seen posted here from you in the past, Brain.

So...

If Lennie doesn't insult and demean the other commentor, he's not "passion(ate)" about what he's commenting on?

He had to write seven attack "replies" to the FCC on this docket alone?

If it's not a single person or a group, what is it?

And Brain...

You ARE Lennie's red-hatted monkey.

No...he COULD have had a life in "professional radio".

Very little of any of Lennie's CV deals with "radio".

He has self-admitted never being injured in the USMC, got sand in his eye once.

He has self-admitted to receiving therapy some time on or about his discharge. He never said that it was physical therapy, but said he was "rehabilitated."

He gives a whole new meaning to "Scared Straight."

Pillar? Pillar of salt...Lots :-)

Poor Davie...if he had looked back over 3,783 filings on WT Docket 05-235 he would have seen MORE! Woulda liquified his "salt". MELT-DOWN! :-)

Well, Davie ought to go back into the ECFS and look under WT Docket 98-143 on 25 January 1999. He can see Dudly the Imposter's name there. Ten days AFTER the official (extended twice) END of filings on 98-143 ol' Dud tried to get the FCC to turn a deaf ear to me. Davie has about 8 days to do the same, repeating history of the elite meeting to beat...down those against the code test. :-)

Poor baby. Does Davie think that all against the code test are equivalent to "two-year-olds refusing peas at dinner"
as Robert Rightsell did?

Jimmie, when you start working for GOVERNMENT as "official watch-dog?"

You are barking up the wrong tree. Pizz on it.

>Actually that's not quite true, Dave.

Tsk, tsk, tsk...I took my "first baby steps" in 1953, walking into a large HF transmitter facility, working there for the next three years. Started at age 20.

My other "first baby steps" were getting (passed in one sitting) a First Class Radiotelephone (Commercial) Radio Operator license at an FCC Field Office in Chicago, 90 miles away. Did that at age 23...in 1956.

>Some months back, Len mentioned here that he had once, way back

WRONG. MISTAKE. ERROR.

Class D Citizens Band was created in 1958. I got a CB License
(NO TEST) in 1959. Was working for Ramo-Wooldridge Corporation then and had just transferred from the Electronics Warfare Group to the Standards Laboratory.

I thought to give AMATEUR radio a shot in 1962, three years LATER from obtaining a CB license. By then I'd already had electronics design engineering responsibility and title at Micro-Radionics, Inc., in Van Nuys, CA, and a First Phone for 6 years and had worked among 40+ HF transmitters at one station for 3 years in the U.S. Army. Like I "need" to study "ham radio theory" for any AMATEUR license exam? No.
I'd never had any morse code training anywhere then, no freebie classes in the service. Was NOT needed.

Got a reel-to-reel dupe of some code practice records and started in with those in the "off-hours" when not doing home work from 6 units a semester night class college courses and playing with my first wife. Now WHICH do you think had priority, prudey Jimmie? :-)

So, in 1962, as a staff engineer at MRI working on radar and aircraft radionavigation test sets (up to Ku Band on the A-6 Intruder flight deck test set) with some years of HF and MF transmitter experience, the CB set in the sports car already "getting dusty" and having worked with lots of rather advanced technology DoD contract equipment...I am SUPPOSED TO SHOW ETHICAL AND MORAL "FIBER" by learning morse code?!?!?

>What I think happened is this: Len discovered that unlike "book learning",

There was NO INTELLECTUAL REWARD "waiting," sweetums. Was lots and lots and lots more of real, live technology to learn everywhere in electronics. Still is.

Why the fork was I "supposed" to GO BACK IN TIME on radio?

Jimmie, you poor iggorant soul, even in 1962, the USE of morse code ANYWHERE was already DECREASING. On land it was almost done for. On RF it had already been DISPLACED by faster (100 WPM) teleprinter "traffic" on long-haul HF radio circuits. USAF SAC had ALREADY started the single-channel SSB VOICE revolution on HF with DoD contracts.

Damn RIGHT there was NO MONEY in it. There was NO INTELLECTUAL reward in it. I couldn't start planning a family in a house or a future in aerospace by learning morse code for an AMATEUR HOBBY activity. Sorry, Jimmie, but morsemanship skills in 1962 didn't help me pay a mortgage...didn't help me buy food...didn't help pay for clothes or, later, doctor and hospice bills to come, though I didn't know that until after...

Yeah, like morse code was "cutting-edge technology" and "excellence in radio" in 1962? Bullshit. You don't know that because you weren't yet the great big EXTRA super special AMATEUR license until long after and were still a kiddie then. Hell, you couldn't even hack the one extra test element for a FIRST 'Phone much later and settled for SECOND Class. Tsk, tsk, tsk.

Tsk, tsk. Jimmie make "plain, simple mistake." I've already written (it is all still in Google) that it might be FUN to get into amateur radio. I've already written that it is an enjoyable hobby pastime shared by thousands. Why do you disagree with that or say I never wrote it?

Let's see...I am retired from a successful career (from regular hours, I still do contract work IF I want to) in electronics design engineering, have a fine house (all paid for), have a wonderful wife (who was also my high school sweetheart), have had enough TITLES and POSITIONS to satisfy me, half century, a comfortable income to handle easy living now.

I do NOT NEED TO PROVE ANYTHING by getting more TITLES, more certificates suitable for framing. I do not need my friends and neighbors to come over and marvel at my cutting-edge radio technology of homebuilt tube kludges designed in the 1990s; we talk about other things and are friendly. I have ONE sole-inventor patent and a nice plaque from RCA Corporation which I NO LONGER display on the wall like a trophy. My wife has THREE degrees, one BA, two MSs, and she doesn't need those displayed on the wall; those are in storage up in Puget Sound area weren't on display in the northern house. We are secure in ourselves. We've "done it" and DON'T need to brag, don't need more pretty certificates suitable for framing. The FUTURE is just ahead and we are ENJOYING that. Why don't you like others enjoying life as THEY prefer?

Jimmie, what of YOU? You talk as if making money is some kind of evil, capitalistic running-dog kind of thing. Are you some kind of closet commie? A secret socialist? Or are you just resentful that someone else has something you don't have?

Jimmie, WHY do YOU and Diplomacy-Not Davie want to keep U.S. amateur radio REGRESSED? Why do YOU want to hold the status quo forever and ever? You are NOT custodian of archaic radio arts. You've NEVER worked in 24/7 long-haul HF radio traffic services. You've apparently NEVER done any radio activity outside of HF. You never got a FIRST 'Phone even though you claim to be "so educated" and that extra exam element is NOT any intellectual challenge. You aren't, and never were, any radio regulating person in government...yet you make out like you "KNOW" things they do. Hell, you've never had PRIDE in what you work at at work and try to keep your employer a big, dark secret...you never talk about it except in very vague descriptions and implications.

Jimmie, are you a merry masochist or a chary control-freak, insisting that it is "morally wrong" to go against morse code testing? You are really resentful and unarguably antagonistic against all who "haven't done it like you did it." WHY does everyone have to do it like you did it? Why are you holding back uncountable newcomers of the future?

Hobbies are supposed to be FUN, Jimmie. You don't want FUN? Are you in some strange "radio-Amish" cult that wants to stop technology and standards and practices in a HOBBY radio activity to the 1930s era? You talk and act like that. You are not nice to those who want to change your fantasy, Jimmie. You insist on having it YOUR way, to "work hard" at a HOBBY. Maybe it's a RELIGIOUS thing to you, this morsemanship? We all "must" worship at the Church of St. Hiram and seek the Holy Key as penitants, perhaps as flagellants, for some "higher calling?"

Not my "cuppa," Jimmie. HOBBIES are for FUN, for enjoyment. AMATEUR radio is a HOBBY, Jimmie. No matter what YOUR fantasy tells you, it is NOT vital to the nation nor is it the highest plane of existance of man's endeavors to become a mighty morseman. Really.

I think hobbies are FUN, Jimmie. Maybe ham radio would be FUN for me. It might even be FUN for thousands and thousands in the future. Yet, you want the FCC to keep regulations that makes a HOBBY activity "hard work" or some odd kind of "competitive sports" with attendant titles and privileges as if in a feudal state. You want to be SUPERIOR through morsemanship. SUPERIOR to all others with rank-title-status in a HOBBY. All bow down to your extra-class 20 WPM lordship?

I'm "just asking questions," Jimmie.

Buy, buy for now... :-)

Poor Jimmie...can't reconcile the "plain, simple fact" that Speroni SCREWED UP on his "interpretation" of filings on WT Docket 05-235. Speroni stacked the deck using his "rules" and was then applauded as a "widely known amateur statistician!" (kudo from Robert Rightsell in Reply to

Joe Speroni has said nothing, nada, zip, about "correcting" his "statistics" to account for the "plain, simple fact" that the FCC did not get a legal notice into the Federal Register until about 5 weeks AFTER it released NPRM 05-143 to the public. It was in THAT time that the 2:1 ratio IN FAVOR of the NPRM was established.

All them Extras just didn't get their dander up until about two months after public release...realizing that they would lose their precious STATUS IN THE AMATEUR COMMUNITY if the code test went in the dumpster.

Jimmie still HIGH on the MPD thing...

However, the "ARS" also describes the Archaic Radiotelegraphy Society, a group of self-promoting self-defining elitists who make morse because they can't socialize...

<yawn> Jimmie do boring repetition of PCTA mantra.

MPD strikes again! But, dollars to doughnuts, Jimmie gonna vociferously DENY he said the first sentence. He's so predictable! :-)

jack-snit on commentary in the first weeks of 05-235 being open. Poor fella musta bin all wrought by the 2:1 ratio

Yeah, he was real busy cleaning up the chickenshit left by all those "my bod is so precious it shall not be harmed in the military service of the country" NO-SERVERS.

I'll have to tell the guys over in Westwood, the ones at the Veterans Cemetary, about how Jimmie Noserve and Dudly the for sure, when we get together again to plant a few flags and have a Rememberance Ceremony...for the Veterans beneath.

Tsk, tsk. Jimmie is getting downright surly and obnoxious

These are the numbers of current, unexpired amateur radio licenses held by individuals on the stated dates, and the percentage of the total number of active licenses that class contains:

As of May 14, 2000:

Novice - 49,329 (7.3%)
Technician - 205,394 (30.4%)
Technician Plus - 128,860 (19.1%)
General - 112,677 (16.7%)
Advanced - 99,782 (14.8%)
Extra - 78,750 (11.7%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 334,254 (49.5%)

Total all classes - 674,792

As of November 15, 2005:

Novice - 27,303 (4.1%) [decrease of 22,026]
Technician - 273,291 (41.2%) [increase of 67,897]
Technician Plus - 45,263 (6.8%) [decrease of 83,597]
General - 135,676 (20.4%) [increase of 22,999]
Advanced - 74,836 (11.3%) [decrease of 24,946]
Extra - 107,297 (16.2%) [increase of 28,547]

Total Tech/TechPlus - 318,554 (48.0%) [decrease of 15,700]

Total all classes - 663,666 (decrease of 11,126)

Note that these totals do not include licenses that have expired but are in the grace period.

They also do not include club, military, RACES or other station-only licenses.

Note also that effective April 15, 2000, new Novice, Technician Plus and Advanced licenses are no longer issued.

Since April 15, 2000, FCC has renewed all existing Technician Plus licenses as Technician. It is therefore informative to consider the totals of the two classes, since the Technician class includes a significant number of Technician Plus licenses renewed as Technician.

The "new point" allegedly against the NPRM was raised repeatedly:

"Morse code skill is necessary to defeat terrorists and save lives in hurricanes [Katrina]!"

Not a valid reason but it was warm and fuzzy to pro-coders. :-)

Bill, the pro-coders are mighty macho motivated morsemen and pillars of the amateur community (by their own statements).
They ARE the "public" the FCC is supposed to support! :-)

Way back in time the pro-coders managed to set themselves up as "extra" amateurs BECAUSE of their telegraphy skill, all through lobbying to keep morse code as the "hot ticket." Radiotelegraphy got set up as the epitome of all amateur radio skills through constant bombardment by the [u-know-who] membership organization.

Radiotelegraphy skill meant the telegraphers got the maximum perquisites in rank-status-privilege. Now the pro-coders are royally pissed because "all their hard work" isn't going to mean dink in this NEW world. They demand holding fast to the status quo lest they lose THEIR self-esteem.

>That majority is a very thin one.

There is NO Real Majority in the Docket.

As of 2 PM EST, 16 November, there are 3,783 filings in Docket 05-235 up to and including 14 November 2005. At BEST, the total number of filings represents only about 0.6 percent of all licensed United States radio amateurs. That's only a SAMPLING of the "amateur community" opinion.

Joe Speroni is an unabashed proponent of morse code use and does not claim statistician training or experience (despite what Robert Rightsell said on 14 November), yet Jimmie keeps on stating "a majority wants code testing to stay" by virtue of nebulous interpretation by Speroni. Speroni's "55 percent" is waved like it is some ABSOLUTE TRUTH, almost a Divine Word. Pfaugh. Speroni SPIN. The usual biased pro-coder merry-go-round spinning, making only the pro-coders dizzy.

There's NO Real Majority in Docket 05-235. It is just a very close, half-and-half mix of opinions. The Commission is stuck without the slightest trace of "consensus in the amateur community" of opinion on this highly-polarized issue.

The Commission expressed a desire to see a "consensus" at the beginning of those 18 Petitions' comments 2003-2004 but it didn't get any.

>> So if FCC wants to remove the

>Not so, the FCC is in no way duty bound to view the comments as >a "vote" with a majority vs minority outcome. Why Jim,
>even you have made that point on more than one occasion.

Jimmie will pick ANY little bit to rationalize HIS opinion of something and has done so repeatedly. Then he turns right around and "blames" the Commission, pointing out some biased "majority" as representing the PUBLIC if a decision goes against him.

>Once again, I ask you to look at past FCC statements that >have already addressed the need for ANY code testing.
>98-143 R&O retained only a 5 wpm test based solely on

So be it. That the IARU was already for tossing out S25.5 before WRC-03 isn't considered by pro-coders. CHANGE is NOT allowed to status-quo-ists. <shrug>

>> The R&Os from FCC are carefully worded, and that sort of thing takes >> a bunch of time.
>R&O for 98-143 took several months.

About 10 1/2 months between the end of the official commentary period on 98-143 and the issuance of 99-412 Report & Order.
The Commission had about 2200 filings to consider for their decision.

> This NPRM is far more >concise in the changes it proposed and shouldn't (logically) take as >long..

I'd say it's a toss-up on time. 05-235 has nearly twice as many filings as 98-143. The Commission has to do SOMETHING on editorial changes to regulations in regards to allocations of operating frequency privileges for Technicians. Other than that, the main issue of code testing go/no-go is quite simple.

Different set of conditions on speculating on decision time.

>>> However the Govt is not known for its logical behavoir
>>
>> I don't think you understand "logical", Mark.
>Heck, none of us understand government logic :-)

Sorry, the term "logical" doesn't apply there to any three of you. Governmental decisions are biased by POLITICAL needs, not "logic." Those that don't get what they want will try to enoble themselves as "logical" as if they are the good guys.
That's a misuse of word definitions.

What WILL happen on a very close race is that about half will be totally pissed off because they didn't get things their way...and about half will feel victorious as "winners."

What really happens - as it does in all Reports and Orders - is that the Commission DECIDES, making a long, laborious set of reasons for their decision with all appropriate references (appropriate as they see fit). Once a decision is reached, it becomes part of LAW...until it is changed again some time in the future. From what I've seen of past Dockets and resulting R&Os, the Commission does a thorough job of decision justifications, not just on amateur radio but on all services.

Those that didn't get what they want will bitch and moan and make nasty but that's only "sore-loser-ism" on their part. The pro-coders have had Their Way for a long time and they feel They are "the public" or "more public" than others. They want "Theirs" just like They've always had it. The REAL Public can't be seen by them. The Commission tries harder to "look" at what the REAL Public wants...and that is a good thing in my mind.

Strange that Dudly has not posted - and bragged about - any photo of him wearing his dress blues. So far, what has been uncovered about Dudly are the following uniform pictures:

1. Snapshot of him in hospital scrubs, not fully identified.
Civilian clothing.

2. Photo of him in cammies while with the Tennessee STATE militia. [green camoflage utility uniform with boots]
No longer seen.

3. Semi-portrait of him in a flight suit bearing Captain's cloth bars...flight suit NOT identified as USAF. Could be obtained at store at/near any large airport.

If Dudly has "two sets" of dress blues, why NO photograph of him in either one? No snapshot, no portrait, NOTHING.

Not as an active-duty Marine, not as a Marine Reservist...
You are right, Dudly speak with fertilized tongue.

We didn't get any nice formal portrait photo in dress uniform free in the 1950s, even if in a Signal Corps unit that had a photographic group. Never cost a great deal and I paid for mine in the summer uniform. Like it might cost all of two bucks today for a good snapshot and drugstore enlargement of old film, Kinkos or Office Depot service available for digitizing one for a few dollars. <shrug>

In the "old Army" I was in of the 1950s, I don't recall any clothing allowance. Us soldiers got issued "fatigues" (our name for utility uniform), olive-drab "winter" uniform, khaki "summer" uniform, socks, minimal underwear, boots, and "low-quarters" (dress shoes). Patches, insignia of rank, were free but no allowance for sewing them on...nearly all posts had concessionaire tailor facilities that would do that at low cost. While we got the "overseas" cap free, we would all buy a better version in the PX. [indelicate name for that "overseas" cap that would offend pansies here] Supply Clerk kept records on our minimum allowance for free clothing...destruction beyond normal wearability re-issue had to have CO approval or it was a "statement of charges" pay deduction. As a field test engineer at a military place, there were few needs for "uniform" clothing and, when that was required, civilian contractor personnel had to sign for it, then return it. If damaged the contractor had to pay for it.

We could wear a FULL dress uniform ("pinks and greens" approved by regulation...same tailoring as commissioned officers)...IF we bought it ourselves. Since few of us enlisted types went to embassy balls or veddy formal parties, having a set of enlisted man pinks and greens was VERY rare. One of my classmates at our 2001 50th High School Reunion had gone Army for Thirty, came to the Reunion dinner in MSgt-rank pinks and greens; he had been out for about two decades, stood out vividly in the group of about 350. One of my good friends from high school had also done a Thirty, but as a Warrant Officer, and came in a civilian suit. That Reunion took place a week-plus before the "9/11" Attack.

For stylish comfort, I shelled out some bucks to have my fatigues tailored, the separate blouse using snaps instead of buttons and the huge side pockets of the issue pants made into conventional pants pockets. Was approved, by the way. As an E-5 with overseas pay supplement, monthly salary I got was all of $154, and all taxable. RHIP? :-)

Hmmm...that's rather cryptic...but it seems to fit.

The homosexuality angle might be there but it's difficult to tell. Down here in the movie capital of the world, one in five in the entertainment biz are homosexual (came out in two separate Los Angeles Times feature articles...never a secret down here). I know several socially and it is NOT always easy to tell their gender-preference orientation just by meeting-talking with them. Others are overt about it.

Note the "one in five" ratio. Coincidentally, the membership of the ARRL is also "one in five" amateur licensees! :-)

Deeper sigh....

Frankie of Silliland (Mr. FoS) simply proves he IS the liar I accuse him of being.

Marines assigned to Eighth and I, Recruiting Duty, Drill Field, Embassy Duty and Independent Duty (ie: Active Duty Marines assigned to the active support component of Reserve units, ROTC Instructor Duty, duty at a military acadamy, etc...) ARE issued Dress Blues and they ARE issued "free of charge".

And the first issue of uniforms IS issued "free of charge", and the monies that Frankie refers to are MAINTENACE fees. There is no assessment against the service person for their issue.

> You get a small
> clothing allowance each month but it's not nearly enough to maintain

Uhhhhhh...Franikie...Unless they changed it BACK since 1992, the clothing allowance was made a once-a-year entitlement in the late 80's.

The bull#### is yours, Frankie.

I was assigned to Independent Duty TWICE in my career. I received TWO issues of Dress Blues. One as a Lance Corporal, the other as a Staff Sergeant.

And you know what the difference is between YOUR "dress blues" and mine, Frankie...?!?!

Who wrote that, Len? You write as if it's a direct quote.

Len, do you think phrases like "mighty macho morsemen" help convince the FCC to see things your way?

> Way back in time the pro-coders managed to set themselves up as

Not true, Len.

The Amateur Extra class license required both a Morse Code test and a written test that many who passed both consider harder than the old First Phone. Morse Code skill alone wouldn't get anyone an Extra.

> Radiotelegraphy
> got set up as the epitome of all amateur radio skills through

Wrong again, Len. The Extra did not come about because of the ARRL. And the original 1963 "incentive licensing" proposal from ARRL would have given all amateur privileges to Advanced as well as Extra class amateurs.

Do you think nobody will use Morse Code when the test is gone?

Gee, Len, you go on about others' motivations but say nothing about your own.

Yes, there is. Try counting by commenters and not by total filings.

I specifically wrote "majority of commenters".

So am I.

No, just the facts. All there for you to check. Did you find any mistakes
that would change the results by even 1%?

Or are you just ticked that someone else did a better analysis than
you,
and had the skills to put it on a website for all to see?

Where?

Do you think that someone who files a comment and five reply comments, all basically saying the same thing, should be counted as six separate opinions? I don't.

Nope. There's two clear majorities of opinion, as expressed by the tally of commenters: Dump Element 1 for General and keep it for Extra.

Consensus isn't a majority. It's a lot more. I don't think you know what a consensus really is, Len.

That "consensus" statement is lot older than 2003.

So what's your guess for The Pool, Len?

Why?

FCC made it clear they see no reason to change the privileges of any license class. Their proposal is to dump Element 1, which will mean that any noncodetested Tech will need to get a General to get any HF/MF privileges.

Obviously they ARE needed...Even with "point-and-click" searchable archives at yor fingertips, you STILL screw up on a regular basis in this forum on AMATEUR RADIO issues.

WHOA! Six units a semester night, Lennie...?!?!

YOU told us that it took you FOURTEEN YEARS to obtain that degree, Lennie.

So WHAT were you doing in between...?!?!

No...You were supposed to learn Morse Code in order to get the Amateur Radio license you claim you had an interest in getting.

So now, even if we accept your "1962" time frame as a basis for a start, that makes 43 years since you were first involved in the licensing process.

No wonder you're "retired from regular hours"...You never could get anything done in any sort of REASONABLE timeframe!

Yep.

And those of us with an Amateur Radio license actually get to USE some of it on a regular basis.

Seems you can't GO FORWARD IN TIME with it, now can you?

More references to "Jimmie", ...and still not one "Lennie" from him.

And what's an "iggorant" soul, Lennie...?!?!

You're not getting MAD are you? You know WHO tells us that typos are ANGER issues unresolved... ! ! ! !

I've been a licensed Amateur for over 30 years and haven't made a penny at it...MAKING money wasn't the point.

And it's THE point as to why you continue to look so idiotic in trying to cross the two, Lennie...This is NOT "commercial" radio.

Ahhhhhhhhh! ONLY SOMEONE GETTING >>>PAID<<< can find any "intellectual reward" in radio!

LAME ! ! !

So freakin' LAME!

So...How do you explain away all those people who DO have "careers", families, obligations, etc, that STILL have time for "AMATEUR HOBBY" activity, Lennie...?!?!

"20/20 Hindsight EXCUSES" that are nothing BUT excuses!

The bull#### is YOURS Lennie ! !

YOU have ALREADY CLAIMED in several posts that you DID learn the Morse Code, and to a speed that would have at least carried you throught the then-exisiting Technician license!

You CLAIM that you earned a First Phone ticked well before you did THAT!

All that an engineer of your ALLEGED caliber would have needed were the pertinent regulations for the radio service in which licensure was sought.

Tsk tsk tsk on yet ANOTHER >>>LAME<<< redirect, Lennie!

And in the face of a guy who DID learn Morse Code while starting a carrer in engineering, starting a family, etc etc etc!

Because you've never DONE it.

You whine about it.

You rant about it.

You pontificate about it.

You insult those who DO do it.

I guess the point now, is, who would WANT you in it?

Ahhhhhhhhhh...but "titles and postitions" are things to be LOATHED and held in SUSPICION, Lennie! You've said so yourself!

Another LIE by the grnadmaster of the lie?

> I do NOT NEED TO PROVE ANYTHING by getting more TITLES, more

Gee...Neither do we.

However I bet you have all of your "comments", "reply comments", and "reply to reply comments" in a nice little notebook in "document protectors", also suitable for framing.

I am sure you are "shocked and awed" by your brilliance.

> I do not need my friends

And I am sure the two of you have LOT'S to talk about.
Lessee...there's your participation in disaster relief...Oh wait...There's all those "professionals" who do that...No need YOU getting involved. You filled some sandbags in 72 or 74...Good for you.

OK...so there's your participation in General Aviation..Oh wait...You never carried THAT to fruition either. Took a couple of lessons, never soloed, then "settled' for copying the reports off of ATIS or listening to LAX on your scanner.

Guess you can discuss your model aircraft building hobby...But WAIT! That technology is rooted in the 30's and 40's too...Hmmmm....We're running out of topics here. Not to mention no "intellectual reward" just to make a model go around and round....

I suppose we'll have to discuss your background in healthcare...

Ooops...Yet ANOTHER field in which you've wandered but never got a map for.

Well then...How about a good round of "show me the grandkid's pictures..."...?!?! Oh wait...Hmmmmmmmmmmm.....No kids, so no GRANDkids. There's yet ANOTHER one-way street for ya, Lennie.....

I guess that leaves the 13,768th re-telling of the "ADA Story"...?!?!

> I have ONE sole-

Lennie, why don't YOU take your OWN COUNSEL...?!?!?

You claim you didn't get an Amatuer Radio license due to a lack of "intellectual" or "pecuniary" reward, yet you've littered the Internet for almost TEN years with your "Why I Hate Amateur Radio" bufoonery!

You VERY OBVIOUSLY have a need to force Amatuers to fit YOUR mold, not the other way around!

> Jimmie, what of YOU? You talk as if making money is some kind

He's done nothing of the sort...Just pointed out that YOUR frequent insistance that

Why do you LIE about the Amateur Radio service being "regressed"?

Ironic you'd say such a thing yet not one word from you on the bandwidth-vs-mode discussions that I recall...Just more "Mighty Morsemen" sleights.

> Why do YOU want to hold the status quo forever and ever?

The ONLY "forever and ever" here comes from YOU, Your Lyingness.

> You are NOT custodian of archaic radio arts.

This meant something?

> You've NEVER worked in 24/7 long-haul HF radio traffic services.

And YOU did...?!?!

24/7...No Sleep? No breaks? No liberty, parades, marches or leave?

YOU did it ALL BY YOURSELF?

And please, Lennie...TELL US how that MAINTENANCE MOS of yours put you in a position to "handle" even the FIRST PIECE of traffic!

I thought that's what CommCenter clerks were for.

> You've apparently NEVER done any radio activity outside of HF.

You've apparently never done ANY radio activity within the scope of what Radio Amateurs do...Oh, you've caused RF to be radiated before, but you were not a radio operator in the Armed Forces and with the exception of a CB radio, you've not been a "radio operator" in the civilian world...Oh, you've caused RF to be radiatied, but hey, so do 30 million Americans with a microwave or garage door opener

> You never got a FIRST 'Phone even though you

A commercial ticket is a HAVE to do if you intend to work in REAL "professional radio", Lennie. (And BTW...It's been the GROL for 30 years now...Feel free to catch up any time you're ready...)

> You aren't, and never were, any comment filings.

I am sure that you figure that if it LOOKS like a duck they won't hear the whinings of a two year old in the text.

YOU hold more back than Jim had ever thought of, Lennie!

YOU mentored into an Amateur Radio "career", Lennie...Heck, into ANY discipline of electronics...?!?!

Any...?!?!? Just ONE...?!?!?!

No, he doesn't. Nor does he add an " -ie" to the names of people who allege to NOT do that to others...Yet YOU do, Lennie...Why?

You've been at this for 43 years now...No WONDER you think everyone else is in that time frame too!

> Not my "cuppa," Jimmie. HOBBIES are for FUN, for enjoyment.

Sheeeeeesh..

Here we go again...

Still cannot find a SINGLE reference to ANY radio service in the United States as being created as a "hobby". Are they used as such?
Of course! But then I can use such logic to call a license in the conventional public service pool as a "hobby license" too!

I see that several of the "rec.radio.cb" guys are relieved to have Frankie's attentions diverted to another forum.

Seems Frankie just can't seem to get along anywhere. He couldn't hack being a Marine. The CBers don't want him, and all he's done in

Major Dudly Dumshit has NEVER ONCE mentioned specific radio

Tsk, Frank Gilliland and I live roughly a thousand miles apart.
Even though my wife and I have a house in the Puget Sound area of Washington, Spokane is quite a bit farther east from Kitsap County and nearby Tacoma.

"Cross-dressing?" Dudly apparently is fixated on SEX now,

Frank Gilliland was IN the USMC. Dudly is a WANNABE.

Frank and I disagree on Dudly. I say Dud was NEVER IN. Frank says he was in but as a Reservist.

I have others NOT on this newsgroup who are Marines (but not on active duty) and who I've known for years. Frank's lingo and explanations FIT what they know first-hand.

Until I mentioned it years ago (DD-214), I don't think Dudly KNEW what it was! Hans did, you did, even Larry Roll. No-servers like Miccolis and Kelly wouldn't have known, no problem there.

Meanwhile, Frank and I will continue to argue on Dudly's REAL "service", disagreeing only in a minor way.

Dudly ought to change his "sign off" to Semper Pirate-us. :-)

Tsk, all the camera stores have neat little digital cameras now...no film needed, just charge it up, take the shots, look at them immediately on the LCD viewscreen.

Wife and I got a neat little combination still-movie digital camera, MPEG compatible, for under $200 direct from maker's website store. Took it with us on our recent 5000-mile round-trip to Wisconsin...charged it in the car with same charger used for the cell phone. Good resolution on both still and motion pictures.

it could have been shown as a short subject with new film

Even more wrong.

Sheesh Lennie, are you not even going to make this even REMOTELY challenging?

And I guess those references to military units, callsigns, dates, places, etc were not information from which you could obtain references...?!?!

> Dudly has used WRONG references to USMC slogans, jargon, and You're depending on Frankie of Silliland for your refrences, Lennie.

Not very wise for an alleged engieenr to use corrupted data to make decisons from, now is it...?!?!

Frankie was in the USMC for one infraction-infested enlsitment.

I'd take "suggestions" from him about the USMC like I would get

The CH-53A and D and the OV-10A and D were anything but "state of Almost close to the truth, Lennie, but again, just side-swiped.

MARS operation IS "part of the duties" of a MARINE who holds the proper b-billet MOS.

I held that MOS. Reported here before.

"Real proof" HAS been submitted.

Frankie of Silliland screwed up by making suggestions that he had great "insider" resources, yet can't seem to cross reference SNCO promotion boards and other meaningful USMC references...

Probably because, like you, he's a pathological liar.

No, he's got the right tree, alright. And he's absolutely right about your multiple personality disorder...Who can killfile you when you create a new screen names daily in order to defeat Google...?!?!

And Landshark, Markie does this intentionally. Markie accused me of being "poised to strike" at each and every post of his and of

"obceesing" over his posts, yet he can't stand it when, in HIS rush to pollute USENET with his trashy bile, he runs up against the Google posting limits. So he's created all these screen names in order to keep the bile flowing.

He suggests that others killfile him, yet who can?

As part of a group of 700 or so.

It's up to you, Len. Back then the Novice and Technician licenses required only a 5 wpm test. A full-privileges General class license required 13 wpm.
You stated that you "GAVE UP" at around 6 or 8 wpm.

In 1962 I was 8 years old

5 years later, in 1967, I was a licensed amateur radio operator at age
13. You were not.

8 years later, in 1970, I earned the Amateur Extra license at age 16.
Between 10th and 11th grade. You were not licensed as a radio amateur then, either.

8 years is hardly "long after" and I guess you consider 13 - 16 to be
"kiddies"...

I got the Second Phone at age 18, in 1972. Didn't need a First Phone.

As if all that somehow explains your obsession.

Why should I mention it here, Len? Is there any employment that would change the way you behave towards others who disagree with you?

I can see Lennie in the computer store every 3 months buying the "latest and greatest"...Heaven forbid he'd actually INVENT the latest and greatest, inasmuch as there'd be CONSIDERABLE financial reard in THAT!

And I was seven. However 43 years later I STILL have 30+ years MORE HF radio experience than Lennie, assuming we only count my Amateur experience.

But considering 1962 was when my dad got his first CB rig we can add in 13 more years. He had a "19Q" callsign for a brief while, then KHG8459. So if we add those numbers up, >>MY<< "HF radio experience" started clocking up in 62 for a total of 43 years today.

(At this point Lennie will bust-a-gut trying to minimize the fact that I was in gradeschool and that the "experience" was "only" on CB...Forgetting, of course, that he's repeatedly "counted" CB as "HF" experience and also goes to great lengths to regale us of tales of "how it was" with "Civil Defense" during World War 2...when HE was "just" a gradeschooler....)

I still had 5 years to go! But I was neck-deep in following the space program at that point.

When I finally did get my first license, I built my first receiver from kit and the transmitter from scrounged (and some "new") parts.
The transmatch, too.

Most of my "peers" were too busy drinking and partying. I prefered the "INTELLECTUAL REWARD" aspects of the radios. I didn't have to worry about getting arrested and didn't have a hang over when I'd been up all night on the air.

It took him 14 years to complete a 3 year degree, Jim...give the "guy" some time to make his mind up! He's only been bashng USENET for 10 years over this...He's got four more to go to beat that record.

I think that was pretty clear demonstration of the "I Am Not Taking The Same Test Mere Mortals Are Required To Take" attitude that Lennie seems to hold.

I am sure he pays them well to sit and listen to his stories,

But since he's so profit-motivated, MAYBE if we sent him a check to get lost...?!?!

Naaaaaahhhhhhh...He'll just waste it on more Geritol...

I still gape in awe at Lennie's ability to intertwine unrelated stuff into the post in order to make HIM appear more, well..rounded...

Lennie's "...My wife has..." comments smack of the same tricks he pulled in reference to his Army duties and how he tried to make other men's sacrifices make HIM look better...

And he thinks no one but he can see it......

Nice thing about that Amateur license over the GROL...It ALSO has a STATION license within...Along with attendant callsign...Let's us get on the air any darned time we want...Not just if our employer requests it or pays for it!

Guess that explains the lack of offspring.

Jim, Jim, JIM!

We can't count that!

Afterall, everyone KNOWS it was an ARRL/ARES conspiracy to extort additional funds for Emergency Services training and facilities. All of the damage, refugees, deaths, etc, were just carefully crafted video works of the ARRL Media Department. All of the graciously positive press we received was just the result of well padded hands at every major TV, Radio, Print and Internet news agency.

Why do you think the storm started with a "K"...?!?!

No, it won't be fun for him.

Because sooner or later one of the "locals" would find Lennie's hateful, deceitful and blatantly dishonest rants in this forum and the FCC archives.

Then he'd have to "fess up" to REAL Amateurs about his behaviour.

It might be possible that Steve was assigned to guard the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. They probably make a special allowance for uniforms there.

My emphasis follows:

"UNIFORMS IN THE CORPS ARE NEVER ISSUED "FREE OF CHARGE", ASSIGNED DUTIES OR NOT"...Frank Gilliland

Let's find out.

> It might be possible that Steve was assigned to guard the Tomb of the > Unknown Soldier. They probably make a special allowance for uniforms
> there.

Yoiu can bet they do, Brain, but the Tomb of the Unknowns is not guarded by Marines.

Here's an idea for The Feeble Five, Brain and Frankie especially:

Pick up your local telephone book. Look under "US Government".
Under "Armed Forces" you'll find a USMC Recruiter. Tell him/her you're "doing a paper" about uniforms of the Armed Forces.

Read back Frankie's assertion about uniforms NOT being issued "...'free of charge', assigned duties or not..." Ask him/her to validate that as correct or not.

Ask the Recruiter how much he or she had to pay for his/her Dress
Blues when they were assigned the billet.

Then ask them how much Marines are billed for their first seabag of uniforms in boot camp. (Remember, Frankie said Marines are NOT issued UNIFORMS free of charge, assigned duties or not...)

Ask him/her if Marines in Iraq were required to buy the desert cammies. The same ones they are required to have in-theater along with all sewn-on name tags, etc. (Remember, Frankie said UNIFORMS...Not any one type or style...)

Ask him/her if MY assertion about B-Billet assignments (Drill Instructor, I&I duty, Eighth and I Street/HQMC, Embassy Duty, etc) rating an issue of dress blues is true or not.

Youse guys up to it?

Or how about a letter addressed directly to HQMC? Surely you can take the above suggestions and pare them into a letter that sounds as if you're conducting some sort of research. Better yet, I think I'll do that part. Then we can compare notes.

Brain...at this point you can just ease out if you want to and I'll let you call it "even"...Like I said, it's not wise taking "counsel" about USMC policy from a one-tour, twice court martialed, self-proclaimed " ####bird PFC " idiot.

I understand you that were caught up in the heat of the moment, but I don't believe that even you're so foolish as to continue the "argument" in the face of reliable, third party corroboration of my "claims".

I wonder how Frankie will slither out from under THIS rock!

Steve, K4YZ

PS: If you're REALLY adventurous, you might even ask about the "civilian" business suits/sports blazers issued to Marines in some Embassies and/or other sensitive assignments as an "alternative uniform". I am willing to bet Dave saw one or two of these guys/gals over the years!

Somewhere in the midst of all those random letters and words was a concious "human" (benefit of the doubt) thought.

Now WHAT that thought was, I'd be hard pressed to even venture a guess...But I am SURE there was one in there!

Pat Sajak and Vanna White would be pulling their hair out if I agree. Anyone who wants to know the truth should do just as you suggest.

> Ask the Recruiter how much he or she had to pay for his/her Dress

They pay the same price as any other Marine.

> Then ask them how much Marines are billed for their first seabag of >UNIFORMS free of charge, assigned duties or not...)

Judas Holy Roller Priest..... you didn't even go through boot camp!!!!
The very first day (when you are standing on the yellow footprints) you are given a book of chits that are used to buy everything you need, including your uniforms. The money that is spent from that book of chits is deducted from your paycheck. My "chit book" started at about $210, and there was about $30 left that was added to my check when I left San Diego.

Shit, you weren't even a reservist. You are a complete Dud.

> Ask him/her if Marines in Iraq were required to buy the desert

Absolutely.

> The same ones they are required to have in-theater along with >all sewn-on name tags, etc.

Yep. Still got mine with my name stamped on the back and a target (flag) sewn on the sleeve from when I was on float with the 24th MAU.

> (Remember, Frankie said UNIFORMS...Not any >one type or style...)

Yep. Cammies, alphas, charlies, dress blues..... you gotta pay for all of them.

> Ask him/her if MY assertion about B-Billet assignments (Drill >Instructor, I&I duty, Eighth and I Street/HQMC, Embassy Duty, etc)

Ask away. Even ask the dudes at the rifle range if they have to buy their own pith helmets -- they do.

I hope so.

As long as you include headers. Doesn't matter tho, you won't be posting your reply because it will conflict with your "truth".

I have never had to hide under any rock. But you do because you don't even have a DD-214. Be careful, Dud -- there may be a rock headed your way.

We can talk about embassy duty too, Dud. I spent quite a bit of time at the US/UK embassy in Beirut. Wanna go there?

Behold he shall ride upon a hard dick and his name shall be Lloyd Austin Davies.

And it came to pass that the king of knob jobs in Alabama, (as Lloyd is known) was gone for a long time, and some of the people celebrated and some speculated that he had died, some speculated that he was ill, some speculated that he was in Maryland at Ray Chason's apartment, and some even thought that the king of knob jobs in Alabama had been made a sex slave by Ray Chason and his butt buddies. The neighbors in his hud apartment complex also knew that the project was the sucking of nigger dicks and telling lies and more lies, but they did not tell the people this for they did not desire to have a vice squad nightmare in the city of Deliverance Extras. Alabama liked to hear about the fat retarded one who proclaimed he was the king of knob jobs in Alabama.

And the niggers and crackheads reassured the people that everything was all right, and told them to prepare pyres and to cook meat, and to ice down beer and nehi soda, and to go out and buy potato chips and other unhealthy snacks from the traders who had immigrated to the kingdom from vietnam and the land of gaza. and so the went down to these little stores owned and bought these things. and they went home and warmed up their tv's, for the sabbath approached and the sabbath would bring more action from the mediocre football team at u of alabama, and the sabbath would bring plenty of exciting nob gobbling action and goo gobbling from the king of knob jobs in Alabama.

The king of knob jobs in Alabama in reality is a ghastly pale porker who stands only 5'6" and weighs an unhealthy 290 Lbs. His skin is as white as copying paper due to his night job of delivering pizzas to the ghetto neighborhood where he dwells in a filthy, roach infested hud hovel. He doesn't venture outside during the daylight hours, instead preferring to play with star trek and dalek dolls, post lies and filth on the internet and jack off and dream of finally actually getting some pussy. Not stick pussy which his homosexual lover Steve Holsten feeds him several times a year when Lloyd goes for his visits, usually around Thanksgiving.

Lately, the king of knob jobs in Alabama has been consumed with posting pictures of someone he says is Roger Wiseman. In fact, the obviously botched purple rendering of somebody else has been cut and pasted, photoshopped and distributed all over the internet by the king of knob jobs in Alabama and his homosexual fantasy lover Ray Chason who is the king of knob jobs in Maryland. Chason who is also a porker has set up a blog of Roger's ex-wife "Regina" telling even more lies. Roger wasn't ever married to anyone named Regina. Of course Chason and Lloyd refuse to let truth get in the way of their lies, like their butt buddy friends who post lies, lies and more lies about anybody who reveals the truth about this band of homosexual predators.

> LOL at <How ironic, Lardass Lloyd Davies the 32 year old VIRGIN telling somebody not to spend time on the computer when it is his only life! LOL!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!>

Behold he shall ride upon a hard dick and his name shall be Lloyd Austin Davies.

And it came to pass that the king of knob jobs in Alabama, (as Lloyd is known) was gone for a long time, and some of the people celebrated and some speculated that he had died, some speculated that he was ill, some speculated that he was in Maryland at Ray Chason's apartment, and some even thought that the king of knob jobs in Alabama had been made a sex slave by Ray Chason and his butt buddies. It was then the people started to rejoice.

And when the niggers and crackheads heard the murmuring and rumours of the people they assured them that the king of knob jobs in Alabama was just busy sucking on one of his nigger neighbors big black dick and would address the people as soon as he could swallow that big load if nigger jizz. The neighbors in his hud apartment complex also knew that the project was the sucking of nigger dicks and telling lies and more lies, but they did not tell the people this for they did not desire to have a vice squad nightmare in the city of Deliverance Extras. Alabama liked to hear about the fat retarded one who proclaimed he was the king of knob jobs in Alabama.

And the niggers and crackheads reassured the people that everything was all right, and told them to prepare pyres and to cook meat, and to ice down beer and nehi soda, and to go out and buy potato chips and other unhealthy snacks from the traders who had immigrated to the kingdom from vietnam and the land of gaza. and so the went down to these little stores owned and bought these things. and they went home and warmed up their tv's, for the sabbath approached and the sabbath would bring more action from the mediocre football team at u of alabama, and the sabbath would bring plenty of exciting nob gobbling action and goo gobbling from the king of knob jobs in Alabama.

The king of knob jobs in Alabama in reality is a ghastly pale porker who stands only 5'6" and weighs an unhealthy 290 Lbs. His skin is as white as copying paper due to his night job of delivering pizzas to the ghetto neighborhood where he dwells in a filthy, roach infested hud hovel. He doesn't venture outside during the daylight hours, instead preferring to play with star trek and dalek dolls, post lies and filth on the internet and jack off and dream of finally actually getting some pussy. Not stick pussy which his homosexual lover Steve Holsten feeds him several times a year when Lloyd goes for his visits, usually around Thanksgiving.

Lately, the king of knob jobs in Alabama has been consumed with posting pictures of someone he says is Roger Wiseman. In fact, the obviously botched purple rendering of somebody else has been cut and pasted, photoshopped and distributed all over the internet by the king of knob jobs in Alabama and his homosexual fantasy lover Ray Chason who is the king of knob jobs in Maryland. Chason who is also a porker has set up a blog of Roger's ex-wife "Regina" telling even more lies. Roger wasn't ever married to anyone named Regina. Of course Chason and Lloyd refuse to let truth get in the way of their lies, like their butt buddy friends who post lies, lies and more lies about anybody who reveals the truth about this band of homosexual predators.

Yet Davies lives in a neighborhood filled with white niggers and real has ONE percent of minorities living there. For a KKK member like

In addition to his site host being upset, AZbb who provided him with his BBS software will also likely have an interest, since their license includes these restrictions and warnings: "You agree, through your use of this AZbb forum, that you will not post any material which is ..... sexually oriented..... .....legal actions can be taken against you."

Since the site contains computer generated depictions of pre-teen female characters engaging in sexual union, I'm certain AZbb would view N9OGL's use as contrary to his user agreement. ".....legal actions can be taken against you" ????

Your point may be valid but I learned the Morse Code in the Scouts, before I had any idea of becoming a ham. The fellow who taught it did it right. There was no counting of dots and dashes. He linked the letter sounds to groups of words like "here comes the bride" for "Q".
It wasn't work; it was fun. Brushing up my code a couple of years later before taking the Novice exam wasn't any work either.

Let me be certain that I understand you correctly (whew!), Mark. You claim that Len was doing his civic duty as an American (we'll leave out those nearly 300,000,000 shirkers who were not doing their civic duty in commenting or replying to comments on 05-235), but when Steve did something similar, he was trying to get the FCC to violate the Constitution. Is that about it? Do you think that Len doesn't like Mr. Rightsell or Extra Class licensees?

Show us that you know the meaning of the word "civic", Mark. If that doesn't work for you, show us that you know the meaning of the word "civet".

As I read the NPRM, each licensee will keep the privileges that they have until and unless they take a test to upgrade. That means the code-tested Techs will keep the HF privileges that they now have.

My copy of MCO P10120.28G (Individual Clothing Regulations) dated 08 Jul 05
says:

"2000. INTRODUCTION. Reference (f) directs the services to provide enlisted service members with all uniforms required for wear. Initially, this requirement is met by issuing all recruits the Initial Clothing Allowance (commonly known as the "sea bag") at recruit training. Marine recruits are issued required uniforms, t-shirts, shorts, and sweat suits; free of charge.
This chapter contains a listing of the Initial Clothing Allowance (seabag) issue and other authorized clothing allowances, issues, and entitlement criteria.
Allowances are gratuitous, i.e. at government expense. Authorized personnel do not pay for allowances, neither directly nor via pay checkage."

Seems pretty clear to me that the initial "sea bag" issued at MCRD is "free of charge".

> Ask him/her if MY assertion about B-Billet assignments (Drill > Instructor, I&I duty, Eighth and I Street/HQMC, Embassy Duty, etc)
> rating an issue of dress blues is true or not.

That would come under the heading of a supplementary clothing allowance. MCO P10120.28G has this to say about that.

"2008. SUPPLEMENTARY CLOTHING ALLOWANCES. Supplementary clothing allowances are additional/extra clothing allowances authorized to enlisted personnel when they are assigned to a tour of duty that requires extra clothing for the performance of such duty. Supplementary clothing allowances are additional quantities or special items of uniform clothing not required by the majority of other enlisted personnel. Organizational clothing should also be considered as a means for providing additional, mission-specific uniform clothing, per chapter 7 of this Manual. Supplementary clothing allowances may not exceed 20 percent of the Initial Clothing Allowance established by the Assistant Secretary of Defense (ASD(FMP))."

As an example of a supplementary allowance, recruiters are issued a supplementary allowance. MCO P10120.28G describes the procedure thusly:

"(3) The Recruiters Blue Uniform Allowance will be issued to students immediately upon successful completion of the Recruiters School, MCRD, San Diego. When transfer orders are received and special measurement clothing is required, the clothing officer will forward the requisition and appropriate measurements to DSCP requesting that the special measurement clothing be forwarded to the CO of the organization to which the individual was transferred."

Note that the recruiter is not issued a check to buy the items, but the clothing officer actually ORDERS the clothing items from the Defense Supply Center, Philadelphia (DSCP). DCSP sends the items to the Marine at his new (recruiting) post.

To conserve bandwidth, I'll not give other examples (like 8th & I, etc.), but all instances follow this same pattern --- the initial issue of a required uniform is gratuitous in every case, without any pay checkage or "chit" required from the Marine.

Cash payment IS required for replacement of issued uniform items, and Marines are paid a monetary yearly "maintenance allowance" on the anniversary of their enlistment.

The guy who created the software has been to my site a number of times, to help me remove some bugs in the program, here is the license agreement for the software

AZ Licence: Terms and Conditions

Preamble

Unless otherwise specifically stated, following Licence and Terms and Conditions applies to all scripts, software and programs by AZ whether under AZ brand or otherwise.

The script, associated documentations, files and related items ("the Software") is licensed software and copyright of AZ ("the Copyright Holder").

The Software is being provided by the Copyright Holder under the following licence ("the Licence") on an annual basis.

By obtaining, installing and/or using the Software you ("the Licensee") hereby agree that you have read, understood, and will comply with all of the terms, conditions, and restrictions set by the Licence.

Permission is granted to the Licensee obtaining a copy of the Software, to deal in the Software with certain restrictions. The Licensee is granted the rights to use, copy, and modify the Software privately and for own use with certain restrictions including but not limited to: any display of copyright information, within the source code or displayed by the software, may not be modified or removed in any way.

Rights to publish or distribute any form of the Software (copied, modified, merged, or any other form), in whole or in part are strictly prohibited. Rights to take any action not covered here with relation to the Software are DENIED without written authorization to be obtained from all the Copyright Holder.

The Software is provided on an "AS IS" and "AS AVAILABLE" basis without any representation or endorsement made and without warranty of any kind whether express or implied, including but not limited to the implied warranties of satisfactory quality, fitness for a particular purpose, non-infringement, compatibility, security and accuracy.

To the extent permitted by law, the Software, the Copyright Holder and distributors will not be liable for any indirect or consequential loss or damage whatsoever (including without limitation loss of business, opportunity, data, profits), whether in an action of the contract, negligence or other tortious action, arising out of or in connection with the use or performance of the Software.

The Software makes no warranty that the functionality of the Software will be uninterrupted or error free, that defects will be corrected or that the Software or the server that makes it available are free anything which may be harmful or destructive.

The Licensee agrees to indemnify and hold the Software, the Copyright Holder, distributors and its employees and agents harmless from and against all liabilities, legal fees, damages, losses, costs and other expenses in relation to any claims or actions brought against the Software arising out of any breach of these Terms and Conditions or other liabilities arising out of the use of the Software.

If any of these Terms and Conditions should be determined to be invalid, illegal or unenforceable for any reason by any court of competent jurisdiction then such Term or Condition shall be severed and the remaining Terms and Conditions shall survive and remain in full force and effect and continue to be binding and enforceable.

These Terms and Conditions shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the law of England and the Licensee hereby submits to the exclusive jurisdiction of the English courts.

The name of the Copyright Holder shall not be used in advertising or otherwise to promote the sale, use or other dealings in this Software without prior written authorization of the Copyright Holder.

The Copyright Holder reserve the right to modify this licence at any time, and in any way, shape, or form that is seen fit without any prior notice or warning.

This document will be updated regularly and users are advised to check this document on regular basis.

Personal and Non-Profit Licence

AZbb and AZchat Licence is granted FREE OF CHARGE to Licensees, to be used strictly for personal and non-profit use, though donations are greatly appreciated. Licensees are encouraged to contact the copyright holder if they are in any doubt whatsoever.

Any and all other uses of the Software would be subject to the "Commercial Licence".

Commercial Licence

Any use of the Software, not covered under "Personal and Non-Profit Licence" would require and be subject to "Commercial Licence".

Commercial Licence grants the Licensee a non-exclusive licence to use the Software on one installation to be accessible by one URL (Uniform Resource Locator, web address, or each sub-domain or virtual host) subject to the provisions in all sections of this Agreement.

Commercial users of the Software as defined by the Limited Commercial Use Licence are required to pay a Licence Fee per annum ("the Licence Fee"). Licensees must abide by the terms of the licence in full and at all times.

Each and every installation of the Software on a single or multiple computers, whether in Stand alone or Centralised mode by Licensees would be subject to and require an individual Licence. A discount structure will be made available to parties interested in obtaining Commercial Licence for multiple installations (and/or URLs) of the Software.

AZbb Commercial Price Structure

01 Licence => £20 (pound sterling)
02 Licences => 25% Discount
03+ Licences => 30% Discount
05+ Licences => 35% Discount
10+ Licences => 40% Discount
20+ Licences => 45% Discount
50+ Licences => 50% Discount

Licensor does not give Licence Fee refunds. The Software can and should be examined prior to requesting and obtaining a Commercial Licence.

Copyright and User Contribution

All users who contribute to the Software in any form whatsoever herby agree that the contribution would become part of and copyright of the Software. Unless specifically granted by the Copyright Holder of the Software, contributors herby agree to forfeit all copyright arising and associated with their contribution.

Contributors are encouraged to contact the Copyright Holder if they are in any doubt whatsoever.

I really doubt they do anything thing because it's legal, the US Supreme Court ruled as long as real childern weren't involved in the production of it then "virtual porn" is very must likely to be protected by the First Amendment (note: that's not their words, but close to it). and Secondly that is just ONE board on demented Otaku BBS, the BBS is there not only for that but to discuss other things in the anime world, and new boards are just about added every day. As a matter of fact I started adding "specialized boards" for the discussion of a certain Anime. but nice try anyway :)

We were given a monthly clothing allowance and it wasn't much -- just a few dollars each month.

If you want to make a case then post the regs that were in effect at the time in question.

No, they were NOT different, except for the one-and-only part you DID get right...INITIALLY Marines only received a monthly allowace for MAINTENANCE of uniforms.

Uh huh.

In the early 80's.

The "regs" that Hans, K0HB quoted are almost the same as those in force "back then".

A quick phone call or letter to HQMC can verify the changes.

In the mean time, get a hankie and wipe the blood off your nose.

Don't need luck -- just google "chit-book" and "MCRD". You will get a Sorry, Frankie. Still a loser.

The FACT remains that Marines are NOT charged for initial outfittings of uniforms, to include Dress Blues, when assigned to certain duties, including I & I duty.

Guess that " ####bird PFC " doesn't have all the answers afterall, now does he...?!?!

MAYBE if he didn't spend his ONE tour in constant legal You're still culpable in civil court.

Any "damahe" suffered will be re-couped in the civil case against you, Markie.

That gives YOU time to hide your assets in your "wife's" name. Of course if you really are married, a subpoena to the IRS will result in your tax records and help us to locate any/all "real" assets in EITHER name. I am sure that finding the rest won't be all that difficult.

Good luck.

Now calm down Hans, before you have a hissy fit. Put on your

You've "exposed" nothing. (Nothing of MINE, that is...)

You've guessed, lied, manufactured, and otherwise proactively

YOU are the one exposed, you little troll.

Lennie was trying to parody my AOL home page, Dave, where I parodied a country western song with "CIVIL AIR PATROL: We Were Homeland Defense When Homeland Defense Wasn't Cool".

(Small details, but then Lennie always seems to have a "details" problem.)

This is a fact, of course, and therefore subject to yet another LennieRant. CAP was formed in the days just prior to the United States' entrance to WW2 for the purpose of supporting the "civil defense" mission.

In the days immediately following 9/11, CAP was, with rare exception, one of the few non-combatant aviation assets allowed to take to the air.

As a matter of fact, it was CAP surveillence resources that were tapped by NY OES to fly the Ground Zero disaster assessment missions...None of the "professional" resources could get over-target with real-time video and real-time re-tasking capability.

Our sister auxiliary, the USCG Auxiliary, was also instrumental in providing post 9/11 resources.

All those uniformed volunteers...Must be scary to the likes of Lennie...

In AF basic training, I was issued a full complement of uniforms, many of them uniforms that were about to be phased out. On my one year anniversary, I began receiving a clothing maintenance allowance that didn't begin to cover the cost of uniforms that "went out" that first year. The mess dress uniform was never an issue item, and the service dress was always appropriate to wear at formal functions.

The AF Reserves attend basic training same place I went. They were issued a full complement of uniforms as well. After training, when a uniform item becomes "unserviceable" due to wear and tear or being phased out, the unserviceable item is brought to clothing issued and replaced at no cost. That includes shoes and boots. It did not include optional items such as wrinkle free(polyester) slacks, Corfam dress shoes, etc.

I said that it was possible that there are situations where new uniforms are given, guarding the Tomb of the Unknown could be an example where uniforms are kept beyond merely "serviceable."

USN wear uniforms. USNR wear uniforms. USMC wear uniforms. USMCR wear uniforms. USA wear uniforms. USAR wear uniforms. USAF wear uniforms. USAFR wear uniforms. CAP wear uniforms. Tennessee Militia/Guard wear uniforms.

That you did not guard the Tomb is your problem. Given as many services uniforms you managed to wiggle into over the years, guessing what service's uniform you may be wearing on any given day of the week is not my problem, either.

You do your own homework, phone calling, and letter writing campaign.

<HUGE SNIP of Dudly's attempt to push buttons>

>> I'm "just asking questions," Jimmie.
>
> Me too.

Tsk, tsk, tsk. Dudly the Imposter is in no position to "ask."

The rest of us readers have been waiting impatiently for the PROOF of Dudly's claims. Those haven't appeared. Not for seven years. All we have are PERSONAL INSULTS as "responses" such as the one following:

> Why don't you treat yourself to a REAL mental health >provider...?!?! Not that correspondence school nitwit you married.

Sad to see Dudly the Imposter beginning to slide off the edge of reality into the terribly abyss of insanity.

Dudly tries to insult my wife, a holder of three degrees obtained at Beloit College, Beloit WI, University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana, University of Wisconsin at Madison, Madison, WI. That's a BA, two MSs, residence studies not through "correspondence schools." She was licensed in both Illinois (working for the state) and Washington (private practice) as a Social Services Counselor (supervisor while in Illinois). I've explained that all before, but Dud keeps on with his personal insults against family of anyone he considers an "enemy." Dudly is clearly irrational and is most likely going insane in his abject HATRED of others.

As to "nitwit," I don't remember my wife's IQ rating back in high school days (our Class of 1951 was given a two-week long battery of tests by U of I as part of a state-wide study) but it was quite high. While my wife HAS worked with mentally-deranged persons, I need NO extra information from her to recognize abberant behavior such as Dudly the Imposter has done in here. Such irrational behavior is easily spotted after being an observant adult for a long period of time.

Why does Dudly persist in his personal insults of everyone who disagrees with him in here? That's the irrational part. Coupled with his abject REFUSAL to provide any PROOF of his claims, it shows the irrationality as if it were spotlighted.

Dudly the Imposter has yet to produce any PROOF of his many and very varied CLAIMS. None in seven years of his spewing hatred against others. His "military career" is apparently just a big package of lies. We readers know he has no real concept of radio or electronics theory. We have NOT seen where any other radio amateur has ever "worked" him on the amateur bands. Dudly provides NO names of his friends in amateur radio nor in any of the hobbies he claims to be involved in. Dudly provides NO names of any friends in the USMC during a supposed 18-year term of service. He appears to be nothing but a FRAUD, a con man, a snow-jobber with an addiction to things military, uniforms, and heroic actions claimed of himself. He wants all the attention focussed on HIM yet he will NOT provide any proof himself. When challenged on anything, Dudly "responds" with a salvo of personal insults in an attempt to misdirect the thread into some kind of "battle" between HIM and all others.

This thread started out concerning NPRM 05-143 and WT Docket 05-235. Those are policy issues that have recently been before the U.S. amateur community. I think it should stay that way and NOT plunge into the irrational chasm of Dudly at war with his enemies. He can never win that war.

Trying to change federal law is an "obsession?"

Yes, I can see where baby shoe wearers would get petulant and whiny if their hobby radio toys and merit badges are threatened...

YES, it IS, Jimmie. You haven't graduated to ADULT shoes

PCTAs are NOT a friendly sort when their radio toys and merit badges are threatened. Especially those who are still wearing their baby shoes such as yourself.

Sorry, Jimmie, I only "insult" those poor misguided souls who think that morse code mode communications is still "cutting-edge technology skill" in radio.

Jimmie, WHY do YOU continue to insult, demean, anatagonize all who see to remove the code test?

Why are YOU so obsessed with retaining it?

Why are YOU so obsessed with regressing U.S. amateur radio?

Yourself. Are you uncomfortable with affectionate, friendly

Brother of Dudly, don't try misdirection again. Tiresome.

We readers will just put you down as either NOT WORKING or at some place not associated with electronics at all.

You don't talk shop. You can't relate your work to electronics or don't want to. You make some inferences and vague claims, but NOTHING SPECIFIC. You accuse all those who disagree with you of "bad behavior." Sure sounds like what Dudly the Imposter has done continually in here for years.

YES, it IS. Jimmie, you are constantly AGAINST the code test elimination. You are antagonistic to all those who want to get rid of it. Why is that, Jimmie?

Are your baby shoes so very, very important to you?

>> AMATEUR radio is a HOBBY, Jimmie.

Thousands and thousands of human being helped the victims of hurricanes Katrina and Rita. NO amateur radio license was "required" to HELP A FELLOW HUMAN BEING.

Cut out the sensationalist pandering to visceral emotion,
Jimmie. It's so phony.

AMATEUR RADIO IS BASICALLY A HOBBY. It was never anything else.

You want a HERO MEDAL for being a ham? Go to a jewelry

AMATEUR RADIO IS BASICALLY A HOBBY. It was never anything more.

"Pinks and greens" is a colloquial (familiar) name for the commissioned officer's winter dress uniform from WW2 through past the Vietnam War era. The "pink" is actually a light tan that, with prolonged wear and cleaning, tended to turn towards pinkish. The "green" is the color of the blouse (official name for a suit jacket), actually a dark green, more green than the olive-drab of the "Ike Jacket" which was a standard dress uniform for all ranks from late WW2 years towards the Vietnam War times.

In the late 60s to early 70s, pink was a fashion statement among male clothing, particularly in dress shirts. Such were worn by macho-hetero males and considered "cool." Dudly doesn't know that because he couldn't see beyond the mountain people's dress of Tennessee then...

NONE of us readers have seen ANYTHING of Dudly the Imposter in ANY USMC uniform of any kind from his alleged 18-year "career" in the USMC.

All we readers can see is a pudgy 50-something middle aged, balding, scowling poser in a beat-up sort-of-olive-drab flight suit coverall with cloth captain's bars on the shoulder pads. Dudly put that there himself on the QRZ website. The poopy suit (flight suit) looks like it could have been bought at any large-airport supplies store.

NOT ONE SINGLE PHOTO of Dudly in his dress blues, despite his claim of have TWO FREE sets of them.

Total BULLSHIT from Dudly...a FAKE...a POSEUR...a FRAUD.

So, from which website did Jimmie CRIB these numbers?

Does Jimmie know there are OTHER websites with this information? Jimmie hasn't given those.

Does Jimmie download the FCC database and do his own sorting and tabulating? If so, he hasn't shown his work or allowed visibility into the source code of his sorting-tabulating program.

If these numbers are taken from OTHER sources, Jimmie should state that source in order to be accurate. Why Guilty conscience? :-)

Had Jimmie gone INTO the ECFS filings on WT Docket 05-235, he would have SEEN THAT repeated many times. Jimmie did not, apparently thinks HE wrote it. Jimmie did not. Jimmie did NOTHING about "defeating terrorists" or "saving lives" during hurricane Katrina.

Tsk. Self-appointed "Superior [Moot] Court Judge" Miccolis thinks this newsgroup is some sort of "communication with the FCC?!?" Jimmie, you are terribly confused about reality.

Now you just relax, take some deep breaths, and go to the FCC ECFS and search for my name. [it is very easy given the software tools provided by the FCC...even morsemen can usually understand it] Look at any of my filings before the Commission. Examine them closely. Do you see any phrasing of mine using "mighty macho morsemen?" No? Well, then, WHY do you think I stated that to the Commission?

ABSOLUTELY TRUE, Miccolis. Everyone realizes it. Why not admit that it is so?

>The Amateur Extra class license required both a Morse Code test and a

>First Phone. Morse Code skill alone wouldn't get anyone an Extra.

Prove that the "old First Phone" examination was "less hard" than the Amateur Extra exam. You never completed that last test element on your alleged Commercial radio operator license and could only get a SECOND class.

EVERYONE knows that the Amateur Extra is granted ONLY when BOTH the code test AND the written examination tests are passed. One CANNOT have one without the other.

>Do you think nobody will use Morse Code when the test is gone?

Irrelevant. NPRM 05-143 is solely about the morse code TEST.

Tsk, tsk, you are trying the old, tired trick of Dudly the nebulous "personal" fault.

It is readily apparent that MOST Amateur Extras prize their "accomplishment" and self-elevate themselves to a higher plane of existance that ordinary mortals. Do not be modest in appearance...such boasting of yours has been readily apparent since day one of your appearance on the AOL group all about amateur-radio-as-you-know-it-and-cribbed-right-from-the-ARRL-hymn-book statements there.

>> There is NO Real Majority in the Docket.

>Yes, there is. Try counting by commenters and not by total filings.

Already done that, Jimmie. YOU did NOT. You are trying to escape by accepting Speroni's biased website "tally" as "your own. You have NOT gone into the ECFS and real ALL the filings there or done your own sorting. All you do is blindly believe equally-biased pro-code "interpreters" such as Speroni and then try to make out as if you did it.

The polarization of opinions is too strong, TOO CLOSE, for any statistical validity FOR EITHER "SIDE" to "win." You KNOW this but are unwilling to admit it after your obvious-to-all bias for code testing. Why do you persist in living a lie?

Who cares what you "specifically" wrote? This is NOT Moot Court and there is NO penalty for some imagined charge of perjury you invent on-the-spot to justify your words.

>So am I.

Joe Speroni is also a multiple-petitioner before the Commission who has been DENIED by them each time. Have YOU petitioned the FCC for anything, Jimmie?

>Is there something wrong with Morse Code use?

No. But NPRM 05-143 is NOT about morse code use. :-)

Try to stay focussed on what the NPRM actually said.

Are you fearfull that the Commission will take away your little morse code sandbox on HF?

>No, just the facts. All there for you to check. Did you find any mistakes >that would change the results by even 1%?

No, Jimmie, Speroni's RESULTS are ALL THERE IS. HE did all the "interpreting" and some of that is WRONG...see a "pro-code" comment from an English Department [instructor] who said out-right in her Comment that she is neither into amateur radio nor desirous of obtaining a license.

What did Speroni DO about all those Comments of the 5 weeks between the release of NPRM 05-143 and the Notice in the Federal Register on 31 August 2005? Note the words of the Notice in the Federal Register - the one that makes the procedings legal - stating the OFFICIAL dates.

>Or are you just ticked that someone else did a better analysis than you,
>and had the skills to put it on a website for all to see?

HEHEHEHEHEHEHEHE. Tsk, tsk, Jimmie. "Skills?!?" Money and time to afford preaching the morse code gospel for years?
Long after EVERY OTHER radio service in the USA has dropped morse code mode communications?

No, NOT "TICKED," Jimmie. I put my time and effort into a running account of numbers on the expressed opinions on NPRM 05-143 as seen on the ECFS public listings in WT DOCKET 05-235 and did it in THIS NEWSGROUP. I have no morse axe to grind long after all the other radio services (except amateur radio) have dropped it for communications. YOU DO.

YOU are TICKED, Jimmie. You are ticked because the early Commenters were eager to Comment FOR the NPRM by a 2:1 ratio that went against the wishes of the pro-coders.

>Do you think that someone who files a comment and five reply comments,
>all basically saying the same thing, should be counted as six separate >opinions? I don't.

Tsk, tsk. Then MAKE YOUR OPINION KNOWN to the Commission.

The Commission has established (long ago) the PROCEDURE of Comments and Replies to Comments. Think of it as a "hearing."
It is NOT a "court." It is NOT some "election" and counting of "votes." The Commission takes in all of those filings and studies them, then reaches a decision based on what the Commission thinks is "good for the PUBLIC." The PUBLIC, Jimmie, not some vociferous pro-coder extras who think they are "better" than others by virtue of their radiotelegraphy skill.

You already have a model filing in the ECFS showing "how to do it." Look in the ECFS under filings on WT Docket 98-143 on date of 25 Januarly 1999 for Steven James Robeson.
Remember also that the LAST day of OFFICIAL filings on 98-143 was 15 January 1999. Try not to be as late as this Robeson person...and try to avoid his Klu Klux Klan style of trying to strip a citizen's rights guaranteed under our First Amendment of the United States Constitution.

code. YOU are seeing what YOU WANT TO SEE.

editor "all about words and their definitions?!?"

Webster's New World Compact and Office Dictionary (1989) states:

"con-sen-sus: 1. an opinion held by all or most 2. general agreement, esp. in opinion."

Don't try to explain your remark "It's a lot more." You will get into some strange mysticism of morse and the Beliefs of the Church of St. Hiram. Sorry, but the Commission is not bound by the visions of mystics and is compelled by law to separate church and state.

Tsk, you are confusing your Nun's habit with the robes of a judge. Irrelevant since you cannot tell the difference.

NPRM 05-143 has NOTHING to do with real estate. The FCC state and county governments. Are you deficient in basic government of the United States?

Tsk, tsk, do you also try to teach your grandmother how to

I'm well aware of NPRM 05-143 and what it said as of 21 July 2005. Do you need a copy? It's on the ECFS, pre-dated, under 15 July 2005. It has the time-stamp of when it was received by ECFS, different from its Search Results filing date.

Does a Report and Order conform EXACTLY to what a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking says? At ANY time at the Commission?
I've not seen ANY and that includes MANY different procedings, not just on the amateur radio service regulations.
Would you point out which R&O was EXACTLY like its NPRM?
That would reinforce your contention and your alleged prescience.

Why do you say I am "ticked off?"

We don't have any ticking device at the southern house. There's one at the northern house in Washington but that mechanical clock is seldom used, either by us (when we are there) or our house-sitter/occupant.

Jimmie, I say YOU are the one "ticked off." You try to be an all-knowing guru of amateur radio in here, holding fast to the status quo (and the status-rank you achieved under old regulations). CHANGE seems to be anathema to you. You keep bringing up the past, the past before your existance, as if you had been there. You do not look to the future.
You do not think of newcomers in any way except to go through the same motions as you had to. Your only interest seems to be triumphing all extras (you are one) as the ultimate all.
Of course you hate CHANGE. It will destroy your self-esteem, your bragging rights. That must REALLY tick you off!

Access BPL, Jimmie. NPRM 05-143 has NOTHING to do with Access BPL.

You have NOT looked at the latest regulations in Part 15, have you? I thought not. View those. Also, remember one thing: The FCC was NOT ABLE TO PROHIBIT any Broadband over Power Lines OTHER than place limits on its incidental RF radiation.

Try not to misdirect into other areas when discussing NPRM 05-143.

>> Those that didn't get what they want will bitch and moan and

>You mean like in your reply comments?

Tsk, tsk, tsk...there you go again, taking things out of context and trying to misdirect discussion.

YOU are NOT any "judge" of who can say what on any procedings and dockets at the FCC. YOU cannot accept opposite-opinion commentary or discussion without being ticked off...and making long-winded "discussions" and many diversions to different areas and taking things out of context.

You are a judge of one...a judge of the Acapella Court, singing your little heart out to hold the amateur status quo as much as possible. Basic problem is that you are tone deaf and can't read the music. That is grating to all the listeners.

"Got your ears on?"

Tsk, tsk, tsk...you DID (past tense). Website all changed now and there is NO Robeson listed at all. :-)

What happened to that paper "commission," Dudly?

Tsk, tsk, tsk...you have TWO text mentions on different web pages, one by your unit commander (a female) and on another as an attendee (no rank stated) on some kind of EMT seminar. :-)

Tsk, only if one can keep from laughing. You supplied all the info there...QRZ didn't do it for you.

Several photos in there. Click on the other file links under "uploads" for three more.

Go to www.estripes.com and access the Archives of articles, look under date November 10, 2002. The pictures there are all mine and used in a double-truck (two-page spread to civilians not in publishing) commemorative article on Hardy Barracks of the 1950s.
Reporter is Rick Chernitzer who interviewed me and received lots more digitized photos I took at Hardy and around there.

Then SUPPLY SOME PERSONAL REFERENCES BY NAME, Major Dud.

You are EVADING a question.

> And I guess those references to military units, callsigns, dates, >places, etc were not information from which you could obtain >references...?!?!

Nope. For one, some of those units DON'T EXIST NOW. For another, they do NOT have personnel rosters available through the web.

You just go and digitize some of your "official documents" and then make them available to us. You have supplied NONE so far.

If you don't have a scanner, go to Kinkos or Office Depot or Staples. Those stores have scanning-digitizing services available at very low-cost.

There is NO "Frankie of Silliland" in this newsgroup. There is only Frank Gilliland.

Not being all that familiar with USMC jargon, I clipped some paragraphs of Frank's postings and sent them to some former active-duty Marines. One was a high school classmate of mine.
They all agreed that Frank had the right terms and jargon.
One got OUTRAGED that YOU, a supposed marine, would use a USCG slogan sign-off instead of Semper Fidelis or Semper Fi.

> Not very wise for an alleged engieenr to use corrupted data to >make decisons from, now is it...?!?!

How would Dudly the Imposter know? Dud was NEVER in any engineering position anywhere in the world, wasn't even a bench technician repairing TV sets. Dudly, you FAKE, you don't know dink about radio theory.

> I'd take "suggestions" from him about the USMC like I would get

Given that your first wife divorced you and we wonder about the stability of your present, maybe you SHOULD get some "dating tips." You sure as hell need LOTS of "tips" on getting along with regular folks.

You "missed" not only "something" but nearly everying, Imposter.

If, in 18 years of alleged military service, you CANNOT get USMC terms correct, CANNOT name a single piece of radio-electronics equipment by either formal nomenclature or familiar name, you are a FRAUD, a masquerader, a poor snow-jobbing used car salesman con artist.

Then you SHOULD be able to describe MUCH MORE of their electronics.
You have NOT. You haven't even come close to anything but cribbing general aircraft nomenclature that is availabe on dozens of aviation-interest websites.

No, what I wrote IS THE TRUTH. You know dink about avionics except what you need to operate the controls of your mighty CAP aircraft as "pilot in command."

> MARS operation IS "part of the duties" of a MARINE who holds the >proper b-billet MOS.

> I held that MOS. Reported here before.

USMC has a special MOS just for MARS operators?!?!?

BWAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAH!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

MARS operations are NOT part of the worldwide military communications
network. Dudly was NEVER a part of that bigger, important network.

Nice try, Dud, but it fell flat. YOU fell flat. Take your own medicine for once.

Now, tell us again EXACTLY how you got "discharged." You are confused. First you had a medical. Then it was changed to an Honorable. Then it was back to something strange called an "Honorable Medical" discharge because of your "accident." That's all archived in Google. But, none of US have seen any proof of ANY discharge of your, Dudly...other than what you've squirted all over this newsgroup for years.

>> The claim

Recitation of newsgroup history upsets you, Dudly? It should.
It shows your inconsistency, shifting and shifting with every challenge to produce PROOF of your claims.

> If we could bottle your "Back in 53..." tales we could take a >whole generation of sleeping pills off the shelves, Lennie.

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/My3Years.pdf

"Bottled and waiting."

Why are you so upset and resentful that someone worked massive long-distance HF communications before your birth? WITHOUT USING ANY MORSE CODE MODES? Over a half century ago. There's more radio equipment described in there - that I hands-on operated - than you will ever work on in your life as a ham.
Poor baby...all jealous and resentful. Never had a professional radio job. All experience coming from AMATEUR radio ops.

> "Real proof" HAS been submitted.

BULLSHIT. All YOU presented was UNREAL "proof," just your message claims in here. YOU "submitted" NOTHING.

> Frankie of Silliland screwed up by making suggestions that he had >great "insider" resources, yet can't seem to cross reference SNCO >promotion boards and other meaningful USMC references...

There is NO "Frankie of Silliland" in this newsgroup.

Tsk, tsk, tsk...all you had to do, Dudly, is supply the CURRENT website addresses. WE can then access them to see what they have for data. WE can then determine who is the LIAR and who is not.

But, Dudly has NOT done that. Dud cannot even cut-and-paste the information on those sites. Dud tries to FAKE everything.

> Probably because, like you, he's a pathological liar.

Note the characteristic Dudly "response." Instead of providing REAL PROOF FOR HIMSELF, Dudly attempts to shift focus in the thread by engaging in personal insults. That's a typical diversionary tactic in these back-and-forths with Major Dud.

> I'd rather folks think of me as "nuts" than KNOWN as a liar, such >as you are, Lennie.
>

> Putz.

Tsk, tsk. Most UNPROFESSIONAL CONDUCT of a United States Air Force Auxilliary (Civil Air Patrol) "commissioned" "major." What would your "commanding officer" say?

Dudly the Imposter attempts to make out like he is familiar with Yiddish. He tries a personal insult with a four-letter word, a pejorative foreign to him (meaning 'one who thinks with his penis'), thinking that is "socially acceptible." This is just another example of Dudly the Imposter's FAKERY.

Dudly ist meshuggas.

Not one dime was deducted from my pay for ANY uniform issue, Frankie.

Not one dime.

And those "chits" you refer to were used for PERSONAL items such as shaving cream, razors, deodorant (which you obvioulsy squandered) writing paper, etc. No "pay" was issued until you graduated boot camp.
THAT was the money deducted from your pay, Silliboy.

NOT "uniform issues".

Nope. Not a dime...Oh, I guess we could reeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeally stretch things and say that by virtue of my income taxes and that portion appropriated to the defense budget, I "bought" my uniforms.
But then so did every other taxpayer in the United States, whether they served in the Armed Forces or not.

I have a DD-214. Mine says "Honorable" on it...Not "Less than Honorable", "General" or any other release other than "Honorable". No charges, lost time, or any form of judicial proceedings against me.
Honorable.

Some call it "cowardly".

I do.

And AGAIN, Lennie, for the record:

The Tennessee Wing Commander is not a female. That was your initial claim.

There has never been a female wing commander in Tennessee.

The Commander of TNWG Group 2 is not a woman. That's the unit that I am presently assigned to. In my four years in TNWG, I have never served under a "unit commander" that was "female". To the best of my knowledge, there has never been a female group commander in this Wing, although on that point I am not sure.

For the brief time I was in the TNSG, I never served under a female commander at ANY level.

I never served under a female commander in the Marine Corps.

Nope.

You refuse to use them.

WHAT UNITS don't exist..?!?!

The First Marine Aircraft Wing doesn't exist anymore?

The Third? Headquarters Marine Corps is gone?

Marine Aircraft Group 16 is "defunct"..?!?!

And the MARS programs don't exist...?!?!

Hot flash, Hot rod! Only TWO units that I am aware of no longer exist...NAMTD-1032 and MCAS(H) Tustin, CA. And I do not believe I have ever "referenced" either of those other than to mention having been at Tustin.

Oh...I see...

Then who's "Dudly", "Major Dudly", "Jimmie", "Der Oberst", "Der Feldwebel", "Katapult Kelley", "St Hiram", "Dill Sergeant", etc etc etc.

Seems those are all diminutives that utter from YOUR keyboard, Lennie.

Or shall we just agree that we've caught you in yet another NCTA double standard lie?

Who's Dud? Who's "Dudly"

Remember, Lennie...we're using YOUR standard here...

And Lennie, I knew/know enough about "radio theory" to have passed
the FCC examinations for an Amateur Extra license.

You obvioulsy haven't.

Who's the Imposter?

I've never offered any "nomenclature" on ANY USMC equipment,
Lennie, as it's not germane here.

Unlike you, when I discuss radio equipment in an Amateur Radio forum, it's usually Amateur Radio equipment I am discussing.

YOU can't do that...You don't have any Amateur equipment to discuss...except maybe for the tiny Johnson you alluded to with Dave Heil.

Care to show us your tiny Johnson, Lennie?

No, you didn't "work(ed) massive long-distance HF

You were a radio mechanic. Nothing more, according to your MOS.

You were not a radio OPERATOR...Nor were you a message center

Sure there is. If there's a "Dudly", "Katapult Kelly" "USMC Feldwebel", "Der Oberst", Jimmie, etc etc etc, there IS a Frankie of Silliland.

Or are you holding others to a standard YOU can't meet?

Again, obvioulsy not.

She can't see, or can't control, the deceitful obsessive-compulsive right under her nose, which either makes her

Twice in one day...thanks again, Hans. I actually worked TWO

I disagree! The difference is quite clear.

Here, Len uses emoticons and SHOUTS by using all capitals. His submissions to FCC are full of italics, bold text, and numbered footnotes.

Other than that, there's not much difference....

I remember Len referring to FCC Chairman Powell as "Mikey". As if he'd actually address Mr. Powell that way....

Other way around - he was on cb first.

In his own words, he just "GAVE UP".

I learned it by listening to hams using Morse Code on 80 meters. I first had to build myself a receiver, though.

Basically, it comes down to the fact that Len thinks he's too good to have to learn Morse Code - or anything else - for an amateur radio license.

Sure seems that way.

After all, it's been possible to get a Technician class license without a code test for more than 14 years. All FCC-issued amateur licenses have been available for just a 5 wpm code test for 15 years now.

Nope...but I was on 08 July 1975...And 08 July 1985...And until 29
May 1992.

All USMC uniform regs were as I described them.

Frankie's lame attempts to suggest otherwise notwithstanding, none of what I said is inaccurate.

I still believe that Lennie had some "run-in" with an Amateur at some point. No doubt Lennie tried to bluff the other Amatuer into "signing off" on a Conditional or other such thing since he already professed to "know it all".

His one and only attempt to get a license by deceit rebuffed, he's set upon a mission to undermine Amateur Radio at any and all opportunities. To hell with the mere mortals, HE was a PROFESSIONAL!

You know that, Dee...Dave knows it as do I and anyone else with an IQ over 80 or a drop of common sense.

The FCC pretty well learned from the "Incentive LIcensing" debacle where they essentially "revoked" privileges that taking something away was NO "incentive"!

But there will be folks who will scream that their "rights" are being violated over and over in an attempt to gain sympathy and to try and sway opinion. One particular frequent poster in this forum is very good at that.

According to Google dated 17 November 05, Robeson claimed USMC service from 1974 to 1992.

There is a 13 year to 31 year GAP in there.

Trivial detail according to the Extra Morsemen. They have to hang together...or hang separately.

Looks to me like Hans put on his Manager/CEO hat to "calm the turbulent waters." [he does that once in a while when getting a paternal urge?]

The unwritten rule in here is to allow morsemen to act any damn way they want to. That's okay. No-coders and non-hams are verboten to rise up against Extra morsemen's puerile putzy pejoratives.

Just the same, "clothing allowance" or not, Dudly the Imposter has NOT posted ANY picture of hisself in ANY "active-duty" USMC uniform. Dudly has NOT posted a single scrap of his DD-214 anywhere. Dudly has NOT posted a single name or callsign of anyone who could vouch that he is telling truth.

Dudly the Imposter is still busy being the Imposter.

Hans is defending a FRAUD. Good on Hans. Just what the "amateur community" needs. Pro-bono "defense."

I wonder if Booth, Freret, Imlay, and Tepper know about this?

Well, let's look optimistically. Mebbe Dudly will have a cute little Ham Jumpsuit photo sometime? Mebbe with a "I was homeland security before there was homeland security" ribbon on it? Mighty warrior, etc. Then he can claim "8 hostile actions" after having made it through the Code War.

These mighty warriors certainly know how to turn off any ham wannabes...which may be why Val Germann is still an unmodified Tech for so long?

HAHAHAHAH...answers are in the same order. That's a no-brainer.

Meanwhile, Dudly is busy, busy kissing Hans' ass for that navel regulation of 2005. Dudly doesn't realize that the effective-date regulation is only for NOW, not 13 to 31 years past.

Jimmie Noserve no comment on this. Jimmie pays ALL of his own clothes out of his allowance. He still has his baby

Hello? Can we say Davie is also pompous and arrogant?

Nope. Extra Morsemen are allowed any kind of personal insult against others while all NCTA have to be "kind," "gracious," and "civil" to them. :-)

I'm only retired from REGULAR HOURS. :-) Just finished a contract job trying to find a better way to protect against tin dendrites in consumer-grade PCBs made with lead-free solder. We found a slightly-better way that had already been done, but no cheap way, sad to say.

In case anyone has been on the Outer Planets in the past decade, the Reduction of Hazardous Substances (RoHS) is THE thing in electronics production now. Problem is, without the lead in conventional solder, tin will grow tiny, tiny "whiskers" (called tin dendrites) that can short out circuit traces. Happens long after production soldering. Can't use a simple meter like the old standard Simpson 260...too much ohmmeter current...blows open the dendrite and desposits it back on the traces.

It doesn't matter when the CURRENT regulation was updated.

A quick review of the order suffix indicates it's a much-ammended order.

A five minute phone call could verify my original statements.

As for me, I've posted numersou callsigns that can be verified by

The only "imposter" I see here is the one who claims to know so

No, it didn't do that at all. If we aren't responsible for Steve's actions (making them what you think they should be), why would we have pulled him back?

It's hard to say something in a forum where all we have is the written word. Have you written anything to bring your friend Mark Morgan back to reality? What have you written to Len toward straightening him out?
All I've noted here is you egging him on. Some friend you are.

Is that the double standard you're always going on about?

It doesn't take much to "discredit (you) and divert attention" from ANYthing related to you, Frankie. You do almost all of the work for me!

And regardless of where the hyphen goes, YOU still have TWO court martials to your credit!

My -214 says "Honorable"...Not "Less Than", or "General", or BCD, or anything else.

> But if you have proof to the contrary
> (as well as proof that you were active duty for those 18 years) then
> by all means prove me a liar.

It's already been done. References have been posted over and over.

That you are too incompetent or too cowardly to follow up on them is NOT my problem.

> It really bugs you that a shitbird PFC earns an honorable discharge > while you skated out on a medical discharge after 18 years, doesn't > it?

First of all, you didn't "earn" an "honorable" discharge. Your less-than-honorable discharge was later upgraded to an "honorable", at least per your story.

IF...and I repeat IF your story is valid, you were GRANTED an upgrade. It wasn't "earned".

> It must -really- irk you that the same shitbird PFC is tearing > down the false-front you have built around your mediocre "career" as a > Marine reservist. Well, that's your problem, Dud. Deal with it.

What you HAVE done, Frankie is lie, deceive and, at best, take a flying-A leap guess at everything you've cared to comment on. And you've flopped EVERY time.

Your brusied ego has gotten in the way of your rants at every turn.

Your "theory" that I couldn't persue my interests in EMS without being a "reservist" is hillarious. How you figured that I couldn't muster enough off duty time in 18 years to squeeze in a 140 hour course is beyond me. (It only took 4 1/2 months of off duty time in Winter 85/6).

And Franke, communications encryption devices on USMC helos were JULIETT, not "VINSON". The crypto of choice for the Sea Stallions, as were all other UH/AH/CH birds I had occassion to be around was the KY-28.

Your rants about uniforms are priceless. Unfounded and confused, but priceless. I was going to see if you'd actually follow up on my suggestion, knowing that you either wouldn't, or that you'd never acknowledge that you did since I already know the answer...

Hans popped in with the applicable MCO, however, cutting that short. The diversion of "that's a 2005 regulation" was expected. Yet the same phone call you could have (but won't, you slimey coward...) made can verify that the policy on uniform issues has been essentially the same for decades.

Oh...And your "chit book" references...THAT is the stuff of "confused sideline warriors", Frankie.

Now, unless you want to use some more profanities or make more less-than-thinly-veiled threats of physical violence, why don't YOU go away...Afterall this is an AMATEUR RADIO forum, and unless you've been misrepresenting you identity, you're the outsider...

Would you talk to a fugly shitstain like this?

I tried to talk to him in person but he's too skeered of me, so he stayed inside his section eight slum and pointed a BB gun at me.

He's not allowed to have a real gun since his felony conviction. lol

It's not required.

Because there is none, Len.

The point is that this newsgroup is about amateur radio. And the NPRM is about amateur radio and the Morse Code test to get an amateur radio license.

A license you've never been able to earn.

> you really DON'T understand the environment I was Actually, I do, Len. That environment wasn't amateur radio.

It was military radip, back when one new teleprinter cost more than most amateur radio stations of the time.

Seen it. What's your point? Amateur radio isn't the Army.

Nobody said it did, Len. You were trained at taxpayer expense, and worked as part of a large supervised team that took care of that facility.

Two errors, Len, and quickly corrected.

No fantasy involved, just a reading of what you wrote about it. You simply "GAVE UP".

Heck, you wouldn't even spend the time or money to get/build a suitable radio receiver and listen to real live Morse Code on the air back then. Just some tapes copied from records...

Nobody said that.

Sounds like what you're saying is that you think your commercial
license
and experience as a military radio technician (not radio operator) should somehow give you a magic golden ticket to an amateur radio license. No way the mighty Anderson should be required to actually learn something for an amateur license...right?

I understand your "standards" very well, Len. To you, an amateur radio license wasn't - and still isn't - worth the effort it would take for you to learn enough to pass the required tests. Right?

I have no problem with those "standards" at all.

Awwww..."not worthy"?

Are you ashamed of your motivations, Len? Or have I already stated them, and you're angry that I understand so much?

Yes, Len. You're clearly obsessed with something that doesn't affect you.

> Trying to change federal law is an "obsession?"

Nope. The way you behave in doing so definitely is. Particularly since the "law" does not really affect you.

It's as if someone from far away from Sun City tried for years to get the zoning rules there changed, because they might want to build a house there.

I wear a size 12 in most shoes, Len. I prefer Saucony running shoes most of the time. I ran 35 minutes before dawn today - kinda big steps out there....

completely uninvolved with.

How? Your accomplishments do not give you a golden ticket to an amateur radio license.

One of the wonderful things about amateur radio is that all must meet the same requirements for the license, regardless of other radio experience, licenses, education, age, income, etc. Always been that way. The grade schooler has to meet the same license requirement as the graybeard Ph.D. in EE with multiple patents and other licenses.

That simple equality really seems to burn you.

Incorrect. You insult and denigrate anyone who disagrees with you.

Who is this "Jimmie" you keep referring to? Your imaginary friend?

I'm not. I simply think the Morse Code test does more good than harm.
I think it's a good idea, for reasons stated here and in my Comments to FCC.

The KY-28 airborne cryptos were neither VINSON nor JULIETT. All the TSEC/KY-8/28/38 were NESTOR family cryptos.

Until VINSON family was introduced in the 80's, US crypto system families carried names from Greek mythology (ADONIS, BACCUS, JASON, NESTOR, ORESTES, PONTUS, etc.). There never was a US crypto system named "JULIETT".

Sorry, Hans, but yes there was.

The KY-28, used on the OV-10A and D, AH1G and J, the UH-1N, the CH53 A & D were refered to as "JULIETT'. I do not contest that it may have been refered to by those other names in other weapons systems, but USMC Aviation, at least in the Helo/OV Community, refered to it otherwise.

I just told you that it is a Finnish word. It has a very unique meaning in Finnish. Does it mean something different here in the U.S?

>> Could you give us an example of what the >> Finnish term might mean in your English language discussion?

> nope you horse you beat it

You thought I was Mister Ed? Give us an example of any foreign word or phrase which means something else in English. Wanna try with "Gesundheit"? How about "dossier", "raison d'etre", "flambe"?

Do any of them mean something different in their native country than in the United States?

When and if you've rag chewed with a radio amateur in a foreign land and he uses a few words in his native language, do you correct him and tell him that you're an American and that his words mean something different here. Perhaps you define the foreign words according to who initiated the QSO, i.e. if he initiates the contact, you go by his language's definition of its own word; if you initiate it, you go by (according to you) the meaning of the word in the United States. You might really confuse him and tell him that you won't accept his definition or the American definition (according to you) but that you'll only accept the very special "Mark Morgan definition".

If the FCC is going to eliminate code testing (and I think they will), their approach seems reasonable to me. No one gains privileges and no one loses privileges. Everyone on HF, no matter when they tested, will have taken at least two tests to get there.

This kind of continual foul language, and the anti-M3 and anti-RSGB attitude (not to mention the "wisdom" portrayed in sig files) are some of the reasons why amateurs will not be taken seriously over the BPL issue. Do the regulars of this group realise that it is becoming legendary for everything Usenet was supposed not to be? Surely it is possible to have a civilised debate without this stuff?

It is an insecurity thing.

Look where the "and the anti-M3 and anti-RSGB attitude (not to mention the "wisdom" portrayed in sig files) " comes from an you rarely see anything of value from the same source.

If you want a ham license lennieboy, you must pass the test, it's that simple, or rather seems to be impossible for you. I has nothing to do with 'proving anything' by getting more 'titles'. I has to do with getting a license to operate on ham radio. Something that seems quite beyond your capabilities.

There is no 'necessity' of getting an amateur license, unless you want to operate on the ham bands, just like there is no 'necessity' of getting a driver's license unless you want to drive a car. All of your bragging about your intellect and knowledge and experience you claim has squat to do with ham radio. Thousands of people with no prior knowledge or experience in radio communications, electronics, ect., have studied and passed the test to obtain a ham license. Something that seems to completely befuddle you. Yet here you go on and on about all your skills and knowledge yet you can't seem to get a license, something that many grade schoolers have achieved.

Your memory on this issue is not accurate.

Regardless of platform, user agency, or military department, crypto systems are named by NSA (not by the Navy, USMC, or whoever). The KY-8/KY-28/KY-38 family was named "NESTOR".

I am well familiar with the crypto suite installed in those airframes. When assigned as a member of the communications staff at CINCLANT, I could have told you the NSA serial number of every KY-28 and what tail number carried it in every US/NATO aircraft in the Atlantic theatre.

What is Ham Radio?

Ham Radio is a technical pursuit for those who are interested in the science of radio wave
propagation and who are also interested in the way that their radios function. It has a long-standing tradition of providing a source of engineers who
are born naturals.

Ham Radio awakens in its aficionados a whole-life
fascination with all things technical and gives
an all-abiding curiosity to improve one's scientific knowledge. It's a great swimming pool, please dive in!

This excitement causes a wish to share the experience
with ones fellow man, and shows itself in the gentlemanly traditions of Ham Radio.

Radio Hams are in a unique privileged position in that they can construct and operate their own equipment! No-one else has this privilege. Users, such as broadcasters,
the po lice and armed farces, CBers and mobile phone users have to purchase ready-made gear. Manufacturers are not licensed to operate their gear. Radio Hams
are qualified to design, build and then operate their own pieces of equipment. They do this
with gusto, and also repair and modify their own equipment. This is a privilege well worth the effort
to gain, and one to be jealously guarded.

The excitement that drives a Radio Ham starts with relatively simple technologies at first, perhaps making his own Wimshurst machine and primary cells. Small pieces of test equipment follow, possibly multimeters and signal generators. Then comes receivers and transmitters. It is with the latter that communication with like-minded technically motivated people takes off. The scope for technical development grows with the years
and now encompasses DSP and DDS. There is also a great deal of excitement in the areas of computer programming to
be learnt and applied.

The technical excitement motivates Radio Hams to compete with each other to determine who has designed and manufactured
the best-quality station. This competitiveness is found in DXing, competitions and fox-hunts.

-----OOOOO----

However, beware! A Ham Radio licence is such a desirable thing to have that there are large numbers of people who wish to be thought of
as Radio Hams when, in fact, they are nothing of the kind! Usually such people are a variation of the CB Radio hobbyist; they buy their radios off the shelf and send them back to be repaired; they are not interested in technical discussion
and sneer at those who are; they have no idea how their radios work inside and have no wish to find out;
they are free with rather silly personal insults;
they have not satisfied any technical qualification
and their licences prevent the use of
self-designed-and-built equipment.

These CB types engage in the competitive activities
with their Cheque-Book-purchased off-the-shelf radios
in a forlorn effort to prove that they are Radio Hams.

No _REAL_ Radio Hams are deceived by such people!

-----ooooo-----

One infallible way to disambiguate the CB Radio Hobbyist
from the _REAL_ Radio Ham is to solicit their view of the difference between CB Radio and Ham Radio. A Radio Ham will perceive Ham Radio to be a technical pursuit and will perceive CB Radio to be a social communications facility
no different in essence to a land-line telephone or a GSM mobile in the hands of a 6-year-old. Thus a Radio Ham could also hold a CB licence safe in the knowledge that such a licence says no more about him than having a land-line telephone, whilst continuing to regard Ham Radio as a separate technical pursuit.

A CB Radio hobbyist, on the other hand, sees no difference between a Ham Radio licence and a CB Radio licence. To him, they are sisters-under-the-skin. Wrongly, the CB Radio Hobbyist then tries to classify himself as the equal of the Radio Ham when, in fact, he is nothing of the kind. A sure sign of a CB Radio hobbyist is if he holds, or has ever held, a licence issued under the gangrenous degeneration that is the M3/CB Fools' Licence scheme.

-----ooooo-----

One group of people who claim to be of the standard of Radio Hams but who are in reality nothing more than an apology for the failure of a CBer are those class B

licensees who falsely proclaimed that they were against
the use of a Morse Test to control access to the HF
bands, until, that is, a test was introduced at their intellectual level, the intellectual level of 6-year-olds.

6 year-olds simply lack the mathematical tool kit to enable them to handle even the simplest algebraic manipulation
for Ohm's Law and thus, the disgraceful Class Ber's in the aforementioned category are not Radio Hams by any stretch of the imagination!

Remember - A sure sign of a CB Radio hobbyist is if he holds,
or has ever held, a licence issued under the gangrenous
degeneration that is the M3/CB Fools' Licence scheme!

Todd,

An examination of your board (it's not very secure, by the way) shows hand-drawn and computer generated pictures of pre-pubescent females involved in masturbation, intercourse with an animal, and other pornographic depictions of children. The question has nothing to do with "legal" --- it has to do with mental illness.

Go away, and take your kiddy porn with you.

Of course it does. If any Extra Morseman says it, then it "must" be true!

Okay, so someone works an amateur radio contest and that is a "proof" of his/her military service?

Tsk, the military of the United States has entered a strange, new world since 1989 where amateur radio contesting is somehow an "honorable discharge."

What next, the Congressional Medal of Honor awarded to a ham who relayed the most health and welfare traffic during hurricane Katrina?

Ah, now Sister Nun of the Above is spanking for using

And "numbered footnotes!" Tsk, tsk, what does Jimmie think

You seem to be. Of course, you've never been in politics,

No, no, NO, Jimmie, MUCH lower in frequency than that...somewhere around 9 MHz if memory serves. Was in early February 1953, using a BC-339 1 KW transmitter.

>In his own words, he just "GAVE UP".

No, no, NO, Jimmie...I stayed there for nearly three years after that until late January 1956.

Oh, you mean "did I give up" on learning more morse code?
Yes, I did. Roughly six years later in California I gave up on bothering to continue learning morse code.

Jimmie think that a "crime?" Of course he does. He's a religious zealot MORSEMAN! A proselyte for the Church of St. Hiram. Do you also ride bicycles in your town, going door to door preaching the Morse Way to residents?

teen-agers! Did you both get nice, pretty merit badges?

Basically, Jimmie boy, you are full of snit.

I don't see any point in learning what was ONCE the only way to communicate in radio in order to get an AMATEUR license.

Tsk, tsk...you forget (conveniently and whenver possible)
that I'd already operated transmitters (note plural) on HF many years before. Want to see them? Here's a link:

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/My3Years.pdf

You might want to tell the United States ARMY on your demand that all radio operators must get an amateur radio license FIRST. Hurry up and tell them, do your "service for the nation!" That's a good lad. <pat on the head>

>After all, it's been possible to get a Technician class license without

Oh, wow, Jimmie made his THIRD MAJOR MISTAKE in one posting!

Jimmie boy, FCC 99-412 ordered all morse code test rates for radio amateur licenses to be fixed a 5 words-per-minute beginning in 2000. That was only FIVE years ago. Not "15."

Tsk, you are rapidly getting a reputation for ERRORS and MISTAKES! Not good. Are you under stress? Have you gotten laid yet? Work on that...

Clearly shows a picture of Col. Eileen Parker, Vice Commander, Southeast Region. [southeast region is 6 states including TN]
Later on in this Newsletter is a text pat-on-the-back for two CAP members, one of which is "Capt Steve Robeson."

If a "vice commander" is NOT a superior officer, then the "vice" means something else?

"Never?" What does a Vice Commander of the Southeast Region DO and how is she in the chain of command? Let's see...by the Newsletter's own writing, the "southeast region" includes Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Puerto Rico, and, of course, TENNESSEE.

Remember your IMPORTANCE in the scheme of things...you were
"homeland security before there was homeland security!"

Looks like it is still a Good Ol' Boys club playin' sojer in da woods. No pay. All volunteer. They get to wear nice uniforms with pretty medals, call themselves a "force mulitplier!" Yeah, their Table of Organization seems to be mostly Military Police units. "MP" not SP. Note the confusion between MP and SP that Frank wrote about in another thread.

> I never served under a female commander in the Marine Corps.

Of course not. You couldn't stand it, militant misogynist and all. You probably would have called a USMC female superior officer a "CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL NITWIT!"

Does Dudly consider the Naval Academy, Annapolis, MD, a
"CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL?" I'm sure you do.

Does Dudly consider all women "NITWITS?" I'm sure you do.

Keep standing, "Jarhead."

Go to the home page of sujan.hallikainen.org and use links to get to military radios.

Over on Harold Hallikainen's Radio History website, in the uploads section, are some more PDFs on RADIO. Three in all. "AlphabetSoup" is a digitization of a 1962 booklet published by the Japan Signal Overseas Battalion (a merge of the 71st Sig Bn and 72nd Sig Bn that happened after I left for the States in 1956), describing the ADA station functions and equipment as it was, lots more RADIO equipment; supplied by James Brendage, a civilian engineer and Department of the Army and Department of the Air Force employee, who is retired and living in California. Jim Brendage was working at ADA transmitter site when I was assigned there and we corresponded by surface and e-mail after 2000. "The First Walkie Talkie" is about the SCR-300 / BC-1000 VHF two-way backpack FM transceiver that was designed by Motorola (that you insisted "didn't exist" in WW2!), made by them, and was used in all theaters of operation up to and including the Korean War.
Includes some specific design features of the Walkie-Talkie with some schematics obtained from the TM on that radio. The "Microwave Radio Relay" PDF is a general description of that as it was used by land forces from WW2 onwards...including the
AN/FRC-23 and AN/FRC-35 that I was a supervisor of and operated.

You might look elsewhere on that site and see, under "National"
[Radio] a digitization of the supplied manual for their 7-inch VHF-channels-only television set of 1948-1949. I had one then, bought it for me and my parents out of MY earnings in part-time jobs. Strictly for nostalgia purposes that digitization, was a good set at the time but not quite state-of-the-art then.

If you go to the home page links to USAER (that's U.S. Army in Europe) history pages and look under Signal units, you can see a Node Diagram and Station Block Diagram of ACAN (Army Command and Administrative Network) as it was in the 50s and 60s, a worldwide HF network that did supply some circuits to the Department of State. I supplied that to the webmaster via e-mail since I had the diagrams from official sources.

Stand down, Jarhead.

Dudly definition of "numerous": "Working" his alternate are the OTHERS?

No one can "refuse to use" something that doesn't exist.

No "double standard" on the NCTA side. No "lies" despite and not being able to "beat up" your challengers.

Right, we are agreed...you used the WRONG slogans, the WRONG jargon. "Semper Paratus" is the slogan of the USCG. I'll let the REAL Marines handle the jargon...they are all in agreement with Frank...and in DISAGREEMENT with your gems in here, Dud.

> Did you show them where YOU used the deaths of Army KIA's to >polish your USENET brasss with, Scumbag...?!?!

Sorry, you HATING little imposter, I mentioned the 23 members of MY Signal Battalion in HONOR OF THEM. 19 that died in a transport crash on 1 Jul 50 in Korea to reinforce Signal operations after the North Koreans had invaded South Korea. The other four were killed in individual actions while on temporary duty in Korea, two before the July 1953 truce signing, two after that start of the "forever truce" (the Korean War has NOT officially ended and "truce talks" continue as they have for 52 years). All of them get remembered. I have all their names, ranks, ASNs, their home towns. All assigned to one Signal Battalion, the 8235th Army Unit. The Battalion HONORED their memory at each Retreat Ceremony. The first billet of the 8235th was Hardy Barracks, Tokyo, named for Corporal Elmer Hardy in his honor. The new transmitter site at Kashiwa, NE of Tokyo, was named Camp Tomlinson in 1956 in honor of Frank Tomlinson. Both were victims of the 1 Jul 50 crash. Camp Tomlinson was retained as a name when control of the ADA facilities were transferred to the USAF in 1963.

I have NO need to "polish brass" through mentioning that I HONOR their memory. My work and efforts while assigned to the 8235th AU were all the "brass polish" I ever needed. That work and effort got me promotions from Private E-2 (at first assignment) to Sergeant E-5 (on release from service) in two years, meeting the minimum time-in-grade required at the time at each level.

Perhaps you'd like to meet some of the "brass polishers" out here who assemble at the Veteran's Cemetary in Westwood (close to the huge UCLA campus in case you're shy on big-city geography) ever Memorial Day and Veteran's Day? Most are middle-aged like yourself. A few are younger guys. Maybe you'd like to holler at them as well as me about "brass polishing their own images" while we bow our heads in prayer for the veterans and place a few American flags on graves? No, I don't think so...your physical safety would be in peril.

> And Lennie, I knew/know enough about "radio theory" to have passed
>the FCC examinations for an Amateur Extra license.
>
> You obvioulsy haven't.

"Obviously."

WOW! Aren't you some "genius" in radio theory!

Imagine that! You got an AMATEUR Extra license!

No sweat, Dud, I passed a First Class Radiotelephone (Commercial) Radio Operator license exam in one sitting in a Chicago FCC Field Office in March 1956. Couldn't get a Commercial Q&A book before then, but I got to borrow the entire loose-leaf (then the format) FCC regulations from a friend at a broadcast station and memorized them. I already KNEW the theory needed for either commercial or amateur radio of the time. Was a matter of filling out the forms, drawing a couple schematics, only strain being to remember the right regulations. Only other "problem" was an interruption for a fire drill in the Chicago Federal Building in between 2nd and 3rd elements. That stretched the test time out to about two hours...two of the test elements were "essay" type where one had to write out answers;
other two were multiple-choice. Did I know the answers?
Yes, but I didn't need any open-pool information as there is now since I ALREADY knew enough "radio theory."

So...you charge that I "don't KNOW enough 'radio theory' to get an amateur radio license?" After taking many college-level semester final exams in electronics theory and finally the final for a degree? After many years as an electronics design engineer and obtaining a sole-inventor patent about radio? I'm sure you THINK that in your own little psychotic way but it would be a snap today to outshine you three ways from Sunday on a REAL "radio theory" test. :-)

> You're not "regular folks", Lennie.
>
> You're a pathological liar.

Tsk, tsk, tsk. That "mirror syndrome" reveals itself again.
Dud looks in the computer screen, sees his own reflection, and insults that. :-)

You've misused "pathological" for years. If you say no, then you admit to posing as a real Medical Doctor, something you are NOT. Real MDs are into pathology. A better insult word would have been "congenital"; i.e., from birth.

Tsk, you use "liar" for everyone who just disagrees with your opinions. That's also wrong use of words. It is also indicative of a deep psychological condition that prevents you from handling ANY disagreement. [one of the things learned in Psych 101-102 courses once required in California for many Bachelors degrees]

Tsk, tsk, you've gone into great lengths on your (mistaken)
USMC life, military helicopters, personal weapons shooting, volunteering as part of the Tennessee STATE Guard, Civil Air Patrol...even the aerospace business and electronics engineering expertise, not to mention blabbering about national and foreign policy of the United States. Is that "all about amateur radio?" I think not. :-) See above. :-)

>Heil.

"Amateur" is unpaid, for personal activity in definition.
I've been a hobbyist in electronics and radio since 1947.

The Johnson Viking Messenger was made solely for Citizens Band Radio Service use.

> Care to show us your tiny Johnson, Lennie?

No, it might make you distraught. I can find a website that does have a picture of a Johnson Viking Messenger. I came across one a few years ago while hunting for more information on a Bendix CB transceiver that I still have; same size as the Johnson, slightly different circuitry. Got it at a discount, new, from Stan Beer, a Bendix field engineer at the time (1960).

I already have digitized photos of my indoor workshop. That includes an HP 606 and HP 608D RF signal generator, two dual-trace oscilloscopes (50 MHz Philips, 60 MHz Protek), frequency and period counter (my design in a ready-built cabinet, newly converted to LED 7-segment display from old Amperex numeric display similar to Nixies), ancient Heathkit audio generator (up to 1 MHz), one 4 1/2 digit DVM, two 3 1/2 digit DVMs, Boonton 190A Q-Meter, Circuit Specialists dual regulated supply (digital readout), the last remaining single regulated voltage-current DC supply that was the subject of a 1969 two-issue Popular Electronics article (had three others but those got built into other equipment), an all-purpose dual pulse generator (own design) which includes an NTSC sync generator (won't be of much use in the future due to HDTV), a Heathkit audio IM distortion analyzer, a 60 KHz WWVB "receiver" (TRF, loop antenna is in the attic space above) for phase-locking a 10 MHz crystal oscillator used as a secondary frequency standard (still playing with new ways to arrange the PLL). Oops, forgot the AADE L-C Meter, an extremely useful little thing for winding toroids to exact Henries, a small capacitance meter that reads to 0.1 pFd on lowest (100 pFd) scale, my own-built adjustable AC line supply with expanded-scale voltmeter. There's also a full Apple ][+ computer with two 5" disk drives, 9" and 12" monitors but those hardly see any use now...also the UV erase and reprogramming dingus (also home built) for EPROMs. In that compact space is a 3' x 4' drafting board (don't use the K&E drafting machine now, just the scales) which doubles as an illustrator's board for art work. Workbench is 7 feet wide, cabinets above and below. Rebuilt that whole center room myself from plans drawn up on drafting table mentioned. Came together nicely.

Of course, since you so strenuously objected to receiving digitized files through e-mail, you won't get those images.
:-)

Of what relevance is going on and on and on about a supposed
"career" in the USMC, volunteerism in the TN STATE Guard, and Civil Air Patrol? However, if you HAD mentioned some of the USMC radio equipment, it MIGHT have given you some creedence.
Since you didn't, your believability went into the dumpster.

If you cannot be accurate on your descriptions of military life, then you cannot be considered accurate in your descriptions of civilian life.

> Then whatEVER avionics I operate is STILL more avionics than YOU >operate!

In the Civil Air Patrol? :-)

Poor Dudly, trying to outshine someone who has DESIGNED part of the test set for a DME-Transponder-TACAN test set at Microradionics, Inc., and a TACAN test set at RCA Corporation.
Tsk, tsk, I've OPERATED both civil and military avionics in-flight, civil radio-nav radios including the omnibearing selector (for navigation) as both student pilot and later as passenger. Need a full-size Jepp plotter? Got one. :-) Piece of cake. Simple stuff.

I'd add some airborne radars in there but you might go bananas. :-) The three generations of RCA Corp. SECANT aren't counted since those were R&D programs and wouldn't be in any USMC aircraft.

>

> Seems the Marine Corps thinks differently than you.

No, sweetums, the USMC does NOT "think differently." YOU think differently than reality.

MARS is the amalgam of a special services morale builder and a sort-of "linkage" between the military and other U.S. government agencies. It is NOT any sort of mainstay of the Defence Communications System (DCS) or the Digital Switched Network (DSN). MARS is useful as a last-ditch fall-back radio thing "should everything else fail" (which it won't) and it keeps some folks occupied...but it was NEVER any sort of integral part of any military branch's worldwide communications network.

In the late 1960s and very early 1970s, MARS can be praised for doing a massive amount of phone-patches for service people in Southeast Asia. The United States Army Center for Military History says that in one long history paper. But, the "usefulness" of MARS for that sort of personal communications dwindled to a trickle with the coming of the Internet and the connectability of the DSN to the Internet.
With the increase of small computers in the field (as well as PCs on board water vessels), it became common for service people to communicate directly with family and friends through e-mail and, in slowly-increasing use, VoIP. MARS, to justify its existance, turned to the role of "liason" with other government agencies and exercises such as "Grecian Firebolt." The Vietnam War ended 30 years ago and the old MARS paradigms have bitten the dust now.

It would be to an AMATEUR, a poseur about REAL communications who has no real interest in the HF communications methods that formed the basis for today's HF use by amateurs.

You say it is "boring" only to attempt a left-handed insult again. TRUTH is often boring and what you want is a lot of falsehoods about YOURSELF to make YOU "look good."

That PDF on Hal's radio history website is the TRUTH as it was in the 1950s. It's been verified by N2JTV (who was there at the same time I was) and James Brendage, a civilian engineer employed by the Army (also there the same time I was). The accompanying "AlphabetSoup.pdf" was prepared by a Signal Battalion that did the communications operations.

It is "boring" to you because you resent NOT being in a similar assignment and did NOTHING LIKE THAT in the military.

>> Why are you so upset and resentful that someone worked massive >> long-distance HF communications before your birth? WITHOUT

>
> No, you didn't "work(ed) massive long-distance HF
>communications..."

Signalmen are all pro, always were, always will be. Signal Corps didn't play around in hobby fashion with "radiosport" contests on HF. We got the messages through. 220 thousand a month at ADA, a million and a quarter a month at WAR. Circuits from Tokyo to Alaska, Hawaii, San Francisco, Manila, etc. were LONG.

> You were a radio mechanic. Nothing more, according to your MOS.

Incorrect. The Army has mechanics, but those are all in the motor pool working on vehicles. My MOS was "Microwave Radio Relay Operations and Maintenance Supervisor" (281.6 in the old MOS designation).

> You were not a radio OPERATOR...Nor were you a message center >clerk.

The 8235th Army Unit did NOT operate any "message center." It operated a huge radio transmitter-receiver-torn-tape-relay station serving the Far East Command Headquarters.

The 8235th AU (a battalion strength) did not have one single morse code operator on its TO&E, did not use any morse code modes. I was never a "clerk" of any kind.

I did not "operate receivers" because I was not assigned to the receiver site at Camp Owada, NW of Tokyo. After visiting there several times, it is evident that no one there or with the USAF sharing the site did any morse code "operating." The HF communications modes were, in order of use: TTY, Voice, Facsimile. SSB circuits used the "commercial format" of 12 KHz bandwidth, frequency-multiplexing 4 voice bandwidth circuits; on voice circuit was used as an order-wire, the second voice circuit for "overseas radiotelephone," the remaining two circuits for TTY tones (typically 6 to 12 separate teleprinter circuits). Some of the RTTY radio circuits had time-multiplexing for carrying 4 separate TTY circuits on one radio via USN-contract multiplexer operated by the Carrier crew ("carrier" in the telephony jargon, not Navy).

The purpose of the Army-USAF facility was to maintain world-wide communications over ACAN-STARCOM-DCS 24/7, not to be some sort of Special Services morale builder with hobby activities and phone-patches. Before the commsat era, HF was the only practical long-haul communications means for the U.S. military. The Army did its part with ACAN-STARCOM-DCS and the teletypewriter was the key ingredient to insure both accuracy, readability, and security. The USAF continued that role, being assigned control of the station ADA facilities in 1963 and kept it operational to 1978 when the land and buildings were turned over to the Japanese government. Callsign ADA remains today, now the callsign of the United States Army Pacific, headquartered in Fort Shafter, Hawaii. HF communications in the military is now in a secondary position, used as a back-up mode.

Yes, I was not a MORSE CODE operator. Never pretended to be. The Army just didn't depend on morse code for communications over long radio routes, nor could morse code modes handle the volume of traffic required to maintain worldwide units and logistics and security needs. The Army, indeed all the service branches don't use morse code for communications now, any radio path length. They don't need to. They are pros, not amateurs.

"Wait?" That EDITORIAL piece was in the 13 October 2005 issue, Jimmie. Today is 18 November. Why are you so LATE?

My paper copy of Electronic Design has been sitting around for a month. It's a no-charge subscription to those IN the electronics industry; aren't you one of those? The cover feature is "Weapons of Mass Protection." Feature article is (on page 27) subtitled "Where the Homeland Security Dollars Are."

Oh, I understand, you are against making a profit. An unusual attitude for someone who claims professional (for money) employment. Tsk, tsk...no wonder you won't reveal your employer's name!

Your referenced EDITORIAL was written by Editor-in-Chief Mark David. If you check ED's archives, you will find another EDITORIAL of his, includes a mention of the ARRL.
Editor David seems to be FOR Access BPL! Like that? :-)

For example, everyone in the Air Force up until 1994 knew what AFR 35-10 was.

Gen McPeak had the regulations rewritten as Air Force Instructions, and renumbered everything. Similarly, he reorganized the major commands and almost everyone got new unit names. I think he was operating from the principle, "When in doubt, Reorganize (and cut your manpower numbers in half)." By keeping everyone confused, it was hard to tell that they were making the service broken.

I don't think it really has to do with words, but has more to do with cultural difference. what might be illegal here maybe legal in another

Poor iggorant little Dudly. Sorry to bust your big balloon, but, other than doing some code practice in the early 1960s,
I HAVEN'T BOTHERED to get any AMATEUR radio license. :-)

If you wish to make a mountain out of a molehill, you can get some staffer at Newington to look into my correspondence with the late Vic Clark, then President of ARRL. That was in the late 1970s to 1980. That MIGHT be called a "run-in" but I'd say it was just the ultra-superior, don't bother me attitude of the League. It concerned a new movement to eliminate the morse code test for amateur radio. All those in-power 20 WPM Extras would have none of that!

That movement would grow slowly until the FCC got convinced (against League wishes) that a no-code-test Technician class license got created. [see FCC 90-53 copy at www.nocode.org]

"Amateur," not 'Amatuer." :-)

> His one and only attempt to get a license by deceit rebuffed, he's >set upon a mission to undermine Amateur Radio at any and all opportunities. To hell with the mere mortals, HE was a PROFESSIONAL!

Poor baby, mad as hell and can't take it anymore? :-)

You think elimination of the code test is "undermining" amateur radio? I don't think so. Roughly half the U.S. amateur radio community doesn't think so (if the 0.6% of all licensees is a good sampling). Many Amateur Extras of long experience have accepted complete removal of code testing according to WT Docket 05-235 comments.

"Professional?" Of course. I expect to get paid for my work. If that is some "ethical crime" then ALL the unions and guilds and trade organizations are "guilty!" :-)

I've been a professional (getting paid for services done) since 1948...and that is on record at the IRS. "I EARNED my money the old-fashioned way...I WORKED for it!"]

"Deceit?" Not with/to the government of the United States. Nope. Not even to the IRS. Been audited twice, no problems, just misunderstanding situations...one on my part, other on the IRS' part, both on professional deductions. That was settled amicably and all satisfied.

Have I "deceived" any VE or any FCC Field Office? NO. I kept my First Phone renewed, a simple mail-in process, until and past the R&O changed all Commercial Radio-telephone operator licenses to the single General Radio-telephone Operator License (GROL). I applied for, and got, a Private Land Mobile Radio Service license for business purposes (a small partnership) and provided all the correct follow-on documentation for that until the business was dissolved (more paperwork). I applied for and got a CB radio license back when licenses were required, kept those renewed until another R&O removed any need for licensing. I did not need a Restricted 3rd Class Radio-telephone license (no test for those) to operate any commercial radio transmitters since my 1st Phone covered those, both for business purposes and as a student pilot back in the early 1960s. When I've operated commercial equipment, as once for RCA Corporation using borrowed NBC UHF radios, the appropriate signatures of officials were duly recorded on my current First Phone license. When I did some part-time work in AM and FM broadcasting, the back of the current First Phone was duly recorded by the Chief Engineer.

I have NEVER taken any amateur radio license test with any FCC Field Office or VEC organization...nor have I tried to "deceive" anything in saying my experience is a substitute for testing. I am simply advocating an end to morse code testing for an amateur radio license examination. That YOU don't like that is not of my concern. That YOU lie and attempt to accuse me of lying IS of my concern. I try to put an end to it by showing your lies but all you do is generate more lies of your own.

Have I taken ANY amateur radio license tests? Only the "practice variety," such as the practice test on www.qrz.com and a private, but widely circulated test set. Did I pass them? YES. Each element, each time. Were those "aced?" No. Scores were not exceptional but they were above the minimum level needed to pass. Questions on regulations were a weakness. Where the wrong answers were pointed out, I went back to the regulations to get them right in my mind. Have I resumed any "code practice?" No. I have three computer programs on that in my PC archives but have only used them long enough to see that they run.

Do I need any fancy title to enhance my "braq quotionent?" No. I am secure in what I can do and what I can't do, have had a long time of operating radio transmitters legally (half century) on the EM spectrum from LF on through to 25 GHz. Amateur licensees can't go where I've been in the EM spectrum without holding a Commercial radio license or knowing the applicable regulations for that service where such transmission is permitted (such as private boat radios) without any license.

Is a federally-supervised or VEC-supervised or COLEM-supervised morse code test "necessary" to "round out my experience." No. I do not consider morse code telegraphy to be useful for anything but hobby radio. I do not have the fantasies of greatness in radio through morsemanship, therefore the morsemanship is of no use to me in any way. Let those who enjoy the mode enjoy it...and NOT force newcomers to ANY radio service to learn it because of federal regulations requiring it.

If YOUR fantasy of greatness is disturbed by the thoughts expressed above, that is YOUR problem to deal with, not mine. If you need your TS card punched, go to your minister, rabbi, chaplain, or witch doctor and have THEM punch it.

Fork yourself, Dudly. You're done.

You don't live there. You live here.

There are things which, in our own culture, might be legal but could be considered by society as immoral or unethical. I think grown men watching cartoon child sex or cartoon bestiality crosses that line.

Why not ask Mom and Dad if they think you've crossed the line?

BTW, Todd, how does tolerance become relaxed?

That seems to sum up your attitude, poor baby.

I think so and I'm in amateur radio.

Roughly half? It looks like under half of the sampling.

Are you an organization, Len? I was paid for my job. I've been paid as a musician. I'm not paid as a radio amateur. I'm not paid as an amateur astronomer.

No, I don't think you need anything additional to brag about, Len. You seem to do just fine the way things are. You might want to brush up on spelling if you want to include that in your "braq quotionent".

Looks like your "braq quotionent" is doing fine.

There's a nip in the air and the winter winds are gusting, Len. Stand here by the lodge hall window. Use your tattered jacket sleeve to wipe away some of the condensation.

Some of the fellows are standing by the fireplace. The flames dance and the pleasant scent of burning oak lingers in the room. A couple of fellows are discussing their DXCC totals on Top Band. Look--four of the members are sipping their hot buttered rum and laughing. By golly, I think one of them mentioned "Anderson". I think they mean you, Len.

You poor, ignored blighter. You're still standing out in the cold and looking in. I guess you showed us.

I guess phrases like "shut the hell up, you little USMC feldwebel" are Len's idea of civility.

Awww....

You're missing the bigger problem.

The reason for all the concern with hazardous substances in electronics is because of their effect on the waste stream. "Modern" consumer electronics are usually not designed to be easily or economically repairable, so if something fails it is usually replaced rather than repaired. Worse, the rapid changes in technology have resulted in a large volume of working-but-outdated electronics (mostly computers) being discarded rather than recycling.

Rather than trying to recycle and reuse, the regulators are trying to stop the problem at the source. A bad solution, but you'd think the PROFESSIONALS would have seen that one coming....

<snip>
>Steve "wannabe-Marine" Robeson, K4YZ

Make all the justifications you want, Dud -- the fact is that you unwittingly provided all the proof yourself........:

You didn't know squat about uniform issuance; you don't even remember paying for your first uniform issue in boot camp from your chit book.

You didn't know squat about restriction or liberty, demonstrating that you never served with any OOD which is a regular NCO duty (also done by non-rates when there are no NCO's available -- did it myself a couple times).

You didn't know that the Marine Corps has Shore Patrol, not MP's.

You didn't know that avionics techs (your alleged MOS) are regularly deployed with the FMF.

You didn't know about the VINSON system. To wit: "I know who Col Vinson was and I know where Ft Gordon is. Never served with him/for him/within 100 miles of him." Neither did you know that the VINSON system replaced almost all outdated crypto systems in the late '70's, including the old punch-pin monsters (KY-28/38 of the NESTOR system, which had been almost completely replaced by the VINSON system by the early '80's).

You didn't know the difference between a 'hitch', a 'cruise', and a 'float'.

You mistakenly assumed the origination of the phrase "One Shot One Kill" was from the Army Sniper School; wrongfully presumed that it is a tactic taught to all Marine recruits; then proceeded to demonstrate your ignorance about basic combat tactics, the use of shotguns, and the very common 40mm grenade launchers (M-79 & M-203).

You claimed that "the only targets used to train Marine riflemen (and all recruits) [are] head shots and 'center mast', or chest shots", but didn't know that the standard round marksmanship-type targets are also used, and much more often than "dog" targets. In fact, most of rifle qualification is done with the round targets. But you didn't know that despite your claim to have "[taken] home an 'Rifle Expert' on each and every trip to the range".

You didn't know that only the results of an Article 15 proceeding are recorded, not the entire proceedings; and you don't even know what page in the SRB they are recorded.

You didn't know that Marines are often prohibited from taking any off-duty employment, nor did you know that such a decision is usually made by the CO, not HQMC.

You didn't know that outside communications can be prohibited during a base lock-down or unit activation.

You defined a 'chit' as "A Naval term for a 'permission slip'", when in fact it means -any- piece of paper with something written on it.

You didn't know that a dishonorable discharge can only be given as a result of a conviction in a General court-martial, and is usually given after a few years at Leavenworth and a reduction to Private.

You didn't know that the Corps doesn't use cutting scores for promotions.

You misquoted your SIX alleged promotion certificates (a misquote that I later found on google verbatim).

You didn't understand that "years and months in specialty" (box 11 on the DD-214) is not the same as time in service, yet claimed that you have -several- DD-214's.

You claimed that time on the delayed entry program was considered to be time in reserve status but never was.

You stated that "My DD-214 says 'Honorable'...", yet after 1979 there is no box on the form to designate character of service. The DD-214 is only a "release or discharge from active duty", not a final discharge certificate. Only that latter will denote the character of service.

You claimed to have served from 03 September, 1974 to 29 May, 1992. That's only 17 years and 9 months. Yet you also claim to be retired, which can only happen if you served 20 years. You also claimed to have been discharged for medical reasons, having your discharge later upgraded (a claim which you have both denied and acknowledged). You didn't know that medical discharges cannot be upgraded, nor that time not served cannot be arbitrarily added to the end of an enlistment in order to obtain retirement benefits.

BTW, my MOS was 2841 which is "ground radio repair", not "ground radar repair".

And you still haven't answered one really basic question: With all your careers, activities and obligations, where do you find the time to post as much as you do on Usenet?

Len was right -- you were never in the Marine Corps. You are indeed an imposter.

Jimmie not like that one bit. If'n he see what he think is a

Jimmie ought to go out to Misery and kick Val's butt for not

So if it wasn't against the law to rape 12 year old girls, then you would rape 12 year old girls I suppose. The reason we have to have certain laws is because of people like you who would do horrendous things if there were no laws against such things. Moral people we don't have to worry much about, it people like you who don't seem to know the difference between what is morally right and what isn't.

"Fetish?" :-) All for wanting to toss out an old, out-dated code test that isn't useful to anyone but some old farts like yourself?

Oh, yes, I remember your EXCUSES for using "CW" on a TTY
circuit in Africa someplace...you had to "synchronize" your TTY machines.

Tsk, I didn't bother to keep mine, went in recycling years ago. FCC 90-53 made it just the same. "One small step for code test elimination, one giant leap for Technicians."

Did you know that both Tech classes together constitute almost HALF of all U.S. amateur radio license grants? True!

Of course he was. You've met everyone of note. They visit you at one of your embassies? :-)

Vic Clark expired years ago, Davie.

You say nice-nice about the long-ago dead? That's nice.

Ohm my, aren't you the nasty fella? :-)

"Newington" isn't the center of the universe. It isn't even the center of the hamiverse. What comes out of there is poesy of the good old days in hamme radddio...following in the nightly yellow footsteps of the Great One, "T.O.M."

Sorry, lil Davie, but there was a "comment march" on Washington.
3,786 filings worth on WT Docket 05-235.

The anti-code-test movement is gaining momentum. The year 2005 isn't 1935 anymore and fewer and fewer people are agreeing with the code-aholics.

Try to learn to live with it. It's for your own good.

>You poor, ignored blighter. You're still standing out in the cold and Sorry, you're thinking of Val Germann. He's been an unmodified Tech for over three years. [my micro-fiber jacket isn't tattered, you've got the wrong guy...]

I was hangin' with some NBC West Coast Hq types at lunch. We weren't talking about hamme raddddio. HDTV and remote pickup trucks and some new graphics imaging came up like the Oscars show and other events to be done in wide-screen. Lookin' good in the neighborhood.

You got any DTV-compatible TVs, lil Davie? Nice stuff there on cable TV service. Comcast has two cable channels for nothing but wide-screen TV, lovely imagery, looks wonderful on the 27" LCD flat-panel we just got. Saw "Alias" and "CSI" in wide-screen last night (Thursday). Great stuff. Action and drama. Recreation! Enjoyment!

Nah...you don't want that "crap," do you? You and your rum-sipping buddies gotta grin about "pioneering the airwaves" with "CW" and making all those point scores. Keep up the wunnaful, wunnaful vurk on DX...I hope your Orion can reach the Dakotas to pay amateur tribute to Law-rence the box-squeezer. "Ay vun an a too..." :-)

Watch out on too much rum-sipping, old-timer. Follow the mathematician's warning: "Don't drink and derive!"

Fork yourself, Dave. You're done.

I'm not going to try and jam you either...

Just record your "show" as evidence that it violates the one-way transmission regulation.

Your above statement that you intend to "...give my views..."
removes your intended broadcast from the realm of "information bulletin" and makes it an editorial.

Just one more step closer to getting yet another junior broadcaster off the air.

Your comments look childish, Len. Over the top, flamboyant, trying to get attention by style rather than substance.

Did you ever build a working receiver, Len?

Actually, I wasn't a teenager when I built the receiver I used to learn Morse Code - I was 12 years old. I built my first receiver, a simple AM BC set, when I was 10.

No. The receivers were their own reward.

That's fine, Len. Then you don't get the license and you're not a radio amateur. Works for me.

And you've just verified what I said - you think you are too good to have to learn Morse Code. Not worth your time and effort.

> Tsk, tsk...you forget (conveniently and whenver possible)

No, you didn't operate them. You were a technician, following the direction and supervision of others. Somebody told you to put transmitter A on frequency B using antenna C and connect it to incoming line D, and you (actually about three technicians) did that according to a prearranged procedure.

That's certainly experience but it's not amateur radio experience. And the FCC does not consider it as qualification to operate an amateur radio station.

> Want to see them?

Already did.

"my 3 years" - as if the place was all about you.

No demand, Len. You're very mistaken about that.

Medical waivers.

Back in 1990, it became possible to obtain any class of FCC-issued amateur license with just a 5 wpm code test. All it took was 5 wpm for Novice and Technician, and 5 wpm plus a medical waiver for General, Advanced and Extra. A medical waiver simply required a letter signed by a doctor (M.D. or D.O.) stating that the person found it difficult to learn Morse Code well enough to pass the test. No specific ailment or disability need be named, and the problem didn't have to be permanent.

Your irrational reactions here prove that Morse Code testing - and the Morse
Code itself - have an intense psychological effect on you. That irrationality

could have gotten you a medical waiver easily.

Steve would rather have a tantrum that dig out his own 1974 copy of the regulation.

Yet Hans, long retired, has a >current< copy of the uniform reg???

Sumptin wrong there.

Does it matter?

None of them include you...Or Lennie...Or Markie...Or Toiddie...Or Frankie...

Of course youse guys always have the RRAP Back Channel...Which is about the ONLY "channel" the five of you can mutually enjoy.

Just amazing!!!

I forget you on a list of A-1 Ops, and you play 18 rounds of guessing games with declarations that I'm wrong. Jim leaves you off of his list and you pop right up and provide the information.

Who says the PCTA double-standard isn't alive and well?

I guess the only other thing this shows is that Dave is a pretty forgettable guy.

Not necessarilly. One can be "moral" without having to have a law

You're obviously not one of them.

I am suuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuure he had it "right there",

Why?

The purpose of the whole drill was to get you to find out from uncontestable sources that my information was accurate. Hans' presenting of the order, howevr well intentioned, harpooned that.

None-the-less, Frankie's rant was shot all to be-jeebers.

Reality? How am I supposed to do that. I'm not a medical professional. ;^)

Perhaps the most effective course of action would be for Steve to get off Mark's ass and quit calling around Mark's county.

Sure you are.

You manufactured a tale about operating HF legally from Somalia.

You manufactured a tale about "...unlicensed devices play a major role in emcomm". So far, I've not seen anything except some occassional references to CB's being used for "intercom" like functions in the present post-hurricaine disaster.

You manufactured a tale about ARES not being able to respond due to all the over-committed members. However last I heard, there were over 47 stories in MAJOR media sources that can't do anything except applaud Amateur Radio disaster releif workers.

Jim Miccolis has NEVER called the putz anything BUT "Len" or "Leonard" or any other abbreviation of his name that Lennie didn't himself use, yet Lennie's pelted him for YEARS with NUMEROUS diminutives. You have too, yet I have NEVER seen Jim refer to YOU as anything except "Brian", "Burke", or by your callsign.

No...Your duty as a "good citizen" will be done when you publically state, and then STICK TO IT, your intent to not initiate or perpetuate the use of diminutives towards people who don't use them on you.

And Yes, Brian, I will do the same for you, effective with THIS post...assuming you do and continue the same. Otherwise, it's right on back to the mudslinging.

Actually, that's our resident Rec.Radio.CB troll, all the fine writings on record for him. Better yet, go and google "keyclown" or "keyclownz" in either web

Interesting too that the petition and rules changes recommended make no subdivision of HF band segment usage/permissions as a function of being Novice/Tech+, General, Advanced or Extra.

If that is so, then what becomes the "incentive" for upgrading?

Just my observation...or did I miss something..

While the principle of division by bandwidth instead of mode is basically sound, it does look like they are trying to "sneak through" a change in the phone bands. They need to be upfront and honest that their intent is to widen the phone bands. My director will hear my opinion on this and I'll probably file a comment ont the petition and if the FCC puts out an NPRM. I'm not necessarily against some widening of the phone bands (afterall the "Novice" segments are lightly used) but I am against the idea that they are not bothering to state that it is part of the purpose of this petition. And I believe that 30m is way too narrow to add a SSB segment.

1908. Galaxy Electronics Founder Leo Meyerson Asks FCC To Deny K1MAN Renewal

This is a post to QRZ.COM by K3VR and reads as follows:

Leo Meyerson, W0GFQ, is the latest high profile ham to come out publicly about Glenn Baxter's license. You probably remember Leo as the founder of WRL and Galaxy Electronics. Walter Cronkite also came out publicly against Baxter's (ex-k1man) renewal.

In fact, Leo just sent a letter to the FCC about Baxter. You can find the letter and a discussion of Baxter's renewal here:

"Leo Meyerson is an acknowledged pioneer in the field of radio. Leo is the founder of World Radio Laboratories and Galaxy Electronics. Throughout the years Leo has been very active in public service. A life member of the Quarter Century Wireless Association, Leo served as a National Director from 1977 to 1987. In 1991 he was named the QCWA Amateur Member of the year and in 1994 he was inducted into the QCWA Hall of Fame. Leo is also a life member of the American Radio Relay League, Society of Wireless Pioneers, and International Mission Radio Association among other associations. In 1980 Leo was elected a fellow of the Radio Club of America, one of the most prestigious radio clubs in America.

Leo Meyerson is the second radio icon to denounce Glenn Baxter, ex-K1MAN. The other, famous broadcaster Walter Cronkite, has publicly stated that he has experience with Baxter's lack of ethics. Cronkite also called on the FCC to deny renewal of Baxter's amateur radio licenses."

Third option:

In 'phone operation, some hams and others refer to themselves as "we" on the air. As in "We were listening on 3885 last night and heard the Timtron trying out a new PW rig" or "Yes, Claude, we saw the new Annihilator 2000 at Dayton but frankly it's really just a repackaged Pulverizer 1000 costing 50% more" and such.

Morse Code operators never use the plural to refer to themselves alone.

When pressed for a reason to use the plural, some respond that "we" refers to 'the station and the operator', thereby anthropomorphizing the rig to degree that is rather extreme.

So perhaps Len is referring to himself and his radio when he uses the term 'we'. IOW, when Len wrote:

"We have NOT seen"

he was referring to himself and his classic, compact Johnson.

DOH! Sorry, Dave! There's probably a couple more I've worked, too, such as AT4ST (Arnie) and K3LT.

Say, your imagery of the lodge hall reminded me of these classic lines of prose:

"The fire in the shack of the .....radio station burned low and conversation lagged. .....Lazy, feathery flakes, beginning at midnight, had changed to a fine, peppery mist swirling in from the north, and the wind moaned down the chimney in icy cadences."

"...was the chief operator and and wore sterling crossed bars of chain lightning on the shoulder of his navy blue jersey. There was no greater this side of Heaven..."

"Five minutes passed with only the wind, the old clock, and the keying relay breaking the silence."

"....and touched the knob timidly. The shadow scale above it moved slightly. How easily it turned! Encouraged, he moved it a little more. A faint hiss which had begun to evidence itself in the dynamic speaker was at that instant ripped asunder by a kaleidescope of crisp, bell-like signals..."

"Thousands of miles of black, tumbling ocean intervened. Outside, the two great towers, outlined irregularly in white, rose up and up into the swirling snow; downstairs the input reactors sang monotonously in the ghastly glow of the rectifiers......imparted a dull radiance to the the polished edges of the neutralizing condenser discs. All were waiting, ready to hurl the dynamite."

If Bill Cross really meant it when he said ''Detailed regulation of the nitty gritty of communication services, including the Amateur Service, is not in the picture, rather the FCC is shifting to strong and effective enforcement of truly necessary regulations.'', then this petition should receive favorable consideration by the Commission.

Personally, I think ARRL's petition is waaaaaaaaaaay too conservative. Let's all propose the following re-write of Part 97.

97.1 You are required to pass a technical test to show that you understand how to build simple equipment which meets spectral purity specifications of .....blah, blah, blah. You will be issued a callsign when you pass the test. Transmit your call sign once every 10 minutes when on the air.

97.2 Your power limit is 1.5KW to the antenna.

97.3 Here are your bands. Stay inside of them.

97.4 Your are encouraged to tinker and experiment and communicate and do public service and talk to strangers in far away lands and launch communications satelites into space and other technical radio stuff you may think up. The government doesn't care what mode you use for any of this.

97.5 Play nice. We'll try to keep the CBers out of your hair. Any deliberate interference or other assinine behaviour on your part will cause Riley to come and kick your ass off the playground.
97.6 Have fun.

Love always,
/signed/ FCC

You need to get K1MAN and Walter Cronkite on your show to debate each other with Geraldo Reveria as moderator. Every ham in the world would tune in to listen. And you might even get CBS to send a reporter since it has an interest in Cronkite.

etc. etc. etc.

Most (not just CB and M3) amateurs, sadly, use off the shelf cheque book purchased rigs and accessories. Amateur radio has changed. I think it was better BTW, but that has been changed by technology. The number of intolerant people blaming the wrong things has not changed - just become more readily readable by eg newsgroups. Again, simply the march of technology. A good hobby would move with technology. Adapt where it has to, and always be positive. Most of you regulars to this NG do not adapt. You are negative and destructive (eg towards the RSGB and M3s). Your continual sniping about both is a bore. References to eg Potty Bar were once mildly amusing but now tedious. Specifically, someone on here recently reported that he had been wrongly castigated by an M3 for transmitting off channel. A clear case of where technical experience was lacking. An amateur with the true spirit would have tactfullly explained the facts. And that was one of the better comments! Most are non-specific and generalised sniping. Yes, there are poor M3s, and there are also poor full calls, and poor but fast CW senders and so on. Any non-amateur who lurks across this group will quickly form an opinion that radio amateurs are a bunch of negative misfits and the sooner that BPL for the masses reduces their facility the better. BTW, for reasons beyond my control I'm not a member of the RSGB. I'm not an M3 either. Just an amateur. And why do I bother, I sense some ask. I suppose I'm still an incurable optimist who thinks some conscience may be pricked and this behaviour improved.. Why be here at all (Jock - one of the better ones - asked) See my earlier reply. Come on chaps and chapesses. Lift your game. Time is running out. Do not be like the famous Australian amateur (a UNIX expert) who responded to accidental OT posts to their newsgroup (I think it was then called just "radio") in the early days of the Net by flaming. His "cleverest" flame was metres long printouts which informed people they were on the wrong group. By giving such a negative image to amateur radio to so many technically curious people (surely exactly those we want) he did a great deal of lasting damage to the amateur cause - perhaps aided in its disappearance. He is actually a public-spirited amateur, but what an error! Some of you are public spirited too. So for those, a plea for more tolerance. More thinking before putting keyboard, mouth, key into gear... Or will the replies show the absolute opposite? We shall see.. Time gets short. BPL for HF and other pressures for VHF/UHF/SHF could arguably squeeze us all out. The efforts of this group do not help in resisting this. They vastly aid it. Any lurkers are going to have a most negative impression of what probably are a bunch of fine people doing their best to hide it! "Amateur radio - so that's what it's like - best legislate against it without delay!" Anyone got anything new to add? Usenet is meant to aid debate, so have a go. But please not the usual, broing, repetive stuff; we've read it all before... Thanks for reading this; I now feel slightly better...

I noticed the same thing and didn't know what to make of it. Perhaps they mean to keep the same segments as now for the different licenses? I suppose that would work as you can always use a mode that is narrower than the max.

they are probably trying to keep the technical 'what mode where' discussion separate from the licensing 'who goes where' discussion. they probably think they can win each one separately, but argue them together and there may be too many people who won't buy one or the other and come out against both. right now they happen to line up on the same dividing line, but there is no practical reason that they must.

Good grief...a closet ham-Amish! Or is it a ham-Shaker?

My apologies are tendered to those in the religious orders of the Church of St. Hiram. It's difficult for normal people to keep track of all those cult names and be non-sectarian.

Ohm my, SOLDIERS on duty are now expected to BUILD, PAY FOR, and DO OWN INSTALLATION of all military equipment?!?

Well, I could have sewn together the cloth of my uniforms but don't have the experience or machinery to weave the cloth.

I could have made a wooden stock for my issue sidearm, an M-2 Carbine, perhaps taking a couple years to do it with just a sharp-edged rock after felling a tree (with bare hands). Just didn't have the experience or machinery to build all the metal parts of it or make the ammunition.

That particular BC-339 transmitter was built some time just prior to WW2 (I still remember where it was located then in relation to the central command console). That would have made me of mid-grade school age and I had not yet acquired the knowledge or skills to BUILD it. Certainly did not have the physical strength to "install" a seven-foot-high box of iron, copper, steel, and ceramic parts weighing a ton.
There was NO ONE at that station or in the entire battalion that could have "installed" it with their bare hands. :-)

But...that vacuum tube based transmitter OPERATED by the same rules and principles of any vacuum tube based transmitter of today. Laws of physics haven't changed in a half century.
One "dips the plate and peaks the grid" in tuning the final,
same now as it has been since the beginning of radio time.

Tsk, then why are you so militant, antagonistic against all those who want to remove the code test for a license?

>And you've just verified what I said - you think you are too good to >have to learn Morse Code. Not worth your time and effort.

Sigh...you still don't understand other people's motivations, Jimmie. You want all others to follow YOUR standards and ideals. You confuse your own emotions and the LAW.

Some of us (thousands) against the code test for a license just DON'T SEE ANY POINT OF ANY KIND in keeping that mandated test for an old, outdated requirement. We (again the same thousands) simply want to change the federal regulation requiring it to eliminate that test. Seeking that change is within our rights as citizens.

Now WHY do you insist on keeping that old, outdated requirement? You know very well that knowledge of morse code is NOT a physical requirement to make any RF emitter work below 30 MHz. The requirement of demonstrated morse code skill is required ONLY in amateur radio and some classes of maritime radio licenses for operation below 30 MHz...by a MAN-MADE regulation. What "man" has made can be undone legally by other "men." All have that right in the United States.

A question for you, Jimmie: What makes you so arrogant and superior, to think that you are so damn good that everyone has to do what you say and think like you do and believe in the standards that you do?

>> Tsk, tsk...you forget (conveniently and whenver possible)

Hello Steve? Are we having personality tranferences going on in this newsgroup?

OPERATION of any radio-electronic equipment refers to powering it on (or off as required), adjusting the controls, making it do what it was designed to do.

Since when is "operation" defined as solely using radio-telegraphy?

Perhaps you think that "operation" refers to some "careful tuning across the band," listening for a signal? [that's receiving operation and not for single-frequency operation]

>You were a technician, following the direction and >supervision of others.

Tsk, tsk, that's a variation of what goes on in the military, Jimmie. :-)

It can be summed up in two words: "Follow orders."

>Somebody told you to >put transmitter A on frequency B using antenna C and connect it >to incoming line D, and you (actually about three technicians) did that >according to a prearranged procedure.

Teamwork is a necessity to reduce TIME, Jimmie. In any transmitter site operating 24/7 and carrying a heavy load of "traffic," it is an absolute requirement to keep operating as long as possible. Broadcasters know that well, and "dead air" is a no-no to any station.

Every operating team (there were four) at ADA could do any of the QSY tasks required among the 36 transmitters (count in early 1953) and set up any of the two dozen (approximate) FSK exciters on the correct carrier and "spread" (frequency shift from Mark to Space), and being able to read and understand the teletypewriter commands from control. Any team could do the required operations singly, in pairs, or in threes. Doing it by threes reduced the down-time of any circuit since essentially overlapping operations at three different places could be done at the same time. We "hustled" on every QSY order that came down...a mark of professional style in operating...maximization of up-time during 24/7 ops.

"Prearranged Procedures": Frequencies were fixed by order. Control setting charts were there to minimize "hunting" for the right setting and minimize time in setting during a QSY. Four, and later, eight trans-mitters were gang-set by internal servo motors preset for the proper frequency...all to minimize down-time during a QSY. Once reset to a new frequency, each team kept watch to see that it operated properly. There were approximately eight different transmitter types, all with varying controls and arrangements and each team was trained and experienced to operate all of them. When the ORDER is to come up and stay on a fixed frequency, one MUST obey that order.

>That's certainly experience but it's not amateur radio >experience.

It is RADIO experience, Jimmie. Radios that operate by the SAME laws of physics as in amateur radio. Really.

ADA, like all other RADIO stations (and torn-tape TTY relay centers) in ACAN-STARCOM-DCS did NOT have any MOS positions for radiotelegraphers. No morse code radiotelegraphy modes were used or required to relay over a million messages a month in the Pacific third of worldwide communications.

Yes, U.S. amateur radio regulations allow morse code mode radiotelegraphy as an OPTION for licensees. Now.
That makes it "different" than all other U.S. radio services except maritime radio service. But that is SOLELY by man-made regulations. None of that is any absolute requirement for physical operation below 30 MHz.

>And
>the FCC does not consider it as qualification to operate an amateur >radio station.

I've never argued that it did, Jimmie.

Just the same, all those hundreds of radios and thousands of military personnel were still operating radios which operated according to the SAME laws of physics as ham radio.

>> Here's a link:

You have the wrong impression. MY EXPERIENCE directly involves
ME. [that's why possessives are used]

I do not praise myself in that 20-page article. It describes where I was and what I did during three years of my voluntary military service...and it ALSO describes what a lot of others did, using as many pictures of them as survived a long time in storage. It was all teamwork, Jimmie. It wasn't one man - one radio - one station kind of thing common in amateur radio.

If you don't like my little paper, then download (in the same web page) "AlphabetSoup.pdf." That is a brochure prepared by the same Signal Battalion in 1962 and published by them. The equipment shown is more modern than it was in 1955, reflecting the improvement and modernization of the Army network.

Ohm my, yes. My terrible badness in accusing you of a "mistake!"

>Back in 1990, it became possible to obtain any class of FCC-issued

Was there a lot of that going around?

I didn't keep any eagle eye on the medical community then nor did I ask for any "waiver." The only thing I wanted was for my doctor to give me a cheery wave bye-bye and "see you next year" after my annual physical.

>Your irrational reactions here prove that Morse Code testing - and the >Morse Code itself - have an intense psychological effect on you.

Wow! Danke, Herr Doktor A. Freud.

[your analysis couch is very lumpy, Doktor, have it fixed]

I'm just an "intense" guy, Jimmie, terribly persistent. :-)

>That irrationality could have gotten you a medical waiver easily

"Easily?" :-) What makes you think I "wanted" one at any time? Had I wanted to be a beeper and self-professed, self-defined morseman-guru-radio-champion, I would have done so without any "waiver." But I didn't. I've never had to use morse code for ANY purpose and certainly not in any radio service (I've operated in more of them than you have).

Vell now, Herr Doktor, how do you explain YOUR irrational, preserve-the-status-quo-at-all-costs attitude FOR morse code testing? An ultraconservative traditionalist who demands everything to be in-place as it was when you were born?
One who won't reveal is place of "professional electronics employment" or even anything specific on the KIND of "professional electronics work" he does...one who keeps on going back to his pre-adult activities and stressing that of youngsters...and has a fascination for amateur radio history that happened well before he was born?

Tsk, tsk, you ALMOST sound qualified as a psychologist
but your shrink-wrap is torn.

OK, Jimmie, time for you to WRITE the RONGS. "Waive" bye-bye and go back to your beeping. Buy-buy.

Imposters rarely have "evidence" at hand to "support" them. They love to snow-job others into thinking they were actaully there.
Standard practice of con artists and used car salesmen.

When unable to verify his supposed existance, he tries the

1. It demonstrates his "toughness", as if he really was what

Davie took and passed the 20 WPM code test, therefore all others have to do the same thing in order to be his "equal." He condescends to allow "lesser" beings (who passed 5 or 13 WPM tests) to coexist in his universe but has utter contempt for any who have not.

Davie likes his exclusivity of status-rank-title since it makes him "superior" to others. Therefore he demands that code testing MUST be retained in federal regulations for the licensing of amateur radio hobbyists. That is very important to his IMAGE.

DIFFERENT ORDER AND DIFFERENT RESULTS

Why do we send a kid to college and spend $30,000 (plus or minus) per year for four (plus or minus) years? Is there a difference whether we do it right after high school or after a stint in the "real world" such as the military, etc? Lots of kids come out of college (attended directly following high school) and cannot find a "good" job because they have no real and immediately marketable skills. Another kid, who learns a trade such as carpentry, on the other hand, can always find a "good" job which cannot be done "over the phone" by a competitor in India. These are tough choices and expensive ones at that.

Kids learn moral habits in their childhood, personal habits during their teens, and professional habits in their early 20s. Because of this, there will be big differences among kids who do college right after high school and those, for example, who do college after an enlisted stint in the military. You can combine both effects by doing much the same together, such as at West Point or Annapolis. Our magnificent U.S. World War II effort was run by Franklin Roosevelt (high school directly followed by college) and Dwight Eisenhower (a West Point graduate), and not by skilled carpenters or enlisted men who later went to college. It does make a big difference on how you organize and the order of someone's education.

Another issue is grades. Many kids focus on grades at the expense of education, and others focus on education at the expense of grades. I once interviewed a kid at a top mid west university and asked him, as I the did all the other kids, what was his (or her) greatest defeat in life? He said "Well I got a B on a paper rather than an A; I thought I knew what the professor wanted, but I guess I didn't." Compare that with me. I would have said "Look at this, I got a B instead of an A; the professor is a 'moron'!"

The kids always argue that they need grades to get into professional school (they do), and I argue that you need a good education to get through a professional life. They counter with "Well if you don't get into medical school or law school or engineering school, you will never get to be that type of professional, for example, at all. Yes, this is obviously true. And the debate goes around and around.

One thing I have found about the engineering profession in particular and all professions in general: You are either an engineer or you are not. We rarely, no never, look at where that professional trait was acquired or what his or her grades were. Then, you are either a good engineer or not. You are either a good doctor or not. You are either a good dentist or not. You are either a good lawyer or not. You are either a good officer or not. You are either a good teacher or not. Etc. I guess we do distinguish whether professionals can pass the state exams, etc. to be licensed to practice. This is always a matter of getting the license or not. You already have the tools to get licensed; you simply have to use those tools and study hard enough to pass the comprehensive professional exams. For some it comes easier than for others. John Kennedy, Jr. had to take his bar exams many times before he passed.

BRIAN CROW, K3VR

One thing about college right after high school is the acquisition of disciplined professional thinking such as Franklin Roosevelt or Dwight Eisenhower had. Anything else is so easy to spot such as with (Brian Crow, K3VR*, and) so many people I have encountered throughout life. Adolf Hitler was politically brilliant because his thinking was not professionally disciplined and thus "hindered." Look what happened to him! By the way, Alexander the Great was pretty ruthless also and killed quite a few people in his conquering escapades as well, and I do not approve of either military leader, despite the positive effects of spreading civilization and commerce as was true with Alexander or advancements in science as was motivated by Hitler. World War II had many positive effects on our world, but millions of lives, including those of our precious animals, is far too steep a price to pay for progress. Humans seem to make war and will continue to do so whether or not I approve, however!

Brian "fakes it" and fools many (fools), I imagine. He may be good at taking information in at a school like U. Mass and regurgitating it back to indifferent teachers for a grade of A. It is the lack of professional habits that kills Brian. His indifferent teachers (if his diploma is not a fake) did him a disservice. But, like the guy in the movie "Catch Me If You Can," diplomas and much else can be faked. Brian claims to have worked for NSA, and they create phony people all the time. Getting a ham license by fraud would be quite easy for an NSA type. I heard Brian calling CQ on 14.275 the other day, and he did not come back to a strong CW response. I question whether he can copy CW at all?!!! K3VR is listed an Extra class.

Let's look at Brian Crow specifically. He publishes all his stuff anonymously. He creates a "political cartoon" about K1MAN on a free anonymous web site and then says "Hey, I just 'saw' this, take a look at it yourself." He makes up phony experts like "Dr. Hasenfus" (an alleged attorney) who then states a legal "opinion" obviously not the work of a real attorney. Brian could easily find a real attorney; he does not need a phony one UNLESS he is trying to fool a few fools.

If Brian was not required to write a thesis at his alleged university for his Master's, just say so. His third grade grammar would never have gotten him a Master's if a thesis had been required. I believe the University of Maine will also confer a Master's in Education without a thesis. It is embarrassing for a "Master of Education" in this country, with the sorry state of education here, to write and publish on the internet (no proof readers) with very poor grammar. I say "embarrassing." If Brian has something to say that is important, then to heck with the grammar.

Brian is probably smart, but his undisciplined thinking prevents him from making it when up against professionals. I wonder what Riley Hollingsworth REALLY thinks about Brian Crow? Yuk, yuk yuk! I wonder what Riley Hollingsworth REALLY thinks about Glenn Baxter? Chuck O'Neal, K1KW, an engineer, can't think clearly at all about Glenn Baxter because of "Radio Rage" akin to "Road Rage." In this case, all bets (and the gloves) are off.

Brian is obviously obsessed with Glenn Baxter, and this clinically abnormal behavior (in my engineering opinion) is most likely a very severe case of "Wannabe." If Brian is happy with his pursuits, then I guess it is OK. I believe the most important thing is to be happy.

GLENN BAXTER'S EDUCATION

Now let's get to Glenn Baxter. Not a traditional education, really. In college I spent all my time studying the book and did problems for the first time during the exams. The other kids studied the theory little and worked on problems with other kids in groups. At Northwestern, my fraternity brothers (Lamda Chi Alpha) were always talking about old exams that were in the house files. I never bothered with them. Dwight Eisenhower forced the Army Department to release old West Point entrance exams, and he and another kid worked all summer studying them. Now that IS very smart indeed! I would do that if I thought of it. No wonder General Eisenhower ended up with five stars! He was smart, and I don't mean IQ. Different kids learn different ways. I would study the book and then look at other books and "make connections" among them. This is how I preferred to learn. I would flunk all the exams and then get an A or B on the final and end up with a C in the course. I ended up with an engineering school 2.35 GPA (pre Viet Nam "grade inflation"), but I was honored upon graduation because of my First Place (Second Place nationally) and Third Place Awards for written and oral presentations of technical papers in Boston and Syracuse, and my 4th place Award at the Annual Boston University Debating Contest.

PROFESSIONAL ENGINEERING EXAMINATIONS

Six years after graduation, I studied for six solid months for my professional engineering exams and pulled all of those "connections" together. It was great fun and the best investment of six months that I have ever made. I put numbers on pieces of paper in an oatmeal box. I shook the box, picked out numbers, and that is how I selected the next problem to work on out of my book of sample professional engineering exam questions. Each morning I would say to myself "It's time to go out to the 'snake pit'!" I loved it, really! The very first problem I worked on took me two weeks to solve. At the exam, you had only 45 minutes, on average, to solve a similar problem! I got through engineering school with a six inch K. & E. slide rule and then literally breezed through the P.E. exams with a fairly new HP 35 scientific calculator and HP 80 financial calculator, each costing $400, like $4,000 each today! Now you can get the same calculating power for less than $10 each! God, what a huge difference!

I had those little red HP 35 numbers dancing around on those ten digit displays, and this was like cruising down a super highway in a brand new Rolls Royce with the radio on a classical music station.

I took the P.E. exams in Illinois, at that time the most difficult state, and passed the first time with honor grades. Many, if not most, PhDs are somehow unable (or too specialized and/or too arrogant and unwilling to do the tedious review work) to pass the state Professional Engineering Exams. PhD engineers at more research scientist and university teaching orriented while BS engineers are more applied scientists or else go into management, etc. The P.E. Exams are two full grueling days and are like taking final exams (7 years after graduation) in the 10 most difficult engineering subjects; Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Statics, Dynamics, Strength of Materials, Fluid Mechanics, Thermodynamics, Electricity, and Engineering Economy. This, a kid, me, who had flunked his first Novice, Technician, General (code), Extra, and First Class Commercial FCC tests.

NON TRADITIONAL EDUCATION

As I said, not a "traditional" education. I "screwed around" through my first 8 grades of school (I had a chemistry lab, photography dark room, and amateur radio station) and then needed 11 1/2 years to finish 8 years of high school and college. At today's prices of $30,000 per year, that's a difference of $105,000 in costs and (at $100,000 per year for today's typical engineering graduate) $350,000 in lost income for a total of $500,000 in today's money.

I could afford it; most kids can't. I feel that my abilities are well worth the extra $500,000, but I don't recommend this approach to kids today. I tell them to do their homework, and if you get to 8th grade without doing this you will be "screwed" as 99.999999% of them would be for sure.

HIGH SCHOOL TEACHER

I have taught high school physics, chemistry, algebra, trig, advanced math, and general science. As a substitute teacher, I have taught kindergarten through 12th grade advanced placement physics and also AP statistics. As a sub I have tagged with kids through all those grade levels and have never been in a classroom in any capacity where I didn't also learn something new and significant. Whenever I visit Vermont Academy, I always attend a few classes. I was even a chemistry lab partner on one bright Saturday mourning at V.A.. I could gleefully repeat 6th through 12th grades all over again and learn a great deal. I would not care to repeat college, however! Too much work for the gain that I would reap. Actually, I find graduate courses to be a huge drag; I prefer self study, reading, and writing now. I have a lot of this latter type of academic and research work that I want to do in life, and I am running out of time.

PRO SE LAWYER

In court, I am also not traditional. Traditional is to get in trouble like O.J., Monica, John Dean, or Martha Stewart and end up with attorney's fees in the millions. I do it all myself for free and get the same results, basically, as a team of expensive attorneys would get for me. You don't have to win each individual case in order to win the war. Some cases are for softening up the opposition so that you CAN win the war. I always win the wars. I have great flexibility in court that counters the prejudice afforded by judges to licensed attorneys. I audited ONE law course in college, and I go up and win big in the important cases against the best attorneys in the country. You have to be right, and you have to understand the United States Constitution. As with debating in college, you also need to go to the library and get good "evidence" as we called it. I was First Negative in college debating and pretty good at it. My debating partner, Second Negative (Sheila O'Malley), would then come in and clean up the mess, so to speak.

I really love "legal" movies such as "A few Good Men," "Rainmaker," the one with Paul Newman, "The Jury," I think it was called, and half a dozen others. The basics are all the same in these films with the same theme of good versus evil. I view Baxter vs. the FCC as good versus evil. Most people view this the same way with the extremely interesting twist of which one is good and which one is evil?

I became a pro se lawyer on the advice of my own attorney and out of necessity. At some early point in the Baxter Electronics litigation I hired an attorney, Clinton Townsend, and paid him a $300 up front retainer. It was my idea, and he was happy to get it. $300 was a good hunk of change back then. He said to me "This is a nice way to start!" When that $300 retainer quickly ran out he taught me how to file my own legal pleadings and briefs. Most importantly, I learned, from a licensed attorney, that I could, indeed, represent myself in all courts, which I have done, myself, ever since, all the way to the United States Supreme Court. I have often wondered what Maine judges would do to poor old Mr. Townsend if they ever found out what a monster he had thus created!

A lot of my court appearances and pleadings were just "warm up" exercises for the present challenges, here in 2005.

It all really started, however, with my cheap skate brother in law George Sternad. I was driving to Maine from Scarsdale, New York the Summer after my Freshman year at Northwestern's Technological Institute. I was in the passing lane on a two lane highway. There was a state truck in the same passing lane spraying crab grass and going 4 miles per hour. The sky was bright ahead of the truck, and I was, perhaps, day dreaming a bit. I realized the truck was almost stopped, and I slammed on the brakes, making 100 feet of skid marks. The brakes in my 1959 American Rambler faded 20 feet before the truck, and I hit it hard. I pushed the steering wheel into the metal dashboard and thus made two dents. My head slammed down on my arm, and I opened a huge gash over my eye. I was not knocked out, just bleeding a lot. I went out to "supervise" the measuring of the skid marks. Look at a current photo of me, and you can see that one eye is a bit screwed up, so to speak. It also loosened a few screws in my head, I gather, as well! I went to the hospital for a day and for observations. Actually the "Candy Stripes" seemed the most interested in observing me, it seemed! I hitched a ride back to Scarsdale. I stood in the middle of an entry ramp and literally stopped a car. The guy said "Are you legitimate?" My messed up eye got me a ride to within a block of my house on 31 Claremont Road.

My mother was putting my sister's kids to bed that evening and said "We are so happy that Uncle Glenny is home safe, aren't we? Pookie then said "Yes, but we are not happy about his eye!" I found another car and headed back to Maine. I was wearing sunglasses to hide my new "shiner." I fired up the big boat (1956 Century) to motor up to see my best friends Nancy and Paul Corman. It was getting dark, and I forgot to take the sunglasses off. I nearly ran over Lee and Marge

Frank, fishing in my travel lane up the lake. Marge let out a blood curdling shriek, and I turned away just in time. Forever after that, the Franks considered me to be totally insane! Many hams would agree!

Back to the car accident:

I was charged by the Connecticut State Police with reckless driving, a serious offence. I wanted to get an attorney, but my cheap brother in law (our estate was still in probate) advised that I didn't need a lawyer. "OK," I thought, "No big deal."

I appeared in court weeks later. The state attorney talked to me and tried to give me a line of crap as I remember it. Then some stooge sitting next to me tried to convince me that I should plead "Nolo Contendere," as he put it, abbreviated "Nolle," as he put it. "Let the court decide," as he put it. "BS," I thought. I guess the hell! I would have pleaded guilty!!

At trial the state attorney put the state truck driver on the stand and asked him the usual BS questions about the last time they checked the lights on the truck, etc. I cross examined the driver. "How fast was your truck moving?" "Four miles per hour," he replied. "What were you doing," I asked? "Spraying crab grass," he replied. "Did you put out any special lights and warning flags behind the truck AFTER the accident," I queried. "Oh yes," he replied, "We put out lights and flags for over 1,000 feet." "Why did you put out those lights and flags," I went on. "Well, to prevent another accident," he replied. I knew that I had him, the lawyer "killer instinct" coming out in me for the first time in a court of law, and I had begun this quite serious trial by "winging it" with no pre plan whatsoever. "Tell me this," I continued, "what is the difference between your four miles per hour and my 60 miles per hour compared with your zero miles per hour and other cars going 60 miles per hour that prompted you to put out all those warning lights and flags?" He sat there in baffled silence. You could hear a pin drop in the court room. I repeated the question again and again. Baffled silence. The judge finally rescued the truck driver and answered "The difference is four miles per hour. My ruling is that Defendant Glenn Baxter is not guilty of the charge of reckless driving." "BAM" went his gavel. I talked with the judge afterwards and asked him that even though I won, would I be better off if I had never been charged in the first place? I had to press him hard for an answer. He finally said "Yes, certainly."

He was right. I later got a letter from the state truck driver's attorney saying that his client was suffering "neck pains." I was now back at Northwestern. I wrote back telling him to "stuff it," since my insurance company and theirs was the same company. I never heard from them again!

BAXTER ELECTRONICS

Then my company, Baxter Electronics (Inc.) went into receivership in 1970. Kenton Quint (owner of the Somerset Telephone Company and Chairman of the Baxter Electronics Board of Directors) had invested $60,000 in BE and, as he put it, didn't want to share a loss with Baxter Electronics. He simply wanted to take 100% control through court "muscle." He and his attorney, Frank Southard, a judge at age 25, had enormous influence. My corporate attorney, Bob Williamson, suddenly developed "laryngitis" and let me hang out to dry. I hired Bob Marden. Marden's dad, a Maine Supreme Court judge, was to be our judge. We got another judge, Judge Reed. I felt Marden was selling me out, so I fired him, post haste. He then sent me a bill for $150. His brother, Don Marden, now a Superior Court judge, sued me, personally, for the $150 dollars, and I argued that they should join the other unsecured Baxter Electronics creditors since they were all so eager to put my company in receivership and discontinue all manufacturing and marketing operations.

To side track a bit:

District Judge Pooler ruled against me in this $150 lawsuit. I appealed to Superior Court. While on appeal, I was dragged back into District Court for an asset disclosure hearing. My car was at VW for servicing, and I had a copy of "War and Peace" with me, just in case, if you get my drift. I get one phone call, right? "Hello VW? I won't be in today to pick up my car!"

I was sworn in, and the opposing attorney, Billy Dubord, (we grew up on the lake together) asked me if I was married. I pulled out a 3 X 5 card and read: "I refuse to testify on the grounds that to do so might deny my rights as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

Judge Pooler came up out of his chair! I will never forget it. "All right Mr. Baxter, do you want to go to jail?" The Sheriff was in the courtroom drooling at me. I read from the card again and again. The judge asked if I understood the consequences of my actions. I said that I did understand the Constitution of the United States. He finally gave up and called a recess. He went to his office to read up on law, I guess.

He came back out in civilian clothing to talk to me. We chatted at length. He finally said "Mr. Baxter, I don't know what you are, but whatever it is, it STINKS. You should have been a lawyer!"

Then Donald Marden (now a Superior Court Judge) wrote the court and tried to get them to issue an execution. I turned him in to the bar association, a joke then as the Board of Overseers of the Bar is now. The case died in appeal, and the $150 was never paid, I gather. Marden then dropped out of his bid for District Attorney, a newly created $25,000 per year paid position, "for personal reasons." Joan Sandy, an old friend of mine from my teens, got that job instead.

Back to the original train of thought:

We had several hearings, and Judge Reed signed a Southard drafted ORDER of receivership. I called the judge, pissed as hell. He said he had signed the order to "pin this thing down," as he put it. The local town drunk (according to my Secretary, Maryse Price) had been appointed as the Receiver. I protested to Judge Reed. He then appointed Maine Supreme Court Chief Justice Williamson as the Receiver. Judge Williamson was the father of my original attorney, Bob Williamson, the one who dropped out because of "laryngitis." Bob really dropped out because this was going to be a "dirty deal," with Frank Southard in the mix. Bob Williamson had dated my oldest sister Betty when he was a counselor at Camp Winona, and she was a counselor at the sister Camp Wyanogonic, both in Denmark, Maine.

Anyway, Chief Justice Williamson came to see me in my radio studio building and sat in my big blue easy chair. What a sight! When he found out that Baxter Electronics had no money, he resigned. He had visions, he said, of writing a Baxter Electronics check, an "adjustment" as he worded it, and getting Kenton Quint off my back. Judge Reed (an icon on the Maine bench) then appointed Bob Viles, who was looking for employment for his son. More hearings, of course.

Let's backtrack to the first court appearance before Judge Reed. There was a trial going on. I walked into the courtroom. Then Quint's Attorney, Frank Southard, walked into the courtroom. Judge Reed spotted Southard and stopped the trial on a dime. He asked Southard if HE wanted to adjourn to chambers. Southard, clearly embarrassed, said "No, I think there will be evidence introduced." How do you spell C L O U T?

I went to SCORE to get a volunteer advisor. He told me a lot. One thing he talked about was criticizing those in authority. He said to do it like this:

"With all due respect to your high rank Admiral, your ass is blowing in the wind."

One time in a hearing in chambers with Judge Reed, the judge said: "Mr. Baxter, now you are criticizing the way I do business, and I don't like that!" I said: "Well, your honor, I certainly don't mean to criticize the way you do business, but....." and then I went up one side of him and down the other, all over again. After the hearing the Bailiff mentioned to me "Jeese, we could you shouting at the judge all the way out in the courtroom!" He was totally mortified.

Another time a court bailiff tried to kick me out of the law library at Kennebec County Courthouse in Augusta, Maine. Excuse me? He had no success.

Finally, we ran through Judge Reed, so to speak, and Supreme Court Judge Webber took over the case. Several more hearings and finally Supreme Court Judge Delahanty took over the case as the last judge in the matter.

I remember a hearing in chambers with Judge Delahanty. At one point I reached to pull out my brand new HP 35 engineering calculator (I would later use it in Chicago to pass my Professional Engineering exams) which was in a leather belt holder kept closed with Velcro. Everybody in the room bolted; they thought it was a tape recorder! I find that all Maine judges are terrified whenever I pull out a tape recorder, which I often do. They always threaten to take it from me, and I always shut it off. In a deposition, however, my trusty tape recorder rolls!

I argued that now court controlled and therefore "shut down" Baxter Electronics had abandoned the "E-DAC" trade mark that and that I could "grab it" if wanted to. The judge asked if I knew how long it took to legally abandon a trade mark. "Yes, I replied, two years."

Remember Ipana tooth paste and Bucky Beaver? "Brusha, brusha, brusha, new Ipana toothpaste, brusha, brusha, brusha, it's better for your teeeeeeeeth?" Their TV and radio ads costs millions, and then they folded. Some outfit then stuffed tubes with generic toothpaste, called it Ipana, and made a bundle.

I took the same position when I grabbed the Collins trade mark. You can actually see in QST where Rockwell airbrushed the Collins "meatball" logo off the front of S-line gear. So, for years, I owned the abandoned Collins trade mark. Rockwell bitterly complained to me long after I was through with it, and I said, "Look, let's just both move on to other things." I never heard from them again after that. They could have bought a lot of influence in court, I suspect. If I had had any further use for the Collins trade mark, I would have duked it out with Rockwell.

Also in that chambers hearing before Delahanty, Judge Reed kept sticking his head in the door and inviting us all to come down to the court house Christmas party. I gathered he was just curious about the Baxter Electronics case, long ago taken away from him. His portrait and (now Judge) Donald Marden's hang in honor in the small courtroom in the Kennebec County courthouse in Augusta, Maine. You spell C L O U T this way: C L O U T!

Anyway, with Baxter Electronics tied up in Receivership and Baxter Associates, Inc. (which owned all the office equipment), now controlled by my Baxter Associates, Inc. stock holdings (I paid myself my salary in Baxter Associates, Inc. stock), I then "fired up" as G.A. Baxter Electronics and continued the E-DAC business for years as usual. There is more than one way to skin a cat! Delahanty finally dissolved the old Baxter Electronics, and Quint bought all BE assets for the tidy sum of $2,000. He later tried to sell me the warehouse full of parts, but, "Sorry, pal, I'm not interested!" Anybody need a few million 1N4002 diodes?

Now I have a major case pending before, guess who?, Supreme Court Judge Delahanty's son, a Superior Court Judge. Judge Donald Marden has recused himself from all my cases because I sued him for altering a sworn deposition, an alleged criminal act of perjury, of course. After considerable litigation and depositions, we both settled out of court. I let the guy off the hook. His attorney, Jerry Fournier, mentioned to me during the settlement discussions that my lawsuit against Don Marden was really draining his firm, Marden, Dubord, and Chandler. It was also wearing me down! Don Marden is now a Superior Court Judge, and a very good one, from what I hear.

At one deposition, Don Marden brought in a cold can of Tab for me, with a plastic cup over the top, during the break. I will never forget that moment. My mortal enemy serving me a soda! I thought to myself, "This is a classy guy!"

One time senior Judge Delahanty wanted to meet me under the steps of the Augusta Civic Center "to talk." I called Supreme Court Judge Webber at home to discuss this. He told me I didn't have to go and that Delananty couldn't hold me in contempt. I didn't go, and guess what? The toll call I made to Judge Webber did not appear on my telephone bill. I can't prove in court that I ever talked to Judge Webber that night, now can I?. I remember the call well. His wife answered the phone, and I asked to speak with "Judge Webber." She seemed tickled at the respectful way I had referred to him, I thought to myself at the time. Wives are funny that way, aren't they?

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

By comparison, dealing with punks like FCC attorney Riley Hollingsworth seems like child's play, doesn't it? Riley writes his silly letters, etc., but there are no court appearances where he could be confronted in public, and there are rules of procedure, rules of evidence, etc. Hollingsworth makes up his own rules and is quite effective with intimidating 99.9999% of the general ham community. This is not my idea of an America where there is liberty and justice for all. What irritates me is that I am paying Hollingsworth's salary! It is, however, the American way, in total, corruption, politics, and all.

Let me end this essay with the wisdom of wood carver David Holmes. He carved the State of Maine logo that graces the Maine legislature Senate chamber. I was complaining to him about the FCC and why can't they make their calls with the same honesty and integrity as an umpire during the World Series? He said "Glenn, that is politics, this is baseball." We were watching the World Series at the time. I repeated my plea, time after time. He repeated his response, time after time, "Glenn, that is politics, this is baseball." "Oh, I get it. The FCC is politics, THIS is baseball." I am pretty darn smart, wouldn't you say?

* We really don't know very much about Brian Crow, K3VR. Drop his name or his alleged company (Stockbridge Consulting - no letterhead) into in a search engine, and nothing comes up. Brian (or who we know as Brian) says he was with NSA, and they create fictitious people all the time. Identity theft is also quite common these days. Perhaps he is in the witness protection program or his name was taken off of a tombstone and he is not Brian Crow at all. Would the REAL Brian Crow, K3VR, please stand up? Has anyone ever seen Brian personally? Has anyone ever snapped a picture of Brian? Has he ever attended a hamfest? Does he have a phone number? K3VR@hotmail.com is not exactly traceable, now is it? Has anybody stopped at his FCC listed address to see what is there? He dropped his own web site years ago (it showed more than a passing interest in little boys), and now he creates many free anonymous pages, all about K1MAN. He seems to create dozens of anonymous E-Mail addresses as well and sends me stuff all the time (I assume it is Brian).

He E-Mails me several times daily from K3VR@hotmail.com and then turns me in as SPAM when I reply! What's with that?

Drop K3VR in a search engine and all that comes up is K1MAN stuff!

On the air, Brian appears to lack the ability to copy CW although listed in the FCC data base as an Extra. NSA types would have no problem getting a ham license by fraud. Brian appears to know little or nothing about electronice or amateur radio theory. On QRZ he has a photo of a big Eimac tube, yet he has bever built an amplifier. What's that all about?

He creates phony "experts" like "Dr. Hasenfus" (an attorney who also does not come up when dropped into a search engine) when a real expert would do just as well, and he even authored a printed nasty letter about K1MAN to the editor in local Maine newspapers by pretending to be from Manchester, Maine. He has filed complaints about K1MAN to the Maine and Illinois professional engineering boards, the Maine Attorney General, Maine State Senators and Representatives, the FCC, Vermont Academy, the SEC, the FTC, etc., etc. ad infinitum. He has a copy of my University of Rhode Island engineering school transcript. How did he come by that?

He sometimes writes with third grade grammar and yet claims to have a Master's in Education from the University of Massachusetts. He is K1MAN's number one detractor, and I am flattered by all the attention. The FBI says that such extensive activity is usually paid for by some organization with lots of money and an axe to grind. Who would pay Brian to stalk K1MAN? ARRL? The FCC? The CIA? NSA? The telecommunications industry wanting to grab amateur radio? Walter Cronkite? Who? Perhaps the FBI is wrong. Perhaps Brian Crow, K3VR, is just a super sick "wannabe" with a legitimate Master's of Education degree from the University of Massachusetts who obtained his ham ticket by fraud (quite easy really). I forgive you Brian. 73 and GL de K1MAN.

Davie took and passed the 20 WPM code test, therefore all others
have to do the same thing in order to be his "equal." He condescends to allow "lesser" beings (who passed 5 or 13 WPM tests) to coexist in his universe but has utter contempt for any
who have not.

Davie likes his exclusivity of status-rank-title since it makes him "superior" to others. Therefore he demands that code testing MUST be retained in federal regulations for the licensing of amateur radio hobbyists. That is very important to his IMAGE.

So true, I downloaded a copy of The ARRL Bulltin and what do you know
"visit our website at www.arrl.org.." and the ARRL IS avertising on their website, they ARE making money. So the rule should apply to them as well, but I've not once seen them get a NAL.

Hello, Jim

Well, does this mean an SSB signal with either reduced or full carrier so I can use a 9 KHz audio bandwidth (better than a 4.5 KHz bandwidth).
Audiooooooo ... ;)

Of course, one could use the 4.5 KHz (nice audio) bandwidth with double sideband, full carrier, but shift the carrier 90 degrees for interesting effects too ...

Where's my sideswiper?

ps - doesn't 10 meters run from 25 MHz to 32 MHz? Or something like that?

I seriously doubt there's an "our side" for Brian that includes
you, Markie.

And Markie...The comments were aimed squarely at Brian...Not you.
At least if Brian deceides to ignore what I said, I know he thought it over.

You're incapable of rational thought. For example, you seem to think your name is "Brian".

It does, also you being called a "red-hatted monkey" and the Jimmie be trying out as stand-up comic. Ha. Ha. Ha.

Mitzi Shore won't be selling tickets for his performance at the Comedy Store.

Tsk, Jimmie not know that aerospace and medical electronics are exempt from RoHS insofar as lead-free soldering is concerned.

Jimmie used lead-bearing solder in his "famous" Southgate
Type 7 built in 1990s. It was state-of-the-art using tubes.
No tin whiskers in HIS kludge, nossir! [has Jimmie started shaving yet? he'd better get the lead out...]

Prolly his we-we. He and Davie like to talk about johnsons.

I think Jimmie actually works as a newsgroup correspondent, paid for by a secret organization trying to make all of ham radio into some Shaker cult frozen in the past. Puritans who gave up sex and money and anything that was invented in the past century. Sort of Amish on steroids.

Jimmie decries the very "professionals" that he claims to belong to! To bad those "professionals" didn't see Jimmie coming! [maybe they did...anyone check to see if his bathroom door was open?]

I'm so glad to hear Jimmie is "serving." What's on the menu?

Does his ham taste like chicken?

As the paleontologist said, "Bone apetit!"

I'm glad I'm not a ham or CB, er, CBer(?), so I don't have to read this

I wonder if a ham or CB(er) "MUST" send in the $45 "NOW"?

Tell us, Len, what is "STRONG formal commentary"? Does formal commentary look like your derogatory comments toward Mr. Rightsell? Why is it that you couldn't use the term "formal commentary"? For what reason was the word "STRONG" used and capitalized?

I don't think so, Leonard. There is no evidence to support your statement.

Nope, I wouldn't the bottom line is Cartoons don't hurt people, People by their actions hurt people. As the Supreme Court stated "no evidence has being show that virtual porn "harms" childern." People who want child porn aren't going to go for some cartoons characters from Japan, their going to go look for the real thing. So tell me Mr. Wizard what moral right and what moral wrong?? Is the Christian faith morals right or is Islams?? or Perhaps the Jewish Morality is right, Morality is like an opinion, everyone has one. Lets me good example and perhaps you can tell me if it's right or wrong.
There these two underage kids having sex, in bed because they love eachother, Now the boy's name is Romeo and the girl's name is Juliet. Now them havig sex in bed is that "morality wrong" or perhaps you and the rest of these assholes on here would get off from buring Shakespeare plays. After people had gone and see Romeo and Juliet did they go home and encourage them to have sex? NO. Do child molesters go see Shakespeare so they can get off at the sex scene? No. What it seems to me is you put morality up there so high what we should go into book burning and banning the First Amendment because it might produce something that "YOU" and they rest of these knobs on here feel might be morally wrong. Like I stated before Morality is like an opinion, what you might think is morally wrong, to another person might not.

I call you "Steve" at least 99% of the time. I call Jim by his name more than 99% of the time. I do slip up once in a while and refer to him as Quitefine. I wonder why I do that?

Now what do you call me?

I don't beleive you. We've gone this route before. Yet I continue to call you Steve and you continue with the diminuitives.
